5 If David's nephews, Joab and Abishai, were 'too hard for him,' why did he not depose them? Because of their power with the army. But if David publicly condemned their proceedings, why did not they depose him? Because of his favour with the people. -- C.

They invited him to assume the government on the grounds (1) of his military claim, as one who had often led them to victory; and (2) of his hereditary claim, as one who had been expressly appointed by God. 8 And they 'brought the head of Ish-bosheth unto David to Hebron, and said to the king, 'Behold the head of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, thine enemy, which sought thy life; and the LORD hath avenged⁷ my lord the king this day of Saul, and of his seed.

11 How much more, when wicked men have slain a righteous person in his own house upon his bed? shall I not therefore now require his blood of your hand, and take you away from the earth?

12 And David commanded his young men, and they 'slew them, and cut off their hands and their feet, and 'hanged them up over the pool in Hebron:¹ but they took the head of Ish-bosheth, and buried it 'in the sepulchre of Abner in Hebron.

CHAPTER V.

1 The tribes come to Hebron to anoint David king over Israel. 4 David's age. 6 He taking Zion from the Jebusites, dwelleth in it. 11 Hiram sendeth to David 13 Eleven sons are born to him in Jerusalem. 17 David, directed by God, smiteth the Philistines at Baal-perazim, 22 and again at the mulberry-trees.

THEN 'came all the tribes of Israel¹ to David unto Hebron, and spake, saying, Behold, we are thy 'bone and thy flesh.

2 Also in time past, when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that 'leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the LORD 'said to thee, Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be a captain over Israel.²

3 So all the elders of Israel came to the king to Hebron; and king David 'made a 'league with them in Hebron 'before the LORD: and they 'anointed David king over Israel.

4 ¶ David was 'thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years.

5 In¹ Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months; and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years over all Israel and Judah.

mercy. God soon removes every obstacle to the fulfilment of his purpose and promise: and the most flourishing families are quickly reduced to the most weak and abject conditions. The higher men's station is the more dangerous it is: and when once they begin to fall, every pretended friend is ready to hasten forward their ruin, and make religion a pretext for their conduct. Very precarious is their life who have only wicked men for their guardians: but sinners' hands make the snares wherewith themselves are caught. And it is proper that magistrates should think the best of their opposers; and that they should punish treach-ery and murder, even when it seems calculated to promote their own interests.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 6. Except thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither. Who are 'the blind and the lame?'] Some think certain invalids whom the Jebusites had placed upon their lofty walls to express their contempt of David's assault. Others consider them the images of their gods, whom the Hebrews contemptuously called 'lame and blind,' and whom, nevertheless, the Jebusites placed on the battlements as a protection; and this opinion is countenanced by the description, 'hated of David's soul;' words supposed inapplicable to anything but idolatrous images. But though images might justly be called 'blind,' they could not be called 'lame,' as it implies some capacity of walking. We feel, therefore, compelled to adopt the first interpretation. Coverdale translates part of ver. 6 thus:--'Thou shalt not come hither, but the blind and the lame shall drive thee away;' which seems the true rendering. The word 'gutter,' in ver. 8, signifies in the original a 'sewer,' or subterraneous passage for water; and the last clause may and should be rendered, 'Because the

6 ¶ And the king and his men went to Jerusalem unto the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land; which spake unto David, saying, Except^m thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither: thinking, David cannot come in hither.

7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of Zion: the same is the city of David.

8 And David said on that day, Whosoever getteth up to the gutter, and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, he shall be chief and captain. Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house.⁴

9 So David dwelt in the fort, and called it, The city of David: and David built round about, from Millo and inward.

10 And David went on, and grew great; and the LORD God of hosts was with him.

11 ¶ And Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and cedar-trees, and carpenters, and masons;⁵ and they built David an house.

12 And David perceived that the LORD had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom for his people Israel's sake.

13 ¶ And David took him more concubines and wives out of Jerusalem, after he was come from Hebron:⁶ and there were yet sons and daughters born to David.

14 And these be the names of those that were born unto him in Jerusalem; Shammuah, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon,

15 Ibhar also, and Elishua, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

16 And Elishama, and Eliada, and Eliphalet.

17 ¶ But when the Philistines heard that they had anointed David king over Israel, all the Philistines came up to seek David;⁷ and David heard of it, and went down to the hold.

18 The Philistines also came and spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim.⁸

19 And David inquired of the LORD, saying,

EXTERIOR OF THE TOWER OF DAVID. [II. Samuel, v:9.]—"So David dwelt in the fort, and called it the City of David. And David built round about from Millo and inward." The Tower of David stands in that part of Jerusalem which he first captured, and where he lived. The present building we see is called the Hippicus of Herod, which was spared by Titus, as Josephus asserts, in order to remain as a perpetual testimony of the difficulties which the Roman conquerers overcame. It was erected by Herod and named in honor of his friend Hippicus. The present entrance is on the west side. The royal castle and palace of Herod was connected with this and other towers. The whole was very strongly fortified and fitted up with great splendor. Josephus speaks of its magnificent halls, gardens, and sculptures. Nothing is left but the base of the tower we see.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE MOSQUE EL-AKSA—A PLACE OF MOHAMMEDAN WORSHIP ON THE PREMISES, WHERE THE TEMPLE BUILT BY DAVID'S SON, SOLOMON, ONCE STOOD. [II. Samuel, vi:17.]—"And they brought in the ark of the Lord, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had pitched for it; and David offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the Lord." The Mosque el-Aksa stands upon a portion of the ground once occupied by the temple. Where the ark rested in

Jerusalem before the temple was built we do not know. In all probability the tabernacle which David pitched in Jerusalem was upon the same ground upon which Solomon afterwards built the temple. This is very probable, because this part of Jerusalem, containing thirty-five acres of land, has, as far as we know, in all ages been reserved for purposes of worship. It seems very reasonable, then, to conclude that the tabernacle David pitched for the ark rested upon the same premises we now behold represented in this picture.

the ark of God; and Ahio went before the ark.

5 And David, and all the house of Israel, played before the LORD on all manner of instruments made of fir-wood; even on harps, and on psalteries, and on timbrels, and on cornets, and on cymbals.

6 ¶ And when they came to Nachon's thrashing-floor, Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it; for the oxen shook ^{it}.

7 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzzah; and God smote him there for his error; and there he died by the ark of God.

8 And David was displeased, because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzzah: and he called the name of the place Perez-uzzah to this day.

9 And David was afraid of the LORD that day, and said, How shall the ark of the LORD come to me?

10 So David would not remove the ark of the LORD unto him into the city of David; but David carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.

11 And the ark of the LORD continued in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months: and the LORD blessed Obed-edom, and all his household.

12 ¶ And it was told king David, saying, The LORD hath blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God. So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom, into the city of David with gladness.

13 And it was so, that, when they that bare the ark of the LORD had gone six paces, he sacrificed oxen and fatlings.

14 And David danced before the LORD with all his might; and David was girded with a linen ephod.

15 So David and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the LORD with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet.

16 And as the ark of the LORD came into the city of David, Michal, Saul's daughter, looked through a window, and saw king David leaping and dancing before the LORD; and she despised him in her heart.

5 Nathan spoke according to his own judgment. He drew his conclusion from David's divine call to the kingdom, the evident prosperity that God had bestowed upon him, and the goodness of the object proposed. But God, who judges not as men judge, directs the prophet to countermand his own order.—N.B. It is not enough to meet well in what we propose for God's cause and honour, we must take care that the plan, the time, and the agency are such as God approves. Be how many these be known, if there be no prophet to receive and deliver the mind of God? Search the Scriptures, pray for the Spirit, and wait upon Providence.—

6 1 Ch. 17. 3. Nu. 12. 6. Am. 3. 7. Ps. 25. 14. He. 1. 1. Je. 23. 28.

17 ¶ And they brought in the ark of the LORD, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had pitched for it: and David offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings before the LORD.

18 And as soon as David had made an end of offering burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the LORD of hosts.

19 And he dealt among all the people, even among the whole multitude of Israel, as well to the women as men, to every one a cake of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine. So all the people departed every one to his house.

20 ¶ Then David returned to bless his household. And Michal, the daughter of Saul, came out to meet David, and said, How glorious was the king of Israel to-day, who uncovered himself to-day in the eyes of the handmaids of his servants, as one of the vain fellows shamelessly uncovereth himself!

21 And David said unto Michal, It was before the LORD, which chose me before thy father, and before all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the LORD, over Israel: therefore will I play before the LORD.

22 And I will yet be more vile than thus, and will be base in mine own sight; and of the maid-servants which thou hast spoken of, of them shall I be had in honour.

23 Therefore Michal, the daughter of Saul, had no child unto the day of her death.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Nathan, first approving the purpose of David to build God an house, 4 afterward by the word of God forbiddeth it. 12 He promiseth him benefits and blessings in his seed. 18 David's prayer and thanksgiving.

AND it came to pass, when the king sat in his house, and the LORD had given him rest round about from all his enemies,

2 That the king said unto Nathan the prophet, See now, I dwell in an house of cedar, but the ark of God dwelleth within curtains.

3 And Nathan said to the king, Go, do all that is in thine heart; for the LORD is with thee.

4 ¶ And it came to pass that night, that the word of the LORD came unto Nathan, saying,

5 Go and tell my servant David, Thus saith are never in greater danger of ruinous mistakes than in dealing with God. How apt are the best to be displeased with God's judgments rather than with their own sins which procured them! The awful strokes of Providence should move us to repentance and heedfulness, but never terrify us from our duty. None ever lost by their fidelity and kindness to God and his ordinances. It is a happiness to be in the family or place where God is duly respected. Duty may happily succeed at last, though our first attempts have been marred. Let us therefore search out and repent of our errors, apply Jesus' propitiatory sacrifice for remission of sins, feast on him as our provision, and set about it anew with proper circumspection. Only base minds reckon God's service mean or indecent; and ridicule, not reason, is the common weapon of the enemies of truth. But we must not be laughed out of our religious profession; but the more opposition we meet with the more resolutely persevere. If God knows our heart to be upright before him, the censures of others may lie light upon us. We can never sufficiently humble ourselves before him. And if in our service of him we have the regard of good men, we need not fear the contempt of the irreligious or the great. While God shall mark the despisers of his service with infamy and wrath, we shall be had in glory and honour.

But let me here think of that solemn joy and triumph wherewith Jesus, our great Ark of God's testament, was carried up into heaven, and set down at the right hand of God: and of that joy and triumph with which his name is carried through the world by the gospel, in the times of his love and days of his power! O then what harmony and peace in churches—what familiar feasting on his flesh and blood! And how dreadful their case who disdain to concur in that solemn work!

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTICONS.—Gracious souls are never weary of working for the Lord; nor can they with pleasure enjoy their own conveniences while his ordinances are in distress. It is good to strengthen the hands of such as have a heart to build up the church of God: but all our success depends on God's presence and assistance. Even prophets may the LORD, 'Shalt thou build me an house for me to dwell in?

6 Whereas^a I have not dwelt in any house since the time that I brought up the children of Israel out of Egypt even to this day, but have walked in a tent and in a tabernacle.

7 In all the places wherein I have walked with all the children of Israel, spake I a word with any of the tribes of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people Israel, saying, Why build ye not me an house of cedar?

8 Now therefore so shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, I took thee from the sheep-cote, from following the sheep, to be ruler over my people, over Israel:

9 And I was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, and have cut off all thine enemies out of thy sight, and have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great men that are in the earth.

10 (Moreover, I will appoint^a a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime, 11 And as since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel, and have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies.) Also the LORD telleth thee, that he will make thee an house.

12 ¶ And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers,^a I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom.

13 He^a shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever.

14 I^a will be his father, and he shall be my son. If^a he commit iniquity,^a I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men:

15 But my mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee.

16 And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever.

17 According^a to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

18 ¶ Then went king David in, and sat before the LORD, and he said, Who am I, O

LORD God? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?^a 19 And this was yet a small thing in thy sight, O LORD God; but thou hast spoken also of thy servant's house for a great while to come: and is this the manner^a of man, O LORD God?

20 And what can David say more unto thee? for thou, LORD God, knowest thy servant.

21 For^a thy word's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou done all these great things, to make thy servant know them.

22 Wherefore thou art great, O LORD God: for there is none like thee, neither is there any God besides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

23 And what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God went to redeem for a people to himself, and to make him a name, and to do for you great things and terrible, for thy land, before thy people, which thou redeemedst to thee from Egypt, from the nations and their gods?

24 For thou hast confirmed to thyself thy people Israel, to be a people unto thee for ever; and thou, LORD, art become their God.

25 And now, O LORD God, the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, establish it for ever, and do as thou hast said.

26 And let thy name be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God over Israel: and let the house of thy servant David be established before thee.

27 For thou, O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, hast revealed to thy servant, saying, I will build thee an house; therefore hath thy servant found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee.

28 And now, O LORD God, thou art that God, and thy words be true, and thou hast promised this goodness unto thy servant:

29 Therefore now let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may continue for ever before thee: for thou, O LORD God, hast spoken it; and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be blessed for ever.¹

CHAPTER VIII.

1 David subdueth the Philistines, and maketh the Moabites tributary. 3 He smiteth Hadadezer and the Syrians. 9 Toi sendeth his son with presents to bless him. 11 The presents and the spoil David dedicateth to God. 14 He putteth garrisons in Edom. 16 A list of his principal officers.

AND after^a this it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them.

be too rash: they are no further infallible than as inspired by the Holy Ghost. God may approve a work, and yet not the doing of it by a particular person. Nay, he may accept his purpose, and yet not allow him to execute it. All true honour and happiness come from God. Yet the good purposes of ministers, magistrates, and parents sometimes entail upon churches, nations, and families the most remarkable mercies. But how great things God hath laid up for them that fear him! how abundant, free, tender, and lasting are the blessings of his promise! Yea, pleasant, fervent, and successful are those supplications now, which are animated by and do reduplicate upon the promises of God impressed on our heart; particularly those respecting Jesus Christ and his grace. Let us then boldly ask what God hath promised. Let us never stagger at the greatness of the mercy, but pray in faith, nothing doubting. Let it be our constant desire that God in all things may be glorified. If we find in our hearts to pray, God will not fail to hear and answer.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 1. It appears from a consideration of the passage that the word Meleg-ammah is not a proper name, but a descriptive epithet. It is not found in any part of the Bible, nor in any ancient writer. The parallel passage in 1 Ch. 17. 1 is, in He-and David took ¹Metheg-ammah¹ out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And he smote Moab, and measured them with a line, casting them down to the ground; even² with two lines measured he to put to death, and with one full line to keep alive: and so the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts.

3 ¶ David smote² also Hadadezer, the son of Rehob, king of Zoah, as he⁴ went to recover his border at the river Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and seven hundred⁵ horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: and David thoughted all the chariot-horses, but reserved of them for an hundred chariots.

5 And when the Syrians⁶ of Damascus came to succour Hadadezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then David put garrisons in Syria of Damascus; and the Syrians became servants to David, and brought gifts. And the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadadezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 And from Bethah, and from Berothai, cities of Hadadezer, king David took exceeding much brass.

9 ¶ When Toi king of Hamath heard that David had smitten all the host of Hadadezer,

10 Then Toi sent Joram his son unto king David to salute him, and to bless him, because he had fought against Hadadezer, and smitten him: (for Hadadezer had wars⁷ with Toi:) and Joram brought with him⁸ vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and vessels of brass;

11 Which⁹ also king David did dedicate unto the Lord, with the silver and gold that he had dedicated of all nations which he subdued;

AND David said, Is there yet any that is left of the house of Saul, that I may show him kindness for Jonathan's sake?¹

2 And there was of the house of Saul a servant, whose name was Ziba: and when they had called him unto David, the king said unto him, Art thou Ziba? And he said, Thy servant is he.

3 And the king said, Is there not yet any of the house of Saul, that I may show the kindness of God² unto him? And Ziba said unto the king, Jonathan hath yet a son, which is lame on his feet.

brew, word for word as here, except that instead of Metheg-ammah, it has 'Gath and her daughters.' The word metheg signifies 'bridle,' and ammah 'mother,' which in eastern idiom is often applied to a metropolis. Hence the word Metheg-ammah may mean 'the bridle (i.e. the command or government) of the metropolis.' Thus interpreted the parallel passages are identical in meaning. Gath was the metropolis of Philistia. When David took 'Gath and her daughters,' he took the government of the metropolis of the Philistines. P.]

Ver. 2. [With one full line to keep alive. Some interpreters think, that according to an asserted oriental custom, David caused his prisoners to be cast on the ground; and, as a summary form of judgment, divided them by lines for life or death. Others conceive the passage to mean that he divided the territory of Moab by three geographical lines or marches—from two of which the inhabitants were to be extirpated, while within the other, called a full line, they were to be preserved. This sentence of David has been censured as severe; but that can be determined only by those who can prove the innocence of the convicts. A community of robbers, manstealers, murderers, or pirates—any community such as the Thugs of India, may as righteously be exterminated as one single individual, Ge.9.6. C.]

Ver. 3. [Zobah was one of the provinces of Aram; it embraced the country lying between the kingdom of Hamath on the north, Damascus on the south, and the Euphrates on the east. It seems to me probable that the city of Zobah stood upon the site of the classic Emesa, now Hums; and that during the reign of the Seleucidae the ancient name was forgotten. P.]

Ver. 13. [There appears to be a slight error in the Hebrew text here. The valley of Salt was in the Arabah, near the southern shore of the Dead Sea, where there is a remarkable range of salt hills. Syria or Aram was far distant, at the extreme north of Palestine. The parallel passage in 1 Ch. 18. 12 enables us to detect and correct the error: 'Moreover, Abishai slew of the Edomites in the valley of Salt eighteen thousand.' The words Aram and Edom closely resemble each other, in Hebrew; and the context, as well as the parallel passage, shows that this verse should be:—'when he returned from smiting Edom in the valley of Salt, eighteen thousand.' P.]

Ver. 17. [A natural and easy solution of these names is, that Abiathar the high-priest, the son of Ahimelech, had also a son named Ahimelech, as it is by no means rare for grandfather and grandson to have the same name; and farther, that this Ahimelech performed the duties of high-priest in conjunction with his father, who was still living at the commencement of Solomon's reign. P.]

Ver. 18. [Cherethites and the Pelethites. The king's body-guard: but who were they? The title of Chereth- ites is applied to certain Philistines, 1 Sa. 30. 14; Eze. 25. 16; Zep. 2. 5; hence some conclude they were, by birth, Philistines, enlisted into David's army. Others consider them to be those Israelites who, having adhered to David when he sojourned in Philistia, took this distinctive title to mark their early and well-tried loyalty. The Pelethites some derive from Peleth, mentioned ch. 12. 2 as one of David's principal officers. The Jewish Targum calls them 'archers and slingers;' Gesenius 'headmen' and 'couriers;' and these several explanations may all be true, as the duties assigned are not incompatible. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Faithful is he who hath promised. Now, after many ages, he put Israel into the full enjoyment of all their promised territory, from the river of Egypt on the south-west to the Euphrates on the north-east. No mighty nations or powerful corruptions can withstand when God's time of humbling them arrives. The awful threatenings denounced against them take fast hold on them; and the more they have oppressed the people of God the worse fate may they expect. While the associated enemies of the church are broken in pieces, those armies are safe with whom the Lord goes out to the battle. In all wars the glory of God ought to be our principal end; and to him our whole success ought to be ascribed. Wars abroad ought never to hinder mildness, good order, and equity at home. And such as have been faithful

ROAD FROM BEYROUT TO DAMASCUS—IN KING DAVID'S DOMINIONS. [II. Samuel, viii:8.]—"And from Betah, and from Berothai, cities of Hadadezer, King David took exceeding much brass." Dr. William M. Thompson thinks that the Berothai of II. Samuel, viii:8, is possibly Beyrout. This he supposes because Hadadezer was either King of Damascus or in close alliance with it, and thus that Beyrout may have been the seaport of Damascus as it is to-day, and that after David had conquered Damascus he might have crossed over Lebanon to her seaport where he collected exceeding much brass. The view we give above is on the road between Beyrout and Damascus. We get a view of a little spur of the Lebanon mountains of which Isaiah speaks as follows: "Lebanon is ashamed and hewn down." "The high ones of stature shall be hewn down." "Lebanon shall fall by a mighty one." (Isaiah xxxiii:9; x:33, 34.) And of which Ezekiel speaks as follows: "Upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen." —(Ezekiel, xxxi:12.)

4 And the king said unto him, Where is he? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he is in the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel, in Lo-debar.³

5 ¶ Then king David sent and fetched him out of the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel, from Lo-debar.

6 Now when Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, was come unto David, he fell on his face,⁴ and did reverence. And David said, Mephibosheth! And he answered, Behold thy servant!

7 ¶ And David said unto him, Fear not; for I will surely show thee kindness for Jonathan thy father's sake, and will restore thee all the land of Saul thy father; and thou shalt eat bread at my table continually.

8 And he bowed himself, and said, What is thy servant, that thou shouldest look upon such a dead dog as I am?

9 ¶ Then the king called to Ziba, Saul's servant, and said unto him, I have given unto thy master's son all that pertained to Saul, and to all his house.

10 Thou therefore, and thy sons, and thy servants, shall till the land for him, and thou shalt bring in the fruits, that thy master's son may have food to eat;⁵ but Mephibosheth thy master's son shall eat bread always at my table.⁶ Now Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty servants.

11 Then said Ziba unto the king, According to all that my lord the king hath commanded his servant, so shall thy servant do. As for Mephibosheth, said the king, he shall eat at my table, as one of the king's sons.

12 And Mephibosheth had a young son, whose name was Micah: and all that dwelt in the house⁷ of Ziba were servants unto Mephibosheth.

13 So Mephibosheth dwelt in Jerusalem: for he did eat continually at the king's table; and was lame on both his feet.

to comfort him by the hand of his servants for his father. And David's servants came into the land of the children of Ammon.

3 And the princes of the children of Ammon said unto Hanun their lord, Thinkest thou that David² doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee to search the city, and to spy it out, and to overthrow it?

4 Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and shaved off the one half of their beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, even to their buttocks, and sent them away.

5 When they told it unto David, he sent to meet them, because the men were greatly ashamed: and the king said, Tarry at Jericho⁴ until your beards be grown, and then return.

6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they stank before David, the children of Ammon sent and hired the Syrians of Beth-rehob, and the Syrians of Zoba, twenty thousand footmen, and of king Maacah⁵ a thousand men, and of Ish-tob twelve thousand men.

7 And when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.

8 And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array at the entering in of the gate: and the Syrians of Zoba, and of Rehob, and Ish-tob, and Maacah, were by themselves in the field.⁶

9 When Joab saw that the front of the battle was against him before and behind,⁷ he chose of all the choice men of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians:

10 And the rest of the people he delivered into the hand of Abishai his brother, that he might put them in array against the children of Ammon.

11 And he said, If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me; but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will come and help thee.

12 Be^m of good courage, and let us play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God; and the Lord do that which seemeth him good.⁸

13 And Joab drew nigh, and the people that were with him, unto the battle against the Syrians; and they fled before him.

14 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they also before Abishai, and entered into the city. So friends in adversity deserve preferment in prosperity. But, lo! when God has a temple to build, how he brings under such as would incline to oppose it, and provides for its expense!

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—How quickly sin nearly extirpates the most flourishing families! How often good men, amidst the hurry of business, are too long forgetful of their former friends! But we should not only be ready to do good to such as need, but even sec. out opportunities, and inquire after proper objects.

Yea, we should be peculiarly earnest in showing kindness to such as have injured us, or to such as have befriended us in our distress. Nor should our kindness die with our friends, but extend to their relations and posterity. Advancement to high stations should make us remember poor friends and poor objects with more readiness and tender care. Unexpected favours ought to be received with the warmest gratitude, and the most self-denying humility of mind and behaviour. Honours sit most gloriously on the most humble and modest. But how amazing is it that, for Jesus' sake, God should seek out us deformed sinners of mankind, restore to us our eternal inheritance, and appoint us to feast continually on, and with, Jesus at his table!

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS.—It is good to return a kindness even to the wicked, and to mourn with the afflicted. Wicked princes are ordinarily attended by wicked flatterers. Base minds are always the most suspicious; and evil suspicions hurry men into the most rash and ruinous conduct. It is exceedingly criminal to violate the person of an ambassador. But Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem.

15 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were smitten before Israel, they gathered themselves together.

16 And Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond the river; and they came to Helam: and Shobach, the captain of the host of Hadarezer, went before them.

17 And when it was told David, he gathered all Israel together, and passed over Jordan, and came to Helam: and the Syrians set themselves in array against David, and fought with him.

18 And the Syrians fled before Israel; and David slew the men of seven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand horsemen, and smote Shobach, the captain of their host, who died there.

19 And when all the kings that were servants to Hadarezer saw that they were smitten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and served them. So the Syrians feared to help the children of Ammon any more.

CHAPTER XI.

1 While Joab besieged Rabbah, 2 David committeth adultery with Bathsheba. 6 Uriah, sent for by David to cover the adultery, cometh to David, but refuseth to go down to his house. 14 He carrieth to Joab the letter of his death. 18 Joab sendeth the news thereof to David. 26 David taketh Bathsheba to wife.

AND it came to pass, after the year was expired, at the time when kings go forth to battle, that David sent Joab, and his servants with him, and all Israel; and they destroyed the children of Ammon, and besieged Rabbah: but David tarried still at Jerusalem.

2 ¶ And it came to pass in an evening-tide, that David arose from off his bed, and walked upon the roof of the king's house: and from the roof he saw a woman washing herself; and the woman was very beautiful to look upon.

3 And David sent and inquired after the woman. And one said, Is not this Bathsheba, the daughter of Eliam, the wife of Uriah the Hittite?

4 And David sent messengers, and took her: and she came in unto him, and he lay with her; (for she was purified from her uncleanness;) and she returned unto her house.

5 ¶ And the woman conceived, and sent and told David, and said, I am with child.

6 And David sent to Joab, saying, Send me Uriah the Hittite. And Joab sent Uriah to David.

7 And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered.

8 And David said to Uriah, Go down to thy house, and wash thy feet. And Uriah departed out of the king's house, and there followed him a mess of meat from the king.

9 But Uriah slept at the door of the king's house with all the servants of his lord, and went not down to his house.

10 And when they had told David, saying, Uriah went not down unto his house, David said unto Uriah, Camest thou not from thy journey? why then didst thou not go down unto thine house?

11 And Uriah said unto David, The ark, and Israel, and Judah, abide in tents; and my lord Joab, and the servants of my lord, are encamped in the open fields; shall I then go into mine house, to eat and to drink, and to lie with my wife? As thou livest, and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing.

12 And David said to Uriah, Tarry here to-day also, and to-morrow I will let thee depart. So Uriah abode in Jerusalem that day, and the morrow.

13 And when David had called him, he did eat and drink before him; and he made him drunk: and at even he went out to lie on his bed with the servants of his lord, but went not down to his house.

14 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, that David wrote a letter to Joab, and sent it by the hand of Uriah.

15 And he wrote in the letter, saying, Set ye Uriah in the forefront of the hottest battle, and retire ye from him, that he may be smitten, and die.

little pleasure, profit, or honour must be expected from courting or complimenting the inveterate enemies of God and his people. Calumny often drives men into obscurity; but patience will gradually wear off the reproach. War had need to be made with good advice. No numbers will be found able to support those who fight against God. Nor is it unwieldy strength, but a prudent disposition and application of forces, that in battle usually prevails. Great dangers call for the greater fortitude. Love of God, and of their country, makes the bravest soldiers. Mutual assistance is a duty incumbent in every difficulty; and dependence upon God, in the use of the means, is the sure way to be crowned with success. What a mercy is it that inclement winters interrupt the grievous trade of war, and force the combatants to an unwilling rest! But sinners, by their obstinate opposition to Christ and his cause, often bring upon themselves redoubled destruction. It is happy if they submit before they are totally ruined. Meanwhile, let mankind beware of abusing Jesus' ministers and messages of grace; for the righteous judgment of Almighty God awaits such wickedness as its just reward.

CHAPTER XI. REFLECTIONS.—Lord, what is man when left to himself! On this side the grave no man is secure from presumptuous sin. The lusts of the flesh are most powerful and deceitful evils, and the last to be subdued; and such as make provision for the flesh, by sloth and sensuality, are prepared for every temptation. When we are out of God's way of duty, we cannot expect his protection. If our eyes be suffered to wander, our hearts and feet will soon follow. To indulge sinful lusts is but to increase its cravings. And a heart given up to lewdness will sacrifice honour, interest, friends, nay, God himself, to the idol of its hateful passions. Often it requires double care to conceal sin than what would have been necessary to prevent it. One sin ordinarily requires another to hide it. And such as have defiled their neighbour's bed will not stick to destroy his soul by drunkenness, or even his life by the sword. When sin has hardened the heart, the strongest warnings of providence are disregarded. When the devil has once got a soul before the wind of his temptations, he can drive it to the very brink of hell—to deliberate malice and murder. God, however highly displeased, may permit men for a time to prosper in their wickedness, till their particular branches of guilt have become almost innumerable. But stand still, my soul, and tremble to behold the man according to God's heart, the royal deputy of Heaven—negligent in business, indulgent of sloth, wandering in eye, and lustful in heart; in old age debauching a lady of good reputation, and the wife of a faithful hero; labouring to impose a spurious issue upon an injured friend; robbing his faithful servant of his senses by drink, to promote the base design; deliberately contriving murder, and making the intended victim the bearer of the murderous mandate; using Uriah's fidelity and valour as the means of his ruin.

16 And it came to pass, when Joab observed the city, that ¹he assigned Uriah unto a place where he knew that valiant men were.

17 And the men of the city went out and fought with Joab: and there fell some of the people of the servants of David; and Uriah the Hittite⁴ died also.

18 ¶ Then Joab sent and told David all the things concerning the war;

19 And charged the messenger, saying, When thou hast made an end of telling⁵ the matters of the war unto the king,

20 And if so be that the king's ⁶wrath⁶ arise, and he say unto thee, Wherefore approached ye so nigh unto the city when ye did fight? knew ye not that they would shoot from the wall?

21 Who smote ⁷Abimelech the son of Jerubesheth? did not a woman cast a piece of a millstone upon him from the wall, that he died in Thebez⁷? why went ye nigh the wall? then say thou, Thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

22 ¶ So the messenger went, and came and showed David all that Joab had sent him for.

23 And the messenger said unto David, Surely the men prevailed against us, and came out unto us into the field, and we were upon them even unto the entering of the gate.

24 And the shooters shot from off the wall upon thy servants; and some of the king's servants be dead, and thy servant⁸ Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

25 Then David said unto the messenger, Thus shalt thou say unto Joab, Let not this thing displease⁹ thee; for ¹⁰the sword devoureth one as well as another: ¹¹make thy battle more strong against the city, and overthrow it; and encourage thou him.

26 ¶ And when the wife of Uriah heard that Uriah her husband was dead, she mourned¹ for her husband.

27 And when the mourning was past, David sent and ²fetched her to his house, and she became his wife,² and bare him a son. But the thing that David had done ³displeased the LORD.³

CHAPTER XII.

¹ Nathan's parable of the ewe-lamb causeth David to be his own judge. ⁷ David, reproved by Nathan, confesseth his sin, and is pardoned. ¹⁵ The new-born child being stricken of God, David mourneth and prayeth for him while living. ²⁴ Solomon is born, and named Jedidiah. ²⁶ David taketh Rabbah, and tortureth the people thereof.

AND the LORD ¹sent Nathan unto David: and he came unto him, and ²said unto him, There were two men in one city, the one rich, and the other poor.¹

involving Joab, and the deserters of their post, and the Ammonites, as partners in his guilt: and, in fine, charging his murder on the providence of God! Oh! what fearful depths of corruption must be in my heart! How astonishing is it that Jesus and his Spirit should dwell in so polluted a residence! How much am I indebted to God for his restraining grace! Let me then daily commit the keeping of my soul to God; and, if overtaken in a fault, immediately apply to Jesus Christ for repentance and forgiveness of my sins.

2 The rich man had ¹exceeding many flocks and herds;

3 But the poor man had nothing, save ²one little ewe-lamb,¹ which he had bought, and nourished up; and it grew up together with him, and with his children: it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter.

4 And there came a ³traveller unto the rich man; and he spared to take of his own flock, and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him; but ⁴took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.²

5 And ⁵David's anger was greatly kindled against the man: and he said to Nathan, As the LORD liveth, the man that hath done this ⁶thing ⁷shall surely³ die.⁴

6 And he shall ⁸restore the lamb fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity.

7 ¶ And Nathan said to David, ⁹Thou art the man. Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, ¹⁰I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul;

8 And I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives⁵ into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if ¹¹that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things.

9 Wherefore hast thou ¹²despised the commandment of the LORD, to do evil in his sight? thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to ¹³be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

10 Now therefore ¹⁴the sword shall never depart from thine house; because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife.

11 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, ¹⁵I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house;⁶ and I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give ¹⁶them unto thy neighbour, and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun.

12 For thou didst ¹⁷it secretly: but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun.

13 And David said unto Nathan, ¹⁸I have sinned against the LORD.⁷ And Nathan said unto David, ¹⁹The LORD also hath put ²⁰away thy sin; thou shalt not die.⁹

14 Howbeit, because by this deed ²¹thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the LORD to blaspheme, the child also ²²that is born unto thee shall surely die.

could not arise from the idea that he should die too—a consideration unworthy of such a man; but from a firm persuasion that his child was gone to glory, and that he should meet him there: and so it affords us the surest consolation under the death of infants.

Ver. 30. [King's crown from off his head, the weight

15 ¶ And Nathan departed unto his house: and the LORD ¹struck the child that Uriah's wife bare unto David, and it was very sick.

16 David therefore besought God for the child; and David fasted,¹ and went in and lay all night upon the earth.²

17 And the elders³ of his house arose, and went to him, to raise him up from the earth: but he would not, neither did he eat bread with them.

18 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that the child died. And the servants of David feared to tell him that the child was dead; for they said, Behold, while the child was yet alive, we spake unto him, and he would not hearken unto our voice; how will he then vex⁴ himself, if we tell him that the child is dead?

19 But when David saw that his servants whispered, David perceived that the child was dead: therefore David said unto his servants, Is the child dead? And they said, He is dead.

20 Then David ⁵arose from the earth, and washed, and anointed himself, and changed his apparel, and came into the house of the LORD, and worshipped:⁵ then he came to his own house; and, when he required, they set bread before him, and he did eat.

21 Then said his servants unto him, What thing is this that thou hast done? thou didst fast and wept for the child, while it was alive; but when the child was dead, thou didst rise and eat bread.

22 And he said, While the child was yet alive, I fasted and wept: for I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live?

23 But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me.⁶

whereof was a talent of gold. According to the common calculation of the talent, this would give 125 lbs., a weight that no man could bear. Whiston, however, calculates the talent here mentioned at 7 lbs., which would give a weight that might be borne. Others think that value and not weight is indicated; this would make the crown worth about £6000. Others suppose it to be the crown, not of 'their king,' but of the idol of the Ammonites, called Milcom. The most probable opinion is that the weight was according to the first calculation—for if not so remarkably great, why should it be so particularly noticed?—and that it was not worn on, but suspended over the head, of which fact ancient history furnishes many examples, and Sir W. Ouseley mentions it as still subsisting in Persia. C.]

Ver. 31. [Put them under saws. Not that he so cruelly punished as our translation conveys; but that he put them to work with saws, and harrows, and axes, and to make brick, as the original Hebrew will bear. The objection that may be urged against this sense, from the expression 'cut' in 1 Ch. 20. 3, has been clearly removed by Kennicott. C.—It ought not to be forgotten that in executing these punishments on the Ammonites, David was chastising them for their own horrid cruelties. According to 1 Sa. xi. their king would only make peace with the inhabitants of Jabesh on condition that their right eyes should be put out. And we read in Am. 1. 13, that they 'ripped up the women with child of Gilead, that they might enlarge their border.' It is clear from these statements that the Ammonites had attempted by the most horrid cruelties to exterminate the Israelites. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is dreadful to behold noted saints continue long impenitent in their sins: and prudent reproof is always necessary, especially for great transgressors; and when wisely administered, it is doubly effectual. Every wife has a right to her husband's most endeared affection. Multiplying of wives never cures concupiscence, but inflames it. Great sinners are often most severe in their censures of others.

It is now called Aman, and is situated on the banks of the Moiet, which rises in a pond on the south-west of the town. C.—Rabbah, or Rabbath-Ammon, called by the Greeks Philadelphia, stood on one of the upper tributaries of the Jabbok, about 85 miles east of the Jordan. It is now deserted. The ruins lie in a dreary valley, on both sides of a little stream which in winter becomes a torrent. The source of the stream is a short distance to the west, and the water flows eastward. Another valley comes in from the north, and on its eastern side, at the point of junction, stands an isolated steep hill, on the top of which is the citadel, a fortress of great extent and strength. Joab in his first attack took 'the city of the waters,' i.e. the lower town, which lay on the banks of the stream. But the citadel held out. 27 And Joab sent messengers to David, and said, I have fought against Rabbah,³ and have taken the city of ⁴waters.⁵

28 Now therefore gather the rest of the people together, and encamp against the city, and take it; lest I take the city, and it be called after my name.⁶

29 And David gathered all the people together, and went to Rabbah, and fought against it, and took it.

30 And he ⁷took their king's crown from off his head, (the ⁸weight whereof was a talent of gold with the precious stones,) and it was set on David's head: and he brought forth the spoil of the city in great abundance.⁷

31 And he brought forth the people that were therein, and put them under saws, and under harrows of iron, and under axes of iron, and made them pass through the ⁹brick-kiln:⁸ and thus did he unto all the cities of the children of Ammon. So David and all the people returned unto Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Amnon loving Tamar, by Jonadab's counsel feigning himself sick, ravisheth her. 15 He hateth her, and shamefully turneth her out of his house. 19 Absalom entertaineth her, and concealeth his purpose. 23 At a sheep-shearing, among all the king's sons, he killeth Amnon. 30 David grieving at the news is comforted by Jonadab. 37 Absalom fleeth to Talmai at Geshur.

AND it came to pass after this, that ¹Absalom the son of David had ²a fair sister, whose name was Tamar; and Amnon the son of David loved her.

2 And Amnon was so ³vexed, that he fell sick for his sister Tamar; for she was a virgin: and Amnon thought it hard for him to do any thing to her.¹

3 But Amnon had ⁴a friend, whose name was Jonadab, the son of Shimeah, David's brother: and Jonadab was a very ⁵subtile man.

4 And he said unto him, Why art thou, being the king's son, lean² from day to ³day? wilt thou not tell me³ And Amnon said unto him, I love Tamar, my brother Absalom's sister.

Reprovers ought to deal plainly and closely with the consciences of sinners, and lay before them the aggravating circumstances of their guilt; for unbelief is the great source of all our wickedness. They must pay dear for their lusts who dare indulge them. The only way to escape the judgment which we have deserved, is by returning to God, through Jesus Christ, with humble acknowledgment of our guilt. Nothing causes more reproach to God, and his cause, than the scandalous falls of professors: especially of eminent saints, high stationed in church or state. And God will make those sins bitter to his people at last, in which they sought lasting pleasure, even though others should seem to escape unpunished. Yea, God sometimes quickly marks his people's sin in their punishment; and often children are afflicted in their parents' punishment. The sickness of our relations demands our earnest wrestlings with God on their behalf; and none more than that of distressed children, who cannot pray for themselves. We brought them into the world heirs of

PANORAMA OF JERUSALEM—AS SEEN FROM THE TOP OF THE MOUNT OF OLIVES. [II. Samuel, xii:31.]—"So David and all the people returned unto Jerusalem." We are looking toward the Holy City now from the top of the Mount of Olives. Between where we stand and Jerusalem is the valley of Jehoshaphat. To the extreme left is a cluster of minarets with a small dome. This is the tomb of David on Mount Zion. To the north of it is Zion's Gate. Coming eastward nearer to our point of view, almost at the bottom of the valley, you see the pillar of Absalom. The road passing it leads to Bethany. On the hillside near the Jerusalem wall is the Moslem cemetery. To the west of the extreme right of the picture is the tower of David near the Jaffa Gate. No other city on earth has had a history so interesting. More pilgrimages are perhaps made to it to-day than in any former period. This is the city of David.

5 And Jonadab said unto him, ¹Lay thee down on thy bed, and make thyself sick:⁴ and when thy father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee, let my sister Tamar come and give me meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her hand.⁵

6 ¶ So Amnon lay down, and made himself sick: and when the king was come to see him, Amnon said unto the king, I pray thee, let Tamar my sister come and make me a couple of cakes in my sight, that I may eat at her hand.

7 Then David sent home to Tamar, saying, Go now to thy brother Amnon's house, and dress him meat.

8 So Tamar went to her brother Amnon's house, and he was laid down. And she took flour,⁶ and kneaded it, and made cakes in his sight, and did bake the cakes.

9 And she took a pan, and poured them out before him; but he refused to eat. And Amnon said, Have out all men from me.⁷ And they went out every man from him.

10 And Amnon said unto Tamar, Bring the meat into the chamber, that I may eat of thine hand. And Tamar took the cakes which she had made, and brought them into the chamber to Amnon her brother.

11 And when she had brought them unto him to eat, he took hold of her, and said unto her, Come lie with me, my sister.

12 And she answered him, Nay, my brother, do not force me;⁸ for no such thing ought to be done in Israel: do not thou this folly.¹

13 And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? and as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore, I pray thee, speak unto the king: for he will not withhold me from thee.²

14 Howbeit he would not hearken unto her voice; but, being stronger than she, forced her, and lay with her.

15 ¶ Then Amnon hated her³ exceedingly; so that the hatred wherewith he hated her was greater than the love wherewith he had loved her: and Amnon said unto her, Arise, be gone.⁵

16 And she said unto him, There is no cause; this evil in sending me away⁶ is greater than the other that thou didst unto me. But he would not hearken unto her.

17 Then he called his servant that ministered unto him, and said, Put now this woman out from me, and bolt the door after her.

18 And she had a garment of divers colours upon her: for with such robes were the king's daughters that were virgins apparelled. Then his servant brought her out, and bolted the door after her.

19 ¶ And Tamar put ashes on her head, and rent her garment of divers colours that was on her, and laid her hand on her head, and went on crying.

20 And Absalom her brother said unto her, Hath Amnon thy brother been with thee? but hold now thy peace, my sister, he is thy brother; regard⁸ not this thing. So Tamar remained desolate⁹ in her brother Absalom's house.¹

21 ¶ But when king David heard of all these things, he was very wroth.

22 And Absalom spake unto his brother Amnon neither good nor bad:² for Absalom hated Amnon, because he had forced his sister Tamar.

23 ¶ And it came to pass after two full years,³ that Absalom had sheep-shearers in Baal-hazor, which is beside Ephraim:⁴ and Absalom invited all the king's sons.

24 And Absalom came to the king, and said, Behold now, thy servant hath sheep-shearers: let the king, I beseech thee, and his servants, go with thy servant.

25 And the king said to Absalom, Nay, my son, let us not all now go, lest we be chargeable unto thee. And he pressed him: howbeit he would not go, but blessed him.

28 Now Absalom had commanded his servants, saying, Mark ye now when Amnon's heart is merry with wine, and when I say unto wrath; let us labour to pluck them as brands out of the burning, and bring them to Jesus the Saviour. If we must part with them, let us do it as Christians; and let their death fill us with the most serious impressions of our own. At the same time, let us fortify our patience by the comforting consideration of this pious king: let us return them into the hand of God, assured that 'their angels do always behold the face of our Father which is in heaven,' and that 'of such is the kingdom of heaven;' and let it be our only concern that we meet them again in his presence.—Meanwhile, let us remember, that submission to God's strokes is the way to obtain the restoration of his comforts; and that he will not chide for ever, but will in wrath remember mercy.—Alas! that, while Joab was so zealous for David's honour, David, in his fondness for the heathen crown and his severity to the prisoners, should have so little consulted the honour of his God! But when men lie hardened in their lust, what evil are they not capable of committing!

CHAPTER XIII. [Ver. 38. Geshur was a small kingdom on the north-eastern border of Palestine, beyond Jordan. It appears to have been in part at least identical with the present province of Lejah, formerly called Trachonitis. The Geshurites maintained friendly relations with the Israelites east of the Jordan; probably from community of interest, both being extensive cattle-owners. The community of occupation may have led to the alliance between David and the daughter of Talmi, king of Geshur. Absalom was the fruit of this marriage; and the wild acts of his life were doubtless to some extent the results of maternal training. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Righteous, but awful, are the judgments of God; especially when he punishes sin with sin, and that remarkably similar! Children are apt to imitate their parents' sins without imitating their repentance. And near relatives should be cautious that their tender affection does not degenerate into lawless lust. How unbridled is lust when once indulged! the body often suffers through vile affections; and no station can render the man happy whose lusts rage within him. A wicked and subtle friend, who leads to or flatters in sin, is a dreadful curse. Such as harbour no ill designs themselves, are often made instruments of iniquity by the crafty sinner, as they are most unsuspecting. Deeds of filthiness seek for secrecy. It is therefore extremely dangerous for those who have youth and beauty to be alone with the wanton. But nothing can be more barbarous and foolish than, for a you, smite Amnon; then kill him, fear not: have not I commanded you?² be courageous, and be valiant.⁷

29 And the servants of Absalom did unto Amnon as Absalom had commanded: then all the king's sons arose, and every man gat⁸ him up upon his mule,⁹ and fled.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were in the way, that tidings came to David, saying, Absalom hath slain all the king's sons,¹ and there is not one of them left.

31 Then the king arose, and tare his garments, and lay on the earth; and all his servants stood by with their clothes rent.

32 ¶ And Jonadab, the son of Shimeah David's brother, answered and said, Let not my lord suppose that they have slain all the young men the king's sons; for Amnon only is dead: for by the appointment of Absalom this hath been determined from the day that he forced his sister Tamar.²

33 Now therefore let not my lord the king take the thing to his heart, to think that all the king's sons are dead; for Amnon only is dead.

34 But Absalom fled. And the young man that kept the watch lifted up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there came much people by the way of the hill-side behind him.

35 And Jonadab said unto the king, Behold, the king's sons come! as thy servant said,³ so it is.

36 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of speaking, that, behold, the king's sons came, and lifted up their voice and wept: and the king also and all his servants wept⁴ very sore.⁵

37 ¶ But Absalom fled, and went to Talmai, the son of Ammihud,⁶ king of Geshur: and David mourned for his son every day.

38 So Absalom fled, and went to Geshur, and was there three years.

39 And the soul of king David longed to go forth unto Absalom: for he was comforted concerning Amnon, seeing he was dead.

1 A city of Judah, nine miles south of Jerusalem. It was situated on a hill, and considerable ruins are described by modern travellers as still remaining. Why did Joab send to Tekoah for a wise woman? (1) He must bring a petitioner from a distance, so that she may be less suspected of collusion. (2) Tekoah was in Joab's own tribe, and he therefore culls his agent from his acquaintance. (3) He chooses her for her peculiar address and ready eloquence, which, when the words of Joab had been repeated, never forsakes her for a moment.—C.

thence^a a wise woman, and said unto her, I pray thee, feign thyself to be a mourner, and put on now mourning apparel, and anoint not thyself with oil, but be as a woman that had a long time mourned for the dead;

3 And come to the king, and speak on this manner unto him. So Joab put the words in her mouth.

4 ¶ And when the woman of Tekoah spake to the king, she fell on her face to the ground, and did obeisance, and said, Help, O king!

5 And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, I am indeed a widow woman, and mine husband is dead.²

6 And thy handmaid had two sons, and they two strove together in the field, and there was none to part them, but the one smote the other, and slew him.

7 And, behold, the whole family³ is risen against thine handmaid; and they said, Deliver him that smote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother whom he slew; and we will destroy the heir also: and so they shall quench my coal⁴ which is left, and shall not leave to my husband neither name nor remainder upon the earth.

8 And the king said unto the woman, Go to thine house, and I will give charge concerning thee.

9 And the woman of Tekoah said unto the king, My lord, O king, the iniquity be on me, and on my father's house; and the king and his throne be guiltless.

10 And the king said, Whosoever saith ought unto thee, bring him to me, and he shall not touch thee any more.

11 Then said she, I pray thee, let the king remember the LORD thy God, that thou wouldest not suffer the revengers of blood to destroy any more, lest they destroy my son. And he said, As the LORD liveth, there shall not one hair of thy son fall to the earth.⁵

12 Then the woman said, Let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak one word unto my lord the king. And he said, Say on.

13 And the woman said, Wherefore then hast thou thought such a thing against the people of God? for the king doth speak this thing as one which is faulty, in that the king doth not fetch home again his banished.⁶

14 For we must needs die, and are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again; neither doth God respect any person:

momentary gratification, to ruin a character, render a companion infamous and miserable, and rush into everlasting ruin. Yet where lust rages, men are insensible of fear or shame, and deaf to all the remonstrances of reason and religion; though the pleasures of lust are quickly turned into loathing and hatred; and nothing is reckoned too shameful or cruel to be done to the object of it. The neglect of magistrates to punish, intallibly occasions more if not worse crimes; and yet how hard for them to punish, in their children, crimes copied after their own! Revenge is often deep rooted, and masked with pretences of friendship; yea, the longer it is concealed, it often burns the more fiercely: and drunkenness remarkably exposes sinners to death, and ripens them for hell. None are more ready to imbrue their hands in our blood than our companions in luxury. What certain griefs, but uncertain comforts, are the children of the best and greatest! How kind is it to sympathize with the afflicted, and to comfort them the best way we can! and how strong is parental affection, which cannot be extinguished by the most horrid and unnatural crimes.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—Most parents are incapable of continuing due severity towards their offending children. And crafty statesmen are disposed to humour their sovereign in his sinful indulyet doth he ^adevise means,⁶ that his banished be not expelled from him.

15 Now therefore that I am come to speak of this thing unto my lord the king, it is because the people have made me afraid;⁷ and thy handmaid said, I will now speak unto the king; it may be that the king will perform the request of his handmaid.

16 For the king will hear, to deliver his handmaid out of the hand of the men that would destroy me and my son⁸ together out of the inheritance of God.

17 Then thine handmaid said, The word of my lord the king shall now be comfortable:⁹ for as an angel of God,¹ so is my lord the king, to discern good and bad; therefore the LORD thy God will be with thee.

18 Then the king answered and said unto the woman, Hide not from me, I pray thee, the thing that I shall ask thee. And the woman said, Let my lord the king now speak.

19 And the king said, Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? And the woman answered and said, As thy soul liveth, my lord the king, none can turn to the right hand or to the left from ought that my lord the king hath spoken: for thy servant Joab, he bade me, and he put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid:

20 To fetch about this form of speech hath thy servant Joab done this thing: and my lord is wise, according to the wisdom of an angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth.

21 ¶ And the king said unto Joab, Behold now, I have done this thing: go therefore, bring the young man Absalom again.

22 And Joab ^bfell to the ground on his face, and bowed himself, and ^cthanked the king: and Joab said, To-day thy servant knoweth that ^dI have found grace in thy sight, my lord, O king, in that the king hath fulfilled the request of his servant.²

23 So Joab arose and went to ^eGeshur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem.

24 And the king said, Let him turn to his own house, and let him not ^fsee my face. So Absalom returned to his own house, and saw not the king's face.

25 ¶ But^g in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty: from^h the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him.

26 And when he polled his head, (for it was at every year's endⁱ that he polled it; because the hair was heavy on him, therefore he polled it;) he weighed the hair of his head at ^jtwo hundred shekels,⁴ after the king's weight.

^h David reigned but forty years in all. This, therefore, cannot mean the fortieth of his reign. Several versions, and Josephus, read four instead of forty; but the Hebrew MSS. do not support the change. The ordinary solution of the difficulty is therefore the supposed error of some transcriber.

ⁱ This is a usual, but a most violent, gratuitous, and dangerous proceeding. Why not date from the era of David's appointment in Saul's stead, to the attempt of Absalom to supplant David?

^j This is an intelligible era. Now, David was anointed, according to Hales, one of the highest authorities in chronology, in A.M. 2301, and Absalom rebelled in 2341, which will exactly give the forty years in the text.—C.

27 ¶ And unto ^aAbsalom there were born three sons, and one daughter, whose name was Tamar: she was a woman of a fair countenance.

28 ¶ So Absalom dwelt two full years in Jerusalem, and ^bsaw not the king's face.

29 Therefore Absalom sent for Joab, to have sent him to the king; but he would not come to him: and when he sent again the second time, he would not come.

30 Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is near mine,⁵ and he hath barley there; ^cgo and set it on fire. And Absalom's servants set the field on fire.

31 Then Joab arose, and came to Absalom unto his house, and said unto him, Wherefore have thy servants set my field on fire?

32 And Absalom answered Joab, Behold, I sent unto thee, saying, Come hither, that I may send thee to the king, to say, Wherefore am I come from Geshur? it had been good for me to have been there still: now therefore let me see the king's face,⁶ and ^dif there be any iniquity in me, let him kill me.

33 So Joab came to the king, and told him: and when he had called for Absalom, he came to the king, and ^ebowed himself on his face to the ground before the king: and the king ^fkissed Absalom.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Absalom, by fair speeches and courtesies, stealeth the hearts of the men of Israel. ⁷ Under pretence of a vow he obtaineth leave to go to Hebron. 10 He maketh there a dangerous conspiracy. 13 David upon the news fleeth from Jerusalem. 19 Ittai would not leave him. 24 Zadok and Abiathar are sent back with the ark. 30 David and his company go up mount Olivet weeping. 31 He prayeth God to defeat Ahithophel's counsel. 32 Hushai is sent back with instructions.

AND it came to pass after this, that ^aAbsalom prepared him chariots and horses, and fifty men to run before him.

2 And Absalom ^brose up early, and stood beside the way of the gate: and it was so, that when any man that had a controversy came¹ to the king for judgment, then Absalom called unto him, and said, Of what city art thou? And he said, Thy servant is of one of the tribes of Israel.

3 And Absalom said unto him, See, ^cthy matters are good and right; but ^dthere is no man deputed of the king to hear thee.

4 Absalom said moreover, Oh that I were ^emade judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and ^fI would do him justice!

5 And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand, and ^gtook him, and kissed him.

6 And on this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment: so ^hAbsalom stole the hearts of the men of ⁱIsrael.

PANORAMA OF JERUSALEM—THE HOLY CITY IN WHICH DAVID LIVED SEEN FROM THE EAST. [11. Samuel, xv:14.]—"And David said unto all his servants which were with him at Jerusalem, Arise and let us flee; for we shall not else escape from Absalom." From our point of view we now move further northward, and again look across the valley of the Kedron from the Mount of Olives upon the Holy City. The swelling domes and towers and crosses of a new Russian church are at our feet. We see more tombs stretching along the eastward wall of the city to the extreme left. The Mosque of Omar, always the most conspicuous object in Jerusalem to-day, as the temple was in ancient times, stands with its enclosure of thirty-five acres of ground. There once stood the Jewish temple, and perhaps the tabernacle David pitched for the ark of the covenant before the temple was built. To the west and to the right of the mosque is the English church. This is the city from which David fled to escape from Absalom.

that Absalom said unto the king, I pray thee, let me go and pay my vow, which I have vowed unto the LORD, in Hebron.

8 For thy servant vowed a vow while I abode at Geshur in Syria, saying, If the LORD shall bring me again indeed to Jerusalem, then I^m will serve the LORD.

9 And the king said unto him, Go in peace. So he arose, and went to Hebron.

10 ¶ But Absalom sent spies throughout all the tribes of Israel, saying, As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet,⁵ then ye shall say, Absalom reigneth in Hebron.⁶

11 And with Absalom went two hundred men out of Jerusalem, that were called; and they went in their simplicity, and they knew not any thing.

12 And Absalom sent for Ahithophel the Gilonite, David's counsellor, from his city, even from Giloh,⁷ while he offered sacrifices: and the conspiracy was strong; for the people increased continually with Absalom.

13 ¶ And there came a messenger to David, saying, "The hearts of the men of Israel are after Absalom.

18 And all his servants passed on beside him; and all the Cherethites, and all the Pelethites,² and all the Gittites,³ six hundred men which came after him from Gath, passed on before the king.

19 ¶ Then said the king to Ittai the Gittite,

Wherefore goest thou also with us? return to thy place, and abide with the king: for thou art a stranger, and also an exile.

20 Whereas thou callest but yesterday, should I this day make thee go up and down⁴ with us? Seeing I go whither I may, return thou, and take back thy brethren: ⁵mercy and truth be with thee.

21 And Ittai answered the king, and said, As the LORD liveth, and as my lord the king liveth, surely in what place my lord the king shall be, whether in death or life, even there also will thy servant be.

22 And David said to Ittai, Go and pass over. And Ittai the Gittite passed over, and all his men, and all the little ones⁵ that were with him.

23 And all the country wept with a loud voice, and all the people passed over: the king also himself passed over the brook Kidron, and all the people passed over, toward the way of the wilderness.⁶

24 ¶ And lo Zadok also, and all the Levites were with him, bearing the ark of the covenant of God: and they set down the ark of God; and Abiathar went up,⁷ until all the people had done passing out of the city.

25 And the king said unto Zadok, Carry back the ark of God into the city: if I shall find favour in the eyes of the LORD, he will bring me again, and show me both it and his habitation:

26 But if he thus say, I have no delight in thee; behold, ⁸here am I, let him do to me as seemeth good unto him.⁸

27 The king said also unto Zadok the priest, Art not thou a seer? return into the city in peace, and your two sons with you, Ahimaaz thy son, and Jonathan the son of Abiathar.

28 See, I will tarry in the plain of the wilderness, until there come word from you to certify me.

29 Zadok therefore and Abiathar carried the ark of God again to Jerusalem: and they tarried there.

30 ¶ And David went up by the ascent of mount Olivet, and wept as he went up,⁹ and had his head covered,¹ and he went barefoot:

sons, and flourishing families, are to little purpose, while sin reigns in our heart, and the curse of God bovers over our head. But with what art and perseverance do wicked men pursue their carnal schemes! Often they obtain, by their insolence, what their betters could not do by their deserts, or by their earnest and modest requests.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 23. Kidron. This brook flows through a valley that lies to the east of Jerusalem, and between the city and the Mount of Olives. It is a considerable stream in winter, but mostly dry for nine months in the year. Its bed is narrow, but steep, and is crossed by a bridge of one arch. C.—The Kidron is generally termed in Scripture a 'brook,' but the Hebrew word thus translated is nakhal, and signifies a 'valley' or 'ravine,' either with or without water. The Kidron is a mountain ravine, in most places narrow, with precipitous banks; but here and there its banks have an easy slope, and along its bottom, especially north of the city, are strips of land capable of cultivation. It runs close past the east side of Jerusalem, between Mounts Moriah and Olivet. It contains the bed of a streamlet, but during the summer, and a great part of the winter, the bed is quite dry; in fact, no water flows in it except when heavy rains are falling in the mountains round Jerusalem. Below the city the Kidron runs in a winding course eastwards, through the wilderness of Judea, to the Dead Sea. P.]

Ver. 30. [Mount Olivet. So called from its olive-trees. It is situate east of Jerusalem, from which it is separated by the valley of Jehoshaphat and brook Kidron, and is distant, according to Ac. 1. 12, a Sabbath-day's journey, or something less than an English mile. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Indulged children often become the plague, if not the murderers, of parents. Young fools are fond of making a pompous figure in the world. And they who are least fit to rule are ordinarily the most ambitious of it. Zeal for the public welfare, and care to redress grievances, are the ordinary cloaks of the vilest ambition and treachery. Nor is the most upright administration able to escape the malignant aspersions of a discontented faction. But none are more apt to play the tyrant, when they have obtained power, than those who have paved their way to it by the basest condescensions. Gracious parents easily credit their children's pretences to reformation and devotion. But the vilest designs are ordinarily masked with a cloak of pretended religion: and they never want carnal prudence who have the devil to be their director. Slippery and tottering are the exalted stations and honours of this world. Our fortified abodes may soon become too weak or too hot for us, whilst and all the people that was with him covered every man his head, and they went up, weeping as they went up.

31 ¶ And one told David, saying, 'Ahitophel is among the conspirators with Absalom. And David said, O LORD, I pray thee, "turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness."

32 ¶ And it came to pass, that when David was come to the "top of the mount, where he worshipped" God,² behold, "Hushai the Archite" came to meet him with "his coat rent, and earth upon his head:

33 Unto whom David said, If thou passest on with me, then thou shalt be a burden unto me:

34 But if thou "return to the city, and say unto Absalom, I will be thy servant, O king; as I have been thy father's servant hitherto, so will I now also be thy servant: then mayest thou for me defeat the counsel of Ahithophel."

35 And hast thou not there with thee Zadok and Abiathar the priests? therefore it shall be, that what thing soever thou shalt hear out of the king's house, thou shalt tell it to Zadok and Abiathar the priests.

36 Behold, they have "there with them their two sons, Ahimaaz Zadok's son, and Jonathan Abiathar's son; and by them ye shall send unto me every thing that ye can hear."

37 So Hushai, David's "friend, came into the city, and Absalom came into Jerusalem."

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Ziba, by presents and false suggestions, obtaineth his master's inheritance. 5 At Bahurim Shimei curseth David. 9 David with patience abstaineth, and restraineth others, from revenge. 15 Hushai insinuateth himself into Absalom's counsels. 20 Ahithophel's counsel.

AND when David was a little past "the top of the hill, behold, "Ziba, the servant of Mephibosheth, met him, "with a couple of asses saddled, and upon them two hundred loaves of bread,¹ and an hundred bunches of raisins, and an hundred of summer-fruits,² and a bottle³ of wine.

2 And the king said unto Ziba, What meanest thou by these? And Ziba said, The asses be for the king's household to "ride on; and the bread and summer-fruit for the "young men our intimates, yea, almost all beside, go over to our enemy. Our severest strokes often come from hands which we least suspected: and fear of God's wrath, in our sufferings, sinks the spirits, and makes men cowards. In suffering times large families are great encumbrances: and, though terrible revolutions are great trials for young converts, yet strangers are often more faithful than our kindred and countrymen: and, the more distressful our case, they cleave to us the more resolutely. So let us, sinners of the Gentiles, cleave to David's Lord. Let neither the trials of life, nor the torments of death, separate us from him. The Lord's ministers ought to be patterns of fidelity, when others are inclined to rebel against their rightful sovereigns. It is hard for gracious persons to bear at once the stings of conscience, the base rebellion of children, and a want of the public ordinances of God: such, if any, require our deepest sympathy and fellowship in grief. Bitter grief for our sin, and resignation to God's afflictive hand, must be attended with the diligent use of proper means for our relief: but none that trust in the Lord shall perish. Often our friends, and especially our Jesus, help us most when unseen. It is not the craft of politicians, but the God of heaven, that governs the world. He can easily turn the counsels of the crafty into foolishness, and cause the traitors to be betrayed. Let us commit our way to God, and he will bring it to pass.

CHAPTER XVI. REFLECTIONS. — Many, like Ziba, affect to be very generous of what is not really their own. The lying tongues of servants, and the presents of knaves, are snares and plagues to all concerned: and carnal and selfish designs are often concealed under the most seasonable and useful presents. But listening to slander, and a rash bestowal of valuable grants, prepare work for an after-shame and bitter repentance: for surely nothing is so base as to use infirmity for an occasion of injury, or to insult and abuse the miserable. Bitter is the state when an awakened conscience, and a railing neighbour, upbraid us with our guilt, while an angry God fearfully corrects us for to eat; and the wine, that such as be faint in the wilderness may drink.

3 And the king said, And "where is thy master's son? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he abideth at Jerusalem: for "he said, 'To-day shall the house of Israel restore me the kingdom of my father.'

4 Then said the king to Ziba, Behold, "thine are all that pertained unto "Mephibosheth. And Ziba said, I humbly⁵ beseech thee that I may find grace in thy sight, my lord, O king.

5 ¶ And when king David came to "Bahurim,⁶ behold, thence came out a man of the family of the house of Saul, whose name "was Shimei, the son of Gera: he came forth, and "cursed still as he came.⁷

6 And he cast stones at David, and at all the servants of king David: and all the people, and all the mighty men, were on his right hand and on his left.

7 And thus said Shimei when he cursed, Come out, come out, thou "bloody man,⁸ and thou "man of Belial!⁹

8 The LORD hath "returned upon thee all the blood of the house of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned; and the LORD hath delivered the kingdom into the hand of Absalom thy son: and, behold, thou art taken in thy mischief,¹ because thou art a bloody man.²

9 ¶ Then said Abishai the son of Zeruiah unto the king, Why should this "dead dog curse my lord the king? "let me go over, I pray "thee, and take off his head.

10 And the king said, "What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah? "so let him curse, because the LORD hath said unto him,⁴ Curse David. "Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so?

11 And David said to Abishai, and to all his servants, Behold, my son, which came forth of my bowels, seeketh my life: how much more now may this Benjamite do it? Let him alone, and let him curse; for the LORD hath bidden him.⁵

it. Wicked revilers are fond of interpreting God's righteous judgments as a patronizing of their malice: and innocence is no protection from a malicious and lying tongue. But no provocation can warrant our revenging ourselves, and returning evil for evil. The vilest reproaches should make us to search our ways, and condemn ourselves for our real faults. To see God's hand in every trial is the way to bear it aright. Patience under reproaches will issue in our full vindication at last. And happy are they who can thus withstand the strongest temptations to revenge, when they meet with the most insolent abuse. What an easy prey are proud men to every subtle flatterer! They take all those for friends whom they would wish to be such. It is hard for crafty politicians to confine themselves to untainted veracity and candour. Nay, such will often stick at nothing, however infamous or wicked, to secure their own purposes. But let us here observe how this most abominable conduct fulfils the righteous threatenings of God. He who murdered his friend to conceal his adultery, has now ten of his concubines mine affliction, and that the LORD will requite me good for his cursing this day.

13 And as David and his men went by the way, Shimei went along on the hill's side over against him, and cursed as he went, and threw stones at him, and cast dust.⁶

14 And the king, and all the people that were with him, came weary,⁷ and refreshed themselves there.⁸

15 ¶ And Absalom, and all the people the men of Israel, came to Jerusalem, and Ahithophel with him.

16 And it came to pass, when Hushai the Archite, David's friend, was come unto Absalom, that Hushai said unto Absalom, God save the king, God save the king.⁹

17 And Absalom said to Hushai, Is this thy kindness to thy friend? why wentest thou not with thy friend?

18 And Hushai said unto Absalom, Nay; but whom the LORD, and this people, and all the men of Israel, choose, his will I be, and with him will I abide.

19 And again, whom should I serve? should I not serve in the presence of his son? As I have served in thy father's presence, so will I be in thy presence.

20 ¶ Then said Absalom to Ahithophel, Give counsel among you what we shall do.

21 And Ahithophel said unto Absalom, Go in unto thy father's concubines,¹ which he hath left to keep the house; and all Israel shall hear that thou art abhorred of thy father: then shall the hands of all that are with thee be strong.

22 So they spread Absalom a tent upon the top of the house;² and Absalom went in unto his father's concubines in the sight of all Israel.

23 And the counsel of Ahithophel, which he counselled in those days, was as if a man had inquired at the oracle³ of God: so was all the counsel of Ahithophel both with David and with Absalom.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Ahithophel's counsel is overthrown by Hushai's, according to God's appointment. 15 Secret intelligence is sent unto David. 23 Ahithophel hangeth himself. 25 Amasa is made captain. 27 David at Mahanaim is furnished with provisions.

MOREOVER Ahithophel said unto Absalom, Let me now choose out twelve thousand men,¹ and I will arise and pursue after David this night:

publicly debauched by his own son on the top of the same house where he began his crime.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 29. It is a remarkable fact that the fortress of Mahanaim, which had formerly sheltered the rival dynasty of Saul, now affords an asylum to David. "Three potentates of that pastoral district come forward at once to his support. Shobi, the son of David's ancient friend, Nahash, king of Ammon, perhaps put by David in his brother Hanun's place; Machir, the son of Ammiel, the former protector of Mephibosheth; Barzillai, an aged chief of vast wealth and influence. They brought, with the profuse liberality of Arabs, the butter, cheese, &c., with which the forests and pastures of Gilead abounded." P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Some men have large capacities for contriving or executing mischief, or for imposing on their neighbours: yea, when men are once involved in sin, they drive deeper and deeper, till the most horrid crimes become, as it were, necessary for their own safety. Dangerous is the case of those princes who have rebellious subjects and unnatural children: but vain is their counsel who aim at the ruin of God's church and people. By the most secret ways He can

2 And I will come upon him while he is weary and weak-handed, and will make him afraid: and all the people that are with him shall flee; and I will smite the king only:

3 And I will bring back all the people unto thee; the man whom thou seekest is as if all returned:² so all the people shall be in peace.

4 And the saying pleased Absalom well, and all the elders of Israel.⁴

5 Then said Absalom, Call now Hushai the Archite also, and let us hear likewise what he saith.⁵

6 And when Hushai was come to Absalom, Absalom spake unto him, saying, Ahithophel hath spoken after this manner: shall we do after his saying? if not, speak thou.

7 And Hushai said unto Absalom, The counsel that Ahithophel hath given is not good at this time.

8 For, said Hushai, thou knowest thy father and his men, that they be mighty men, and they be chafed in their minds, as a bear robbed of her whelps in the field: and thy father is a man of war, and will not lodge with the people.

9 Behold, he is hid now in some pit, or in some other place: and it will come to pass, when some of them be overthrown at the first, that whosoever heareth it will say, There is a slaughter among the people that follow Absalom.

10 And he also that is valiant, whose heart is as the heart of a lion, shall utterly melt: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is a mighty man, and they which be with him are valiant men.

11 Therefore I counsel, that all Israel be generally gathered unto thee, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, as the sand that is by the sea for multitude, and that thou go to battle in thine own person.

12 So shall we come upon him in some place where he shall be found, and we will light upon him as the dew falleth on the ground: and of him, and of all the men that are with him, there shall not be left so much as one.

13 Moreover, if he be gotten into a city, then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, and we will draw it into the river, until there be not one small stone found there.

14 And Absalom and all the men of Israel said, The counsel of Hushai the Archite is h Mark the malicious cunning of Ahithophel in this counsel. He does not say, 'I will pursue after thy father, but after David.' He does not say, 'I will smite thy father, but the king only.' How depraved must Absalom have been, when the counsel and the promise 'pleased him well.'—Note, Ambition, induced any bad passion, blinds the eye, and hardens the heart; being 'enmity against God,' it cannot see the promise towards man.—C.

1 An apt and beautiful emblem, descriptive of the sudden appearance and unexpected attack of a hostile army. The reader of history will recall the manner in which David Leslie surprised Montrose at Philiphaugh, and Napoleon the Austrians at Aosta, after crossing the Great St. Bernard. The dew in warm countries falls fast, sudden, and heavy. The Romans called their light-armed soldiers rorarii, dew-beaters.—J.

JOAB'S WELL, WHERE JONATHAN AND AHIMAAZ WAITED FOR NEWS ABOUT ABSALOM. [II. SAMUEL, xvii: 17.]—"Now Jonathan and Ahimaaz stayed by Engedi; for they might not be seen to come into the city: and a wench went and told them; and they went and told King David." This well is situated in the valley of Kedron, near where it unites with the valley of Hinnom. Here David's servants waited for news from Hushai during Absalom's rebellion in order to gather and send unto their king. Here also Adonijah, David's son, assembled his friends when he aspired to be king in his father's place. The well is 125 feet deep. It is walled up with large rocks with an arch above of great antiquity. There is a large chamber at a depth of 113 feet, from the bottom of which a shaft leads to a rock-hewn chamber below. The people of Siloam sell this water in Jerusalem.

better than the counsel of Ahithophel:^a for the LORD had appointed to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel, to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Absalom.^b 15 ¶ Then said Hushai unto Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, Thus and thus did Ahithophel counsel Absalom and the elders of Israel; and thus and thus have I counselled.

16 Now therefore send quickly, and tell David, saying, Lodge not this night in the plains of the wilderness,^c but speedily pass over; lest the king be swallowed up, and all the people that are with him.

17 Now Jonathan and Ahimaaz stayed by En-rogel;^d (for they might not be seen to come into the city:) and a wench went and told them; and they went and told king David.

18 Nevertheless a lad saw them, and told Absalom: but they went both of them away quickly, and came to a man's house in Bahurim, which had a well in his court; whither they went down.

19 And the woman took and spread a covering over the well's mouth, and spread ground corn thereon; and the thing was not known.

20 And when Absalom's servants came to the woman to the house, they said, Where is Ahimaaz and Jonathan? And the woman said unto them, They be gone over the brook of water.^e And when they had sought and could not find them, they returned to Jerusalem.

21 And it came to pass, after they were departed, that they came up out of the well, and went and told king David, and said unto David, Arise, and pass quickly over the water:^f for thus hath Ahithophel counselled against you.

22 Then David arose, and all the people that were with him, and they passed over Jordan: by the morning light there lacked not one of them that was not gone over Jordan.

23 ¶ And when Ahithophel saw that his counsel was not followed, he saddled his ass, and arose, and gat him home to his house, to his city, and put his household in order,^g and hanged himself, and died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father.

24 Then David came to Mahanaim: and Absalom passed over Jordan, he and all the men of Israel with him.

Dietionary, and other German writers, maintain that this was in the tribe of Ephraim, on the side Jordan; but English writers hold it to have been beyond Jordan, near Mahanaim. It is certain that Absalom and his army did cross the Jordan and pitch in the land of Gilead (ch. 17. 26), and as there is no mention of that river having been recrossed either by them or by David's men previous to the battle, the inference is that it was fought beyond Jordan. If we suppose that the Ephraimites, who lived on the Jordan, were in the habit of sending their cattle over the river for pasture, that circumstance might give rise to the name.—I.

26 So Israel and Absalom pitched in the land of Gilead.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when David was come to Mahanaim, that Shobi the son of Nahash of Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and Machir the son of Ammiel of Lo-debar, and Barzillai the Gileadite of Rogelim,

28 Brought² beds,³ and basons,⁴ and earthen vessels, and wheat, and barley, and flour, and parched corn, and beans, and lentiles, and parched pulse,

29 And honey, and butter, and sheep, and cheese of kine, for David, and for the people that were with him, to eat: for they said, The people is hungry, and weary, and thirsty, in the wilderness.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 David viewing the armies in their march giveth them charge of Absalom. 6 The men of Israel are sore smitten in the wood of Ephraim. 9 Absalom, hanging in an oak, is slain by Joab, and cast into a pit. 18 Absalom's place. 19 Ahimaaz and Cushi bring tidings to David. 33 David mourneth for Absalom.

AND David numbered the people that were with him, and set captains¹ of thousands and captains of hundreds over them.

2 And David sent forth a third part of the people under the hand of Joab, and a third part under the hand of Abishai the son of Zeruiah, Joab's brother, and a third part under the hand of Ittai the Gittite: and the king said unto the people, I will surely go forth with you myself also.

3 But the people answered, Thou shalt not go forth: for if we flee away, they will not care for us;² neither if half of us die, will they care for us; but now thou art worth ten thousand of us:³ therefore now it is better that thou succour us out of the city.

4 And the king said unto them, What seemeth you best I will do. And the king stood by the gate-side, and all the people came out by hundreds and by thousands.⁴

5 And the king commanded Joab, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, Deal gently, for my sake, with the young man, even with Absalom. And all the people heard when the king gave all the captains charge concerning Absalom.

6 ¶ So the people went out into the field against Israel: and the battle was in the wood of Ephraim;⁵

than they could have wished. Disappointed pride produces self-murder to such as sought their life. But how much more terrible is their disappointment, who meet with everlasting shame and destruction by fleeing to death, as their refuge from present contempt or hazard! In the time of their greatest trouble God unexpectedly provides for his people. And it is very honourable to assist a sovereign or a saint when almost everybody is become his enemy.

CHAPTER XVIII. REFLECTIONS.—In dangerous times great care ought to be taken for the security and honour of princes: and good advice from inferiors ought to be readily complied with. No undutifulness can root out or obliterate strong parental affection. What then must be the affection of God to his children! How quickly, how easily, the enemies of God are overthrown, and that by means the most unexpected! Both the hopes and joys of the wicked soon issue in misery and shame: and they who flee from God's arm only rush into his net. Pride proves men's shame at last. A head trimmed at the expense of neglecting the soul is like to prove ruinous to both. Monuments of fame often serve only to perpetuate the disgrace of the erectors. Fearful is the guilt, and dreadful the end, of rebellious children. But success, whether in work or warfare, should be wholly ascribed to the Lord: and messages of evil cannot be too

TOMB OF ABSALOM. [II. Samuel, xviii:18.]—"Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up for himself a pillar, which is in the king's dale; for he said, I have no son to keep my name in remembrance; and he called the pillar after his own name; and it is called unto this day Absalom's place." This tomb of Absalom is in the valley of Kedron. It is generally called the Pillar of Absalom. It is cut out of solid rock. Each side measures 22 feet. Over the columns is a dark frieze, and an Egyptian cornice above this. The height above the surface is 54 feet. It is not absolutely known that this is the pillar Absalom had reared for himself during his lifetime in the king's dale. It is a strange fact, however, that it answers to what is said in the 18th verse of the 18th chapter of II. Samuel, "And it is called unto this day, Absalom's place."

before the servants of David; and there was there a great slaughter that day of twenty thousand men.

8 For the battle was there scattered over the face of all the country: and the wood devoured⁶ more people that day than the sword devoured.

9 ¶ And Absalom met the servants of David: And Absalom rode upon a mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and his head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth; and the mule that was under him went away.

10 And a certain man saw it, and told Joab, and said, Behold, I saw Absalom hanged in an oak.⁷

11 And Joab said unto the man that told him, And, behold, thou sawest him; and why didst thou not smite him there to the ground? and I would have given thee ten shekels of silver,⁸ and a girdle.

12 And the man said unto Joab, Though I should receive⁹ a thousand shekels of silver¹ in mine hand, yet would I not put forth mine hand against the king's son: for in our hearing the king charged thee, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, Beware² that none touch the young man Absalom.

13 Otherwise I should have wrought falsehood against mine own life: for there is no matter hid from the king, and thou thyself wouldest have set thyself against me.

14 Then said Joab, I may not tarry thus with thee.³ And he took three darts⁴ in his hand, and thrust them through the heart of Absalom, while he was yet alive in the midst of the oak.

15 And ten young men that bare Joab's armour compassed about and smote Absalom, and slew him.

16 And Joab blew the trumpet, and the people returned from pursuing after Israel: for Joab held back the people.

17 And they took Absalom, and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and laid a very great heap of stones⁵ upon him: and all Israel fled every one to his tent.

18 ¶ Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up for himself a pillar, which is in the king's dale: for he said, I have no son to keep my name in remembrance: and he called the pillar after his own name: and it is called unto this day, Absalom's Place.⁶

brought.

19 ¶ Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok, Let me now run and bear the king tidings, how that the LORD hath avenged him of his enemies.

20 And Joab said unto him, Thou shalt not bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day: but this day thou shalt bear no tidings, because the king's son is dead.

21 Then said Joab to Cushi, Go tell the king what thou hast seen. And Cushi bowed himself unto Joab, and ran.

22 Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok yet again to Joab, But, howsoever,⁶ let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushi.⁷ And Joab said, Wherefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings ready?⁸

23 But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and over-ran Cushi.

24 ¶ And David sat between the two gates: and the watchman went up to the roof over the gate unto the wall, and lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold a man running alone.

25 And the watchman cried, and told the king. And the king said, If he be alone, there is tidings in his mouth.¹ And he came apace, and drew near.

26 And the watchman saw another man running: and the watchman called unto the porter, and said, Behold another man running alone. And the king said, He also bringeth tidings.

27 And the watchman said, Methinketh the running² of the foremost is like the running of Ahimaaz the son of Zadok. And the king said, He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings.

28 And Ahimaaz called, and said unto the king, All is well.³ And he fell down to the earth upon his face before the king, and said, Blessed be the LORD thy God, which hath delivered up the men that lifted up their hand against my lord the king.

29 And the king said, Is the young man Absalom safe?⁵ And Ahimaaz answered, When Joab sent the king's servant, and me thy servant, I saw a great tumult, but I knew not what it was.⁶

30 And the king said unto him, Turn aside, and stand here. And he turned aside, and stood still.

31 And, behold, Cushi came; and Cushi said, Tidings,⁷ my lord the king: for the LORD tenderly delivered. Yet is it not astonishing to find so great and good a man neglecting to praise God for his wonderful salvation; quarrelling with his kind providence; opposing the justice of the nation; uttering things unadvisedly with his lips; and so immoderately bewailing a son abandoned of Heaven to everything vile and hateful!

CHAPTER XIX. REFLECTIONS.—The productions of unbridled passions are always unseasonable and dangerous. Few will risk their life for such as, after all, will look down upon them with neglect; and if we foolishly bring ourselves into danger, we shall justly be upbraided with it. Good counsel, though bluntly and even roughly given, should be thankfully received. And when we have done ill we cannot too soon seek to amend it: but when many are guilty, it is too common to cast the blame on their neighbours.

Ministers ought to be principal promoters of loyalty. It is shameful when those who ought to be most forward in duty need instigation to it. Clemency is one of the noblest qualities of princes: and professions of deep sorrow for faults committed powerfully pacify the injured. But let us rejoice that Jesus will never condemn penitent sinners, though Satan stand at their right hand to accuse them. Our rash reception of evil reports concerning our friends turns to our shame when hath avenged thee this day of all them that rose up against thee.

32 And the king said unto Cushi, Is the young man Absalom safe? And Cushi answered, The enemies of my lord the king, and all that rise against thee to do thee hurt, be as that young man⁸ is.

33 ¶ And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate,⁹ and wept; and as he went, thus he said, O my son Absalom! my son, my son Absalom! 'would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!¹

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Joab causeth the king to cease his mourning. 9 The Israelites are earnest to bring the king back. 11 David sendeth to the priests to invite the men of Judah. 16 Shimei is pardoned. 24 Mephibosheth excused. 32 Barzillai dismissed; Chimham his son is taken into the king's family. 41 The Israelites expostulate with Judah for bringing home the king without them.

AND it was told Joab, Behold, the king weepeth and mourneth for Absalom.

2 And the "victory that day was turned into mourning unto all the people: for the people heard say that day how the king was grieved for his son.

3 And the people gat them by stealth that day into the city, as people being ashamed steal away when they flee in battle.

4 But the king covered his face, and the king cried with a loud voice, O my son Absalom! O Absalom, my son, my son!¹

5 And Joab came into the house to the king, and said, Thou hast shamed this day the faces of all thy servants, which this day have saved thy life, and the lives of thy sons and of thy daughters, and the lives of thy wives, and the lives of thy concubines;

6 In that thou lovest² thine enemies, and hatest thy friends: for thou hast declared this day, that thou regardest neither princes nor servants:³ for this day I perceive, that if Absalom had lived, and all we had died this day, "then it had pleased thee well.

7 Now therefore arise, go forth, and 'speak comfortably unto thy servants: for I swear by the LORD, if thou go not forth, there 'will not tarry one with thee this night;⁴ and that will be worse unto thee than all the evil that befell thee from thy youth until now.

8 Then the king arose, and 'sat in the gate. And they told unto all the people, saying, Behold, the king doth sit in the gate. And all the people came before the king; for 'Israel had fled every man to his tent.

9 ¶ And all the people were at 'strife throughout all the tribes of Israel,⁵ saying, The 8 There was both discretion and delicacy in this announcement. Without mentioning Absalom's name, or the tragical manner of his death, Cushi with much address does not deny its having occurred, but dwells solely upon the fact of its being the death of an enemy and a rebel.—L.

9 Over the gate there was a tower, the principal apartment in which was used sometimes as a state-room, and sometimes as a private parlour. "In most cases this room has a window towards the street; which in Egypt and Turkey projects forward, and is called a kiosk (Kitto).—L.

1 A father only could have so lamented—a renewed spirit only could have so forgiven. Yet how low is our admiration of David weeping over his lovely son, when compared with Jesus weeping over his enemies, Lu. 19. 41.—C.

1 Why is the conduct of David, in the case of Bathsheba's child, ch. 12. 23, and in the case of Absalom, so different? There are two reasons for the difference. (1) Young children are less endeared to their parents than they afterwards, by association, generally become. (2) David was lamenting Absalom, not merely as a rebel son, but a lost sinner; a thought, of all thoughts, the most grievous to a parent's heart.—C.

But the mass of the people had chosen another for their king, and by that act had virtually deprived David of their power, deposed David; and it would appear that the civil principles of the constitution required that he should, in a certain sense, be re-elected to the crown.—K'tto.

12 David was still at Mahanaim on the east of Jordan, Zadok and Abiathar in Jerusalem, on the west. But the presence of Amasa, ver. 13, whom Absalom had made general of his army, prevented an expression of public opinion in the capital in favour of David's return. Amasa was nephew to David, by his sister Abigail; and was by Zeruiah, Amasa's advancement was therefore well calculated to the discomfited of Judah.—C.

king 'saved us out of the hand of our enemies, and he delivered us out of the hand of the Philistines, and now he is fled out of the land for Absalom.

10 And Absalom, whom we 'anointed over us, is dead in battle: now therefore why 'speak ye not a word of bringing the king back?⁵

11 ¶ And king David sent to 'Zadok and to Abiathar the priests,⁶ saying, Speak unto the elders of Judah, saying, Why are ye the 'last to bring the king back to his house? seeing the speech of all Israel is come to the king, even to his house.

12 Ye are 'my brethren, ye are my bones and my flesh: wherefore then are ye the last to bring back the king?

13 And say ye 'to Amasa, Art thou not of my bone, and of my flesh? 'God do so to me, and more also, if thou be not captain of the host before me continually 'in the room of Joab.

14 And he bowed the heart of all the men of Judah,⁷ even 'as the heart of one man; so that they sent this word unto the king, Return thou, and all thy servants.

15 So the king returned, and came to Jordan. And Judah came to 'Gilgal, to go to meet the king, to conduct the king over Jordan.

16 ¶ And 'Shimei the son of Gera, a Benjamite, which was of Bahurim, hasted, and came down with the men of Judah to meet king David.

17 And there were a thousand men of Benjamin with him, and 'Ziba the servant of the house of Saul, and his fifteen sons and his twenty servants with him; and they went over Jordan before the king.

18 And there went over a ferry-boat⁸ to carry over the king's household, and to do what he thought good.⁹ And Shimei the son of Gera fell down before the king, as he was come over Jordan;

19 And said unto the king, Let not my lord impute iniquity unto me, neither do thou remember 'that which thy servant did *per-*versely the day that my lord the king went out of Jerusalem, that the king should take it to his heart.

20 For thy servant doth know that I have sinned: therefore, behold, I am come 'the first this day of all the house of Joseph¹ to go down to meet my lord the king.

21 But Abishai the son of Zeruiah answered and said, 'Shall not Shimei be put to death for this, because he cursed the LORD's anointed?

22 And David said, 'What have I to do they manifest their innocence. Wicked servants do their masters inexpressible injuries: but good men like Mephibosheth make times of distress seasons of mourning and grief, and disregard their own interests in comparison of those of God's church and people. Riches are truly blessings when possessed by generous minds, and liberally ministered for the support of the indigent. Grateful hearts count themselves happy to have it in their power to recompense their friends: and noble minds count little of all the services they can do to their friends. But observe, courts, feasting, and mirth are poor preparations for death: and old men especially would do well often to decline all intercourse with them, that they may contemplate the more important concerns that now so closely press upon them, and cheerfully leave the more active employments for those whose age and capacities are more suitable to such a task. With what caution ought public affairs to be conducted! By pride cometh with you, ye sons of Zeruiah, that ye should this day be adversaries unto me? ^ashall there any man be put to death this day in Israel? for do not I know that I am this day king over Israel?

23 Therefore the king said unto ^aShimei, Thou shalt not die: and the king ^aswore unto him.

24 ¶ And ^aMephibosheth the son of Saul came down to meet the king, and had neither dressed¹ his feet, nor trimmed his beard,¹ nor washed his clothes, from the day the king departed until the day he came again in peace.

25 And it came to pass, when he was come to Jerusalem to meet the king, that the king said unto him, Wherefore wentest not thou with me, Mephibosheth?

26 And he answered, My lord, O king, my servant deceived me: for thy servant said, I will saddle me an ass, that I may ride thereon, and go to the king; because thy servant is lame.

27 And ^ahe hath slandered² thy servant unto my lord the king; but my lord the king is as an angel of God: do therefore what is good in thine eyes.

28 For ^aall of my father's house were but dead men³ before my lord the king; yet didst thou set thy servant among them that did eat at thine own table: what right therefore have I yet to cry any more unto the king?

29 And the king said unto him, Why speakest thou any more of thy matters? I have said, Thou^a and Ziba divide the land.⁴

30 And Mephibosheth said unto the king, Yea,^a let him take all, forasmuch as my lord the king is come again in peace unto his own house.

31 ¶ And ^aBarzillai the Gileadite came down from Rogelim, and went over Jordan with the king, to conduct him over Jordan.

32 Now Barzillai was a very aged man, even fourscore years old; and ^ahe had provided the king of sustenance while he lay at Mahanaim; for he was a very great man.

33 And the king said unto Barzillai, ^aCome thou over with me, and I will feed thee with me in Jerusalem.

34 And Barzillai said unto the king, ^aHow long have I to live, that I should go up with the king unto Jerusalem?

35 I am this day ^afourscore years old: and can I discern between good and evil? ^acan thy servant taste what I eat or what I drink? can I hear any more the voice of singing-men and singing-women?⁵ wherefore then should thy servant be yet a burden unto my lord the king?

36 Thy servant will go a little way over Jordan with the king: and why should the king recompense it me with such a reward?

37 Let thy servant, I pray thee, turn back again, that I may die in mine own city, and be buried by the grave of my father and of my mother: but behold thy servant ^aChimham; let him go over with my lord the king; and do to him what shall seem good unto thee.

38 And the king answered, Chimham shall go over with me, and I will do to him that which shall seem good unto thee: and whatsoever thou shalt require⁶ of me, that will I do for thee.

39 And all the people went over Jordan. And when the king was come over, the king ^akissed Barzillai, ^aand blessed him; and he returned unto his own place.

40 Then the king went on to Gilgal, and Chimham went on with him: and ^aall the people of Judah conducted the king, and also half the people of Israel.⁷

41 ¶ And, behold, ^aall the men of ^aIsrael came to the king, and said unto the king, Why have our brethren the men of Judah⁸ stolen thee away, and have brought the king and his household, and all David's men with him, over Jordan?

42 And all the men of Judah answered the men of Israel, ^aBecause the king is near of kin to us:¹ wherefore then be ye angry for this matter? have we eaten at all of the king's cost? or hath he given us any gift?

43 And the men of Israel answered the men of Judah, and said, ^aWe have ten parts² in the king, and we have also more right in David than ye: why then did ye despise us,³ that our advice should not be first had in bringing back our king? And ^athe words of the men of Judah were fiercer than the words of the men of Israel.⁴

CHAPTER XX.

1 By occasion of the quarrel, Sheba maketh a party in Israel. 3 David's ten concubines are shut up in perpetual prison. 4 Amasa, made captain over Judah, is slain by Joab. 14 Joab pursueth Sheba unto Abel. 16 A wise woman saveth the city by Sheba's head. 23 David's great officers.

AND there ^ahappened to be there a ^aman of Belial,¹ whose name was Sheba, the son of Bichri, a Benjamite; and he ^ablew a trumpet, and said, ^aWe have no part in David, neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: every man to his tents, O Israel.

2 So ^aevery man of Israel went up from after contention. A small evidence of respect might often prevent, not only angry altercations, but much murder and bloodshed. It is best to yield and to leave off strife before it be meddled with: for when men are once in a passion they are sure to speak wrong, even though they have truth on their side.

David, and followed Sheba the son of Bichri: but the men of Judah clave unto their king, from Jordan even to Jerusalem.²

3 ¶ And David came to his house at Jerusalem; and the king took the ten women his concubines, whom he had left to keep the house, and put them in ward, and fed them, but went not in unto them: so they were shut up unto the day of their death, living in widowhood.⁴

4 ¶ Then said the king to Amasa, Assemble me the men of Judah within three days, and be thou here present.

5 So Amasa went to assemble the men of Judah: but he tarried longer than the set time which he had appointed him.⁵

6 And David said to Abishai, Now shall Sheba the son of Bichri do us more harm than did Absalom: take thou thy lord's servants, and pursue after him, lest he get him fenced cities, and escape us.⁶

7 And there went out after him Joab's men, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, and all the mighty men: and they went out of Jerusalem, to pursue after Sheba the son of Bichri.

8 When they were at the great stone which is in Gibeon, Amasa went before them: and Joab's garment that he had put on was girded unto him, and upon it a girdle with a sword fastened upon his loins in the sheath thereof; and as he went forth it fell out.⁷

9 And Joab said to Amasa, Art thou in health, my brother? And Joab took Amasa by the beard with the right hand to kiss him.⁸

10 But Amasa took no heed to the sword that was in Joab's hand: so he smote him therewith in the fifth rib, and shed out his bowels to the ground, and struck him not again, and he died. So Joab and Abishai his brother pursued after Sheba the son of Bichri.

11 And one of Joab's men stood by him, and said, He that favoureth Joab, and he that is for David, let him go after Joab.⁹

12 And Amasa wallowed in blood in the midst of the highway: and when the man saw that all the people stood still, he removed Amasa out of the highway into the field, and cast a cloth upon him, when he saw that every one that came by him stood still.

13 When he was removed out of the highway, all the people went on after Joab, to pursue after Sheba the son of Bichri.

14 ¶ And he went through all the tribes of Israel unto Abel, and to Beth-maachah,¹ and all the Berites: and they were gathered together, and went also after him.

of Beth-maachah, and they cast up a bank against the city, and it stood in the trench: and all the people that were with Joab battered the wall, to throw it down.³

16 ¶ Then cried a wise woman out of the city, Hear, hear; say, I pray you, unto Joab, Come near hither, that I may speak with thee.

17 And when he was come near unto her, the woman said, Art thou Joab? And he answered, I am he. Then she said unto him, Hear the words of thine handmaid. And he answered, I do hear.

18 Then she spake, saying, They were wont to speak in old time, saying, They shall surely ask counsel at Abel:⁴ and so they ended the matter.

19 I am one of them that are peaceable and faithful in Israel:⁵ thou seekest to destroy a city and a mother in Israel: why wilt thou swallow up the inheritance of the LORD?

20 And Joab answered and said, Far be it, far be it from me, that I should swallow up or destroy.

21 The matter is not so: but a man of mount Ephraim, (Sheba the son of Bichri by name,) hath lifted up his hand against the king, even against David: deliver him only, and I will depart from the city. And the woman said unto Joab, Behold, his head shall be thrown to thee over the wall.

22 Then the woman went unto all the people in her wisdom: and they cut off the head of Sheba the son of Bichri, and cast it out to Joab: and he blew a trumpet, and they retired from the city, every man to his tent; and Joab returned to Jerusalem unto the king.

SMYRNA THROUGH A BREACH IN THE CASTLE WALL—A MODERN CITY FILLED WITH THE DESCENDANTS OF GOD'S ANCIENT PEOPLE ISRAEL. [II. Samuel, xxi.]—About the time that the events recorded in this chapter were taking place in Palestine, away over on the coast of Asia Minor, the city of Smyrna was being founded by the Aeolian, Ionian and Dorian colonies. Smyrna in after years was to be the seat of one of the seven churches of Asia. It was the home of Polycarp, and this picture was taken from near the martyr's grave. There are more Jews here in proportion to population perhaps than in any other city. Smyrna's relation to the people of God, 1000 B. C., is not geographical but chronological. So we think it helps the mind to understand better the history of God's people to take a look occasionally into the lands around the great blue sea that washes the shores of Palestine. It is doubtless true that the history of Palestine was very much influenced by the ideas and movements of surrounding people.

3 Wherefore David said unto the Gibeonites, What shall I do for you? and wherewith shall I make the atonement, that ye may ³bless the inheritance of the LORD?

4 And the Gibeonites said unto him, ⁹We will have no silver nor gold of Saul, nor of his house; neither for us shalt thou kill any man in Israel. And he said, What ye shall say, that will I do for you.

CHAPTER XXII.

A psalm of thanksgiving for God's mighty deliverances, and manifold blessings.

AND David ²spake unto the LORD the words of this song¹ in the day that the ²LORD had terest enemies. Objects of unlawful pleasure are often turned into standing memorials of our grief and shame: and an obscure retirement is fittest for those who have made themselves publicly scandalous. Kings seldom find that rash changes of the commanders in their army turn out to their satisfaction. Hardened murderers cannot be restrained by law. Impunity in one act encourages them to another. But let them outbrave their sovereign, or cover their bloodshed, yet God will punish them at last. One daring sinner often involves many in his punishment. But what a mercy, amidst the ravages of war, is a fit mediator! The terms of peace may often be very easy, would the parties but once confer together and understand one another.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 4. What ye shall say, that will I do for you. Clarke very thoughtlessly blames David for leaving the selection of the punishment to the Gibeonites. He should first have shown that God had not so directed. That God had done so is plain from his subsequent approval of the punishment upon Saul's 'bloody house.' C.]

Ver. 10. [Rain in harvest was regarded in Palestine as miraculous; rain during the summer months is unknown. It would appear that this faithful woman must have watched over the ghastly skeletons of her sons from April till the beginning of October—then when the rain fell it was a sign that the plague of drought which had afflicted the land was removed, and that the Lord's anger was appeased. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—The obligations of public oaths and covenants are lasting and solemn; and the breaches of them, be the pretexts what they will, are highly provoking to God. Wicked and murderous magistrates are a great plague to nations. God may long defer his judgments without averting them: but old delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul:

2 And he said, "The LORD is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; sins are not forgotten by him. The time of recompense will come at last; and may soon turn a fruitful land into barrenness. God's judgments should therefore make us search out and bewail our own and our fathers' iniquities. The sins of parents often entail misery on their posterity. And though the poor oppressed should have no power to relieve themselves, God will plead their cause: nor till satisfaction be made them can we hope for a blessing from God. Thus they who maliciously designed the ruin of others bring themselves and families to misery! and how unsearchable are the judgments of God in ruining the families of his wrath! Severe executions for the public good are sometimes necessary. Many parents are long spared to meet with sad scenes of anguish and grief: and often survivors, by taking pains to revive the memory of lost friends, prove their own self-tormentors. Fidelity to sovereigns in moments of danger is exremely honourable. Strength of body is of no use to resist God or withstand death. But let God's people be attacked as often as they may by their enemies, they will come off more than conquerors through him who loveth them.

CHAPTER XXII. REFLECTIONS.—Such as God has intended for great honour, or who follow Jesus into his kingdom, may be assured of meeting

STEAMERS AT SMYRNA—WHERE HOMER WAS BORN, WHO WROTE AT THE SAME TIME DAVID DID. [II. Samuel, xxii.]—The 22d chapter of Samuel contains a Psalm of David praising God for his powerful deliverance and manifold blessings. It is a sublime specimen of poetry, and about the same time that this was written, Homer lived who was born in Smyrna. Other cities claim to be the birth-place of Homer, but the inhabitants of Smyrna confirm the opinion that their city was the place of his birth by not only paying him divine honors but by showing the place which bore the poet's name. It is interesting to compare the writings of the two poets, David and Homer, living as they did in the same age about 1000 B. C. Such a comparison reveals the infinite difference between the rational conception which the Hebrews had of God and the mythological and puerile ideas of the divine held by the Greeks.

THE ALTAR OF THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY—OVER THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS BORN. [II. Samuel, xxiii:16.]—"And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Bethlehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: nevertheless he would not drink thereof, but poured it out unto the Lord." Bethlehem is celebrated because of its relation to Boaz and Ruth, and because it was the birthplace of David; but most of all it holds its place in the affections of the human race because here was the advent of the Savior. Here the angels announced his birth to the shepherds as they minded their flocks by night. The Church of the Nativity stands over the Inn where our Savior was born. The traditional well of David from which the men drew water at the peril of their lives, is in a yard through a narrow passage on the left as we enter Bethlehem.

12 But he stood in the midst of the ground, and defended it,⁶ and slew the Philistines: and the LORD wrought a great victory.

13 And three of the thirty chief⁷ went down, and came to David in the harvest time unto the cave of Adullam: and the troop of the Philistines pitched in the valley of Rephaim.

14 And David was then in an hold, and the garrison of the Philistines was then in Beth-lehem.

15 And David longed,⁸ and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Beth-lehem, which is by the gate!

16 And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: nevertheless he would not drink thereof, but poured it out unto the LORD:

17 And he said, Be it far from me, O LORD, that I should do this: is not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives? therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty men.

18 And Abishai, the brother of Joab, the son of Zeruiah, was chief among three,⁹ and he lifted up his spear against three hundred, and slew¹ them, and had the name among three.

19 Was he not most honourable of three? therefore he was their captain: howbeit he attained not unto the first three.

20 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, who had done many acts, he slew two lion-like men of Moab: he went down also and slew a lion in the midst of a pit in time of snow.

21 And he slew an Egyptian, a goodly man: and the Egyptian had a spear in his hand; but he went down to him² with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him with his own spear.

22 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had the name among three mighty men.

23 He was more honourable³ than the thirty, but he attained not to the first three: and David set him over his guard.⁵

Until wars shall cease (which may the Lord hasten), just praise is due to those by whom our families and our country are defended, and our enemies prevented from over-running and destroying the land.—C.

It was the comparison of these texts that led Kennicott to engage in his great work of collating the Hebrew MSS. Perhaps the list here contains the names of the commanders who lived in the early part of David's reign; but it underwent various changes, which are noted in 1 Ch. xi.—I.

17 Instead of 'the sons of Jashen, Jonathan', the parallel passage in Chronicles has—'the sons of Jashen the Gizonite', and then joins 'Jonathan' to the next clause. The word rendered 'the sons of Jashen' is unquestionably a proper name, and ought to be read Benaiah. Jonathan also should be connected with Shammah, as in Chronicles. The whole would then read—'Benejashen; Jonathan the son of Shammah (Ben-shammah) the Hararite.—P.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 David, tempted by Satan, foretold Joab to number the people. 5 The captains, in nine months and twenty days, bring the muster of thirteen hundred thousand fighting men. 10 David, having three plagues propounded by God, repenteth, and chooseth the three days' pestilence. 15 After the death of threescore and ten thousand, David, by repentance, preventeth the destruction of Jerusalem. 18 David, by God's direction, purchaseth Araunah's threshing-floor, where, having sacrificed, the plague ceaseth.

AND again the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah.

2 For the king said to Joab the captain of the host, which was with him, Go now through all the tribes of Israel, from Dan even to in different parts of the country, and at different periods. Observe how different is the spelling of many of our historical names now and a century ago. P.]

Ver. 15. [The cave of Adullam was in the wilderness of Judah, a little to the south-east of Beth-lehem. The well to which tradition has given the name of David's Well is on the northern side of the village, close to the road that leads to the plain of Rephaim. If it be the real well, which is not improbable, David's mighty men must have passed round the village, leaving the Philistine garrison between them and their place of refuge. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is a high honour to be endowed with gifts and invested with offices by the God of Israel, for the benefit of his people: for his gifts and graces are necessary for the faithful discharge of every office in church or state. What a mercy to mankind is Jesus and his compassion! It is pleasant to die in his arms, beholding his glory, resting on his atonement, and cleaving to his promise: but great is the wickedness, and dreadful the end, of those that oppose him and the interests of his church. God distributes, in a most gracious manner, his endowments even in natural things, rendering men weak or strong, cowardly or brave, as is best. And it is sinful for self-indulgence, or to please a superior's humour, to hazard human life: and very necessary to repent bitterly of such conduct. But let me, refreshed with the living water which flows from Jesus the Bethlehemite, be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might; so shall I put to flight the heroes and the armies of the aliens. No powers of hell or earth shall be able to withstand me; and with honour shall my deeds be recorded in the Lamb's book of life.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 1. He moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah. By comparing this passage with 1 Ch. 21. 1, it will be seen that 'Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David' to this census. How is it then, in this passage, ascribed to the Lord? Just as the Lord moves men to prayer by danger, and to repentance by affliction; so, being displeased with Israel and David, he delivers them over to Satan their adversary, as he delivered Job; and David is thus judiciously moved by the Lord, who has sentenced him, but instrumentally by Satan, who accused him, and received power to tempt him. C.]

Ver. 4. [Went out from the presence of the king to number the people of Israel. The census being taken by the military, and not by the civil or ecclesiastical authorities, see Nu. 1. 44, proves that David contemplated a military enrolment for purposes of war. But why then is David opposed by Joab and the other generals? Joab had the existing army completely in Beer-sheba, and number ye the people, ^athat I may know the number of the people.

3 And Joab said unto the king, ^aNow the LORD thy God add unto the people, how many soever they be, an hundred-fold, and that the eyes of my lord the king may see it: but why doth my lord the king delight in this thing?

4 Notwithstanding the king's word prevailed against Joab, and against the captains of the host: and Joab and the captains of the host went out from the presence of the king to number the people of Israel.

5 ¶ And they passed over Jordan, and pitched in ^aAroer, on the right side of the city that lieth in the midst of the river¹ of Gad, and toward ^aJazer:

6 Then they came to ^aGilead, and to the land of Tahtim-hodshi;² and they came to ^aDan-jaan,³ and about to ^aZidon,

7 And came to the strong hold of ^aTyre, and to all the cities of the Hivites, and of the Canaanites;⁴ and they went out to the south of Judah, even to Beer-sheba.

8 So, when they had gone through all the land, they came to Jerusalem at the end of nine months and twenty days.

9 And ^aJoab gave up the sum of the number of the people unto the king: and there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword; and the men of Judah were five hundred thousand men.⁵

10 ¶ And David's heart ^asmote him⁶ after that he had numbered the people. And David said unto the LORD, ^aI have sinned greatly in that I have done: and now, I beseech thee, O LORD, take away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very foolishly.

11 For, when David was up in the morning, the word of the LORD came unto the prophet Gad,⁷ David's seer, saying, 12 Go⁸ and say unto David, Thus saith the LORD, I offer thee three things; choose thee one of them, ^athat I may do it unto thee.

13 So Gad came to David, and told him, and said unto him, ^aShall seven years of famine⁹ come unto thee in thy land? or wilt thou flee three months before thine enemies, while they pursue thee? or that there be three days' pestilence in thy land? now advise, and see what answer I shall return to him that sent me.

14 And David said unto Gad, ^aI am in a great strait: let us fall now into the hand of the LORD, (for his mercies are ^agreat,) and let me not fall into the hand of ^aman.

15 ¶ So the LORD sent a ^apestilence upon Israel from the morning even to the time appointed:⁸ and there died of the people, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, seventy thousand ^amen.

16 And when the angel stretched out his hand upon Jerusalem¹ to destroy it, ^athe LORD repented² him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed the people, It is enough; stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD was by the thrashing-place of ^aAraunah the Jebusite.

17 And David spake ^aunto the LORD, when he saw the angel that smote the people, and said, ^aLo, I have sinned, and I have done wickedly; but ^athese sheep, what have they done? Let thine hand, I pray thee, be against me,³ and against my father's house.

18 ¶ And Gad came ^athat day to David, and said unto him, Go up, rear an altar unto the LORD in the thrashing-floor of Araunah the Jebusite.

19 And David, according to the saying of Gad, went up, ^aas the LORD commanded.

20 And ^aAraunah looked, and saw the king and his servants coming on toward him: and Araunah went out, and ^abowed himself before the king on his face upon the ground.

21 And Araunah said, ^aWherefore is my lord the king come to his servant? And David said, To buy the thrashing-floor of thee, to build an altar unto the LORD, that ^athe plague may be stayed from the people.

22 And Araunah said unto David, ^aLet my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him: behold, ^ahere be oxen for burnt-sacrifice, and thrashing-instruments, and other instruments of the oxen, for wood.

23 All these things did Araunah, as a king, his interest, and was thereby generally too strong for David. But he dreaded such addition of new troops as might enable David to overpower him or depose him from the chief command. Next, what was the sin of David and Israel, for which they are delivered over to the tempter and punished with the plague? Their sin was the appetite for military glory beyond the purposes of defence, and of foreign conquest beyond the boundaries assigned them by God—the most glaring sins, for which, and by which, nations still continue to be punished. C.]

Ver. 5. [This description is given to distinguish Aroer of Gad from Aroer of Reuben. The latter was in the valley of the Arnon; the former a little eastward of Rabbath-ammon, and in the valley in which Rabbah is situated. See Jos. 13. 25. P.]

Ver. 6. [Tahtim-hodshi. Though this word is translated in some of the old versions, it appears to me to be a proper name, descriptive, however, of the physical aspect of the region to which it was given.

The route taken by the king's messengers was first eastward to Moab; then northward through Gilead; then ^ato the land of Tahtim-hodshi, and on to Dan-jaan and Zidon. The land of Tahtim-hodshi was thus manifestly a section of the upper valley of the Jordan, probably the 'netherland' or 'lowland,' now called Ard el-Huleh, lying deep down at the western base of Hermon. P.]

Ver. 9. [In all the numbers were 1,300,000; to these must probably be added the trained bands, or standing army, making up the whole people fit for military service to about a million and a half. This would represent a population of some six millions. It will thus be seen that they had increased nearly threefold since the exodus. P.]

Ver. 13. [See what answer I shall return to him that sent me. We read in 1 Ch. 21. 12 that the alternative offer was not seven but three years. How are these differences to be reconciled? The Septuagint reads three in both places; and the seven, by what may be called the Gordian Canon, is charged to the error of a transcriber. But as there is great danger in this violent criticism, so there is no need of it. On examination the two accounts will be found to have been delivered at different times—that in Chronicles the last; and in it the interrogative seven are reduced to the positive three. C.]

Ver. 23. [This is one of the most remarkable and solemn incidents in Bible history. A knowledge of the locality renders the story more graphic. The city and palace of David stood on Mount Zion. To the east, separated from it by a very deep and narrow ravine, was another mountain top, somewhat lower. On the summit of the latter an old Jebusite chief, apparently the dethroned king of the Canaanite Jebus, had a thrashing floor; beside it was a cave in the rock. Araunah, the chief, was thrashing wheat. He saw the destroying angel, and fled into the cave. David soon afterwards approached; Araunah 'went out' to meet him. The Jewish king asked to buy the floor, the ex-king of Jebus offered it free. David insisted give unto the king: and Araunah said unto the king, 'The LORD thy God accept thee.

24 And the king said unto Araunah, 'Nay; but I will surely buy it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD my God of that which doth cost me on paying the full price. An altar was erected; and the spot which had been originally consecrated by the sacrifice of Abraham, and called Moriah, 'the vision of Jehovah,' was now again dedicated to God. In a few years more the spot became the site of the great altar of Solomon's temple. To this day the site of Araunah's thrashing-floor is one of the holiest shrines of Mohammedanism. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is very dangerous when the sins of subjects provoke God to permit Satan to tempt their kings. He exactly discerns our pride, and detests it and everything leading to or produced by it. And it is cause of great shame to the saints, when monsters of wickedness are made to put them in mind of the promises of God and of their own duty. The pleasures obtained by sinful methods are quickly turned into the gall of asps within us: and bitter are the griefs and great the straits, when we have no choice but of destructive judgments allowed us by God. Alas! our sin, our folly, makes it so! But let a sense of guilt put an edge of importunity upon our prayers;—it may be the Lord will be gracious. He often smites where he means not to destroy. And though in his just judgment he will abase our pride by sinning our idol, he nothing. So David bought the thrashing-floor and the oxen for 'fifty shekels of silver.'

25 And David 'built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings. So the LORD was 'entreated for the land, and the plague was stayed from Israel.

will mingle mercy with judgment. While, therefore, we tremble at his judgments, let us beware of provoking him by our sins. How it stings a generous mind to have neighbours, and especially a Saviour, suffering for his sins! But under all our guilt, and all our plagues, let Jesus, our altar, our sacrifice, and ransom, be applied to as the means of our reconciliation to God. Let sacrifices of praise attend our pardon, and every manifestation of it. And however generous our friends may be, let us never willingly come under needless obligations to them; and never let us wish to serve God at the expense of others.

THE FIRST BOOK OF KINGS.

Perhaps this and the following book were written by the prophets who lived in their respective periods; and the whole connected together by Jeremiah or Ezra. They contain the history of the Jewish church and nation for about 427 years, from the coronation of Solomon to the burning of the temple by the Chaldeans. The alternate changes of mercies and judgments therein represented are an exact fulfilment of Le. xxvi.; De. xxviii. xxxii.

Forty years the kingdom of Israel continued united under Solomon, whose instalment, wisdom, wealth, erection of the temple, and idolatrous apostasy, are largely described, i. —xi. After the division, the kingdom of the ten tribes continued two hundred and fifty-four years under nineteen kings, descended from nine different families; viz. Jeroboam I., Nadab;—Baasha, Elah;—Zimri;—Omri, Ahab, Ahaziah, Jehoram;—Jehu, Jehoahaz, Jehoash, Jeroboam II., Zechariah;—Shallum;—Menahem, Pekahiah;—Pekah;—Hoshea: all of them idolaters. The kingdom of Judah continued three hundred and eighty-seven years under nineteen kings of the line of David; viz. Rehoboam, Abijah, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Jehoram, Ahaziah (Athaliah was an usurper), Joash, Amaziah, Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Manasseh, Amon, Josiah, Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, and Zedekiah: of whom Asa, Jehoshaphat, Jotham, Hezekiah, and Josiah were pious, and Manasseh a penitent. The history of these thirty-nine sovereigns, with that of the prophets Elijah and Elisha, is the subject-matter of these books. The scope is to show how righteousness exalts a nation, and sin is the reproach of any people.

[The First and Second Books of Kings were originally only one book. They are so still in Jewish manuscripts. They were divided in the Septuagint version, and printed so for the first time in Hebrew in the Bible edited by Bomberg. In the Septuagint and Vulgate they are called the Third and Fourth Books of Kings, First and Second Samuel being counted as First and Second Kings. The reason of this is obvious. The history in the four books is continuous, forming in fact a complete outline of the whole Israelitish monarchy from the anointing of David till the captivity.

There can be little doubt that Jeremiah was the author of the Books of Kings. Jewish tradition affirms the fact, and the language and style fully corroborate it. The last chapter bears evidence that the writer of it was an eye-witness of the triumph of the Babylonish arms and the capture of the Jews, while he himself remained in Judea. This exactly accords with the history of Jeremiah. The sources from which he derived his information were doubtless national records and other authentic documents. The latter part of the history came under the author's own observation; and accordingly we find that the narrative of the appointment of Gedaliah as governor, of his murder, and of the flight of the Jews to Egypt, is just an abridgment of the Book of Jeremiah, ch. xl.—xliii. Several works are mentioned by the writer as sources of information:—The Book of the Acts of Solomon, 1 Ki. 11. 41; The Book of Jonah, 2 Ki. 14. 25. Others are named in Chronicles; such as The Acts of David; The Book of Nathan; The Prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite; and The Visions of Iddo the Seer, &c. These were doubtless accessible to Jeremiah; and formed part of the materials from which, under divine inspiration, he composed the Books of Kings. P.]

12 Now therefore come, let me, I pray thee, give thee counsel, that thou mayest save thine own life, and the life of thy son Solomon.

13 Go and get thee in unto king David, and say unto him, Didst not thou, my lord, O king, swear unto thine handmaid, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne? why then doth Adonijah reign?

cognized by his sub-

4 He thinks that he had

But it rather seems to have been a right which needed no stipulation, being sanctioned by general usage; as we see exemplified in the case of Jacob, who deprived his eldest son Reuben of that priority which would otherwise have belonged to him. The right of the eldest son was in general recognized, but with a reserved right in the father to give the preference to a younger son if he saw occasion. Ori-this power. The late King of Persia, recognized his sec-to the exclusion of the eldest, who, how-to conceal his inten-

19. 1.

18 And now, behold, Adonijah reigneth; and now, my lord the king, thou knowest it not:

19 And he hath slain oxen, and fat cattle, and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the sons of the king, and Abiathar the priest, and Joab the captain of the host: but Solomon thy servant hath he not called.

20 And thou, my lord, O king, the eyes of all Israel are upon thee, that thou shouldest tell them who shall sit on the throne⁷ of my lord the king after him.

21 Otherwise it shall come to pass, when my lord the king shall sleep with his fathers, that I and my son Solomon shall be counted of offenders.

22 ¶ And, lo, while she yet talked with the king, Nathan the prophet also came in.⁸

23 And they told the king, saying, Behold Nathan the prophet. And when he was come in before the king, he bowed himself before the king with his face to the ground.

24 And Nathan said, My lord, O king, hast thou said, Adonijah shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne?

25 For he is gone down this day, and hath slain oxen, and fat cattle, and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the king's sons, and the captains of the host, and Abiathar the priest; and, behold, they eat and drink before him, and say, God save king Adonijah.

26 But me, even me thy servant, and Zadok the priest, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and thy servant Solomon, hath he not called.

27 Is this thing done by my lord the king and thou hast not showed⁹ it unto thy servant, who should sit on the throne of my lord the king after him?

28 ¶ Then king David answered and said, Call me Bath-sheba:¹ and she came into the king's presence,² and stood before the king.

29 And the king sware, and said, As the LORD liveth, that hath redeemed my soul out of all distress,³

30 Even as I swear unto thee by the LORD God of Israel, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne in my stead; even so will I certainly do this day.

Philistines, his various harassing campaigns, but above all his family afflictions, might well bring on a prema- ture old age, and wear out the most vigorous constitu- tion. C.]

Ver. 5. [Adonijah the son of Haggith exalted himself. The sons of David in order, were Amnon, slain by Absalom; Chileab, of whom there is no subsequent mention; Absalom, slain by Joab; and next Adonijah, who, as eldest, might now claim the throne, by right of orderly succession. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The strongest constitution of men quickly wastes of itself, and every project for retaining of strength or vigor is foolish and ineffectual. A burden of infirmities attends old age; and happy they who, in the views of it, have all things ready for an eternal state! Indulgent parents are commonly in their old age contented and plagued by their children, especially such as they most indulged. Ambition of reigning leads many to trample on the ordinances of both God and men. And they are, in general, most fond of high stations who neither know the duties of them, nor consider the labour and vexation which attend them. Such as make their belly their god will side with any party that will feast them best. But how easily God defeats every project inconsistent with his promise, even when it seems fully secured! In times of danger every prudent man ought to be used for averting it. And they who know God's will should be zealous for the accomplishment of it.—While kings are often kept ignorant of things nearly concerning their kingdom and interest, usurpers will stick at no cruelty to fix themselves on a throne. But if the enemies of God's people be alert and vigorous, their friends ought to be active and vigilant: and such as are weak, through infirmity, should be stirred up and encouraged. Our oaths should ever be remembered, and our consciences bound to fulfil them. Hearts truly grateful never forget God's mercies, nor allow them- selves to neglect opportunities of thankfully mentioning them. And it is extremely pleasant when aged saints take every opportunity of witnessing for God. What is right and seasonable should be done without delay:

FOUNTAIN OF JOAB—THE KING'S POOL MENTIONED BY NEHEMIAH. [I. Kings, i:9.]—"And Adonijah slew sheep and oxen and fat cattle by the stone of Zoheleth, which is by En-rogel, and called all his brethren the king's sons, and all the men of Judah the king's servants." Joab's fountain is identical with En-rogel, which was for years indetified with Bir Eyub south of the pool of Siloam, and at the union of the valleys of Hinnom and of Kedron. But according to Haskett Smith, M. Clermont-Ganneau recovered the stone of Zoheleth mentioned in I. Kings, i:9, at a rocky plateau in the midst of the village of Silwan, which is known to-day in Arabic as Zhohèh. Thus it is thought that En-rogel or Joab's Fountain is identical with the Virgin's Fountain. This is thought also to be identical with the king's pool mentioned in Nehemiah, ii:14, and is also thought to be the one called Solomon's reservoir by Josephus. This is between the pool of Siloam and the south side of the Temple.

the earth, and did reverence to the king, and said, 'Let my lord king David live for ever.'

32 ¶ And king David said, Call me 'Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada. And they came before the king.

33 The king also said unto them, Take with you the servants of your lord, and cause Solomon my son to 'ride upon mine own mule,' and bring him down to 'Gihon.'

34 And let Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet, 'anoint him there king over Israel: and' blow ye with the trumpet, and say, God save king Solomon.

35 Then ye shall come up after him, that he may come and sit upon my throne; for he shall be king in my stead: and 'I have appointed him to be ruler over Israel and over Judah.

36 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada answered the king, and said, 'Amen: the LORD God of my lord the king say so too.

37 As^s the LORD hath been with my lord the king, even so be he with Solomon, and 'make his throne greater than the throne of my lord king David.

38 ¶ So 'Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, went down, and caused Solomon to ride upon king David's mule, and brought him to Gihon.

39 And Zadok the priest took an 'horn of oil out of the tabernacle, and anointed Solomon: and they blew the trumpet; and all the people said, God save king Solomon.

40 And 'all the people came up after him; and the people piped with pipes, and rejoiced with great joy, so that the earth rent⁷ with the sound of them.

41 ¶ And Adonijah, and all the guests that were with him, heard it as they had made an end^m of eating.⁸ And when Joab heard the sound of the trumpet, he said, Wherefore is this noise of the city being in an uproar?

42 And while he yet spake, behold, 'Jonathan the son of Abiathar the priest came: and Adonijah said unto him, Come in; for thou art a^o valiant man, and bringest good tidings.

43 And Jonathan answered and said to Adonijah, 'Verily our lord king David hath made Solomon king.

44 And^a the king hath sent with him Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and b There is no precept in the law directing a culprit to take hold of the horns of the altar.

Yet it seems to be an act admitted as testimony of an appeal to the legal but temporary protection afforded to certain culprits in the cities of refuge. It is not said where this altar was, but as Gibeon was a city of refuge, and as an altar was still there, ch.3.4, it is most likely Adonijah would flee to it, and his fear to be ranked, if not with actual, yet still with intentional manslaughter, according to that principle of European jurisprudence which condemns even the guaging the death of a king. —The altar erected on the threshing-floor of Araunah, 2 Sa.24.25.

The altar of the Hebrews seems to have been a refuge till a man's case was heard, or till pardon was obtained; though there is no precept in the law to make it a privileged place, as it was among the Greeks and Romans. The murderer was to be taken from the altar, and dead, Ex.21.12-14. Adonijah acknowledged Solomon as king both by the altar and the law, and received a conditional pardon; but Solomon gave him fair warning that he was put upon his good behaviour. and that is most likely to prosper which is begun with dependence on God, and fervent prayer for his blessing. It is affection, not force, that can make dutiful subjects: and to leave church and state in a prosperous condition is the joy of a dying saint. What discouragement and danger attend a bad cause! And blustering traitors are often cowards when matters come to a crisis. How becoming is it when kings are ready to forgive those who have injured them! But much more astonishing is the pardoning mercy of our Lord Jesus to the guiltiest sinners who flee to his atonement, and prostrate themselves at his throne of grace.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. At the very close of his life we observe a striking revival alike of David's early spirit and early piety. With a vigour and ability worthy of his best days, he put down the attempt to transfer the succession to Adonijah, although favoured by Joab, the commander-in-chief of the army, and for years the leading man in the kingdom. Every trace of weakness, fear, and submission to the will of others had now disappeared from the mind of David. His trust was in God alone; and fully conscious of pardon, acceptance, and divine guidance, he regarded not the opposition of one who had so long swayed the destinies of the empire. His 'last words' too, and his charge to Solomon, show not only the full power of his poetic

TOMBS OF THE KINGS, JERUSALEM—WHERE THE KINGS OF ISRAEL ARE REPUTED TO BE BURIED. [I. KINGS, ii: 10.]—"So David slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David." The tombs of the kings are surrounded by a wall. They are entered from the west side. Twenty-four steps are cut out of the solid rock, nine yards wide. These lead down into the tombs in an easterly direction. These tombs are held in high esteem by the Jews. They call them the cavern of Zedekiah, or the tomb of the rich Kalba Sabua. It is supposed that Queen Helena of Adiabene was also buried here. This queen with her son Izates became converted to Judaism in her own country, and after the death of her husband moved to Jerusalem to live. She returned home, but after her death was brought to Jerusalem and buried. They are called the tombs of the kings, but there is no definite information by which we can know whether any of the kings of Judah are buried here.

suffering saints ought to be remembered even in criminals, nothing must satisfy for murder but the blood of the guilty. Wicked men entail a curse on their posterity: and negligent magistrates must bear the sin of those crimes which they are not duly careful to avenge: for the due execution of justice is the establishment of their throne. Men ruin themselves by sinning against their own mercies. Our heart contains much wickedness, to which only God and our conscience are privy. And dreadful is the account to which God will call men at last for their perjury and other sins. — But in David I

28 ¶ Then tidings came to Joab; (for Joab had turned after Adonijah, though he turned not after Absalom;) and Joab fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD, and ²caught hold on the horns of the altar.

29 And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD; and, behold, he is by the altar: then Solomon ²sent Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, saying, Go, fall upon him.

30 And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the LORD, and said unto him, Thus saith the king, Come forth. And he said, Nay; but I will die here.⁴ And Benaiah brought the king word again, saying, Thus said Joab, and thus he answered me.

31 And the king said unto him, Do as he hath said, and ²fall upon him, and bury him; that thou mayest take away the innocent blood, which Joab shed, from me, and from the house of my father.

32 And the LORD shall ²return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon ²two men more righteous and better than he, and slew them with the sword, my father David not knowing thereof, to wit, Abner the son of Ner, captain of the host of Israel, and Amasa the son of Jether, captain of the host of Judah.

33 Their blood ²shall therefore return upon the head of Joab, and upon the head of his seed for ever: but ²upon David, and upon his seed, and upon his house, and upon his throne, shall there be peace for ever from the LORD.

34 So ²Benaiah the son of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and slew him:⁵ and he was buried in his own house in the ²wilderness.⁶

35 ¶ And the king ²put Benaiah the son of Jehoiada in his room over the host: and Zadok the priest did the king put in the room of Abiathar.

of Solomon's authority and of the oath of God, upon an unnecessary business he took a journey, which, according to his own engagement, forfeited his life. Thus the Lord left him to be infatuated, that due punishment might be inflicted upon him, in order that every ringleader of opposition to Solomon's kingdom might be crushed, and others be intimidated by their example; and that his throne might be established in peace as the type of the Redeemer's kingdom of peace and righteousness.—Scott.

44 The king said moreover to Shimei, 'Thou knowest all the wickedness which thine heart is privy to, ²that thou didst to David my father: therefore the LORD shall ²return thy wickedness upon thine own head;

45 And king Solomon shall be ²blessed, and the throne of David shall be established before the LORD for ever.

46 So the king commanded Benaiah the son of Jehoiada; which went out, and fell upon him, that he died. And the ²kingdom was established in the hand of Solomon.

CHAPTER III.

1 Solomon married Pharaoh's daughter. 2 High places being in use, Solomon sacrificed at Gibeon. 3 Solomon at Gibeon, in the choice which God gave him, preferring wisdom, obtaineth wisdom, riches, and honour. 4 His judgment between the two harlots maketh his wisdom renowned.

AND Solomon^a made affinity with Pharaoh king of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into ²the city of David, until he had made an end of ²building his own house, and the house of the LORD, and the wall of Jerusalem round about.

2 ¶ Only^a the people sacrificed in high places, because there ²was no house built unto the name of the LORD until those days.¹

behold a lively figure of Jesus, God's chosen One; the man according to his own heart, born in Bethlehem, and who fulfils all his counsels. How amazing his fidelity, meekness, humility, faith in God, love to him, zeal for his honour, and devout intimacy with him! Thrice—in his conception, at his baptism, and in his ascension—he was plentifully anointed with the Holy Ghost to his arduous and extensive office. He is the living head of all faithful people who are made kings and priests unto God. He is our sweet Psalmist, who tunes our hearts and indites our songs of praise. He is our great Prophet and King, who instructs, forms, and governs his church, the Israel of God. Through debasement, labour, reproach, and temptations on every side—and all endured with holy courage, steady regard to his Father's love, full resignation to his will, and firm confidence of a happy issue—he entered into his kingdom and glory. How skillful, prudent, kind, and righteous is he in governing his subjects! and how active in framing and fixing the worship of God, preparing the temple above for his people, and them for it! All his faithful soldiers are such as, convinced of their spiritual guiltiness, pollution, poverty, and debt, have been led to enlist in his service. His mighty, prophets, apostles, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, by the whole armour of God, particularly the sword of the Spirit, do marvellous exploits. He himself defeated the lions, the bears, the giants of hell. He fulfilled the law, destroyed death and the grave: and by the gospel he persuades the nations to the obedience of faith, and puts all the faithful in the full possession of their promised blessings.

THE SPHINX—STANDING 2,719 YEARS WHEN SOLOMON TOOK PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER AND BROUGHT HER TO THE CITY OF DAVID. [I. Kings, iii:1.]—"And Solomon made affinity with Pharaoh, King of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into the City of David, until he had made an end of building his own house, and the house of the Lord, and the wall of Jerusalem round about." In this verse we see God's people brought through their king into relation with Egypt again. So we present here one of the most interesting pictures of the Sphinx that has ever been taken, to illustrate this fact. This monument stood where it appears to-day 3733 B. C., and had been standing here 2,719 years when Solomon took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into the City of David. The Sphinx represented among the Egyptians the God Harmachis, "Horus in the horizon, or Rising Sun, the Conquerer of Darkness, the God of the Morning." The Sphinx is hewn out of the living rock. The body is 153 feet long, paws 50 feet, the head 30 feet long, the face 14 feet wide, and from the top of the head to the base of the monument the distance is about 70 feet.

3 And Solomon loved the LORD, walking in the statutes of David his father: only he sacrificed and burnt incense in high places.

4 And the king went to Gibeon to sacrifice there; for that was the great high place: a thousand burnt-offerings did Solomon offer upon that altar.

5 ¶ In Gibeon the LORD appeared to Solomon in a dream by night: and God said, Ask what I shall give thee.

6 And Solomon said, Thou hast showed unto thy servant David my father great mercy, according as he walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee; and thou hast kept for him this great kindness, that thou hast given him a son to sit on his throne, as it is this day.

7 And now, O LORD my God, thou hast made thy servant king instead of David my father; and I am but a little child: I know not how to go out or come in.

8 And thy servant is in the midst of thy people which thou hast chosen, a great people, that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude.

9 Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad: for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?

10 And the speech pleased the LORD, that Solomon had asked this thing.

11 And God said unto him, Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast not asked for thyself long life; neither hast asked riches for thyself, nor hast asked the life of thine enemies; but hast asked for thyself understanding to discern judgment;

12 Behold, I have done according to thy words: lo, I have given thee a wise and an understanding heart; so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee.

13 And I have also given thee that which thou hast not asked, both riches and honour; so that there shall not be any among the kings like unto thee all thy days.

14 And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as thy father David did walk, then I will lengthen thy days.

15 And Solomon awoke; and, behold, it was a dream: and he came to Jerusalem, and

¶ That dreams furnish one of the 'divine manners' in which God has communicated his will to men, no reader of the Bible can deny. But even independent of direct divine revelation, dreams afford sometimes a good index of real disposition and character—perhaps because the dreamer thinks and acts as he would do apart from the influence of observing eyes—and may often form valuable assistants in the work of self-observation and self-examination. He that speaks or acts wisely and mercifully in a dream, has reason to thank God—he that speaks foolishly or acts wickedly in a dream, has an intelligible call to self-condemnation, watchfulness, and prayer.—C.)

¶ The Targum has 'victualers,' or tavern-keepers. Not common harlots, but unmarried women who had been guilty of fornication. The Jews suppose they were not Israelites, but strangers, and so not subject to the law in De. 23.17.—C.)

¶ Perhaps this difficult case was referred to the king, on account of its having proved too hard for the inferior judges to decide. Solomon was the only rational method of discovering the truth, by making an ingenious appeal to the self-denying tenderness of a mother. The murder of illegitimate infants by their mothers, to conceal their shame, so often occurring in this country, is not so much as intimated in the Scriptures. Nor is it met with in ancient history. The practice, however, of the ancients, of posing their children, whether spurious or not, to remove the temptation to take away their lives by secret murder.—C.) ¶ Pr. 25.3. 8 The profound knowledge of the human heart indicated by the judgment will readily be acknowledged. But its most important characteristic is its limited power of life and death which it indicates as resting in the mere will of the king. Were a British judge to issue such an order, he would be deemed insane; or, were it carried into execution, would be held guilty of murder. How may we, then, vindicate the despotic authority assumed in principle by Solomon? We may in no wise vindicate despotism—for the divine revelation of the law is a despotic—but we can account for the assumption of Solomon, in the fact, that for centuries the land of Judea had, with few and brief exceptions, been a despotic state under military law—a state of things that necessarily superseded all authority, and intrusted, for the time, to one, a power above the ordinary forms of procedure, and authorizes and requires of him, by the pressure of circumstances, extemporaneously as it were, both to make and administer the law.—C.)

20 ¶ Judah and Israel were many, as the sand which is by the sea in multitude, eating and drinking, and making merry.

21 And Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river¹ unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: they brought presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life.

22 ¶ And Solomon's provision for one day was thirty measures² of fine flour, and threescore measures of meal,

23 Ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and an hundred sheep, besides harts, and roe-bucks, and fallow-deer, and fatted fowl.³

24 For he had dominion over all the region on this side the river, from Tiphshah⁴ even to Azzah,⁵ over all the kings on this side the river: and he had peace on all sides round about him.

25 And Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig-tree, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon.

26 ¶ And Solomon had forty thousand stalls of horses for his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen.

27 And those officers provided victual for king Solomon, and for all that came unto king Solomon's table, every man in his month: they lacked nothing.

28 Barley also and straw for the horses and dromedaries brought they unto the place where the officers were, every man according to his charge.

29 ¶ And God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea-shore.

30 And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of the east country, and all the wisdom of Egypt.

hopeful is their administration who earnestly ask wisdom and direction from God. The disinterested prayer of faith is always acceptable to God; and when we seek first the kingdom of God, all things shall be added to us. He will give us exceeding abundantly above what we can ask or think: and quickly he gives opportunity for the exercise of the gifts which he bestows. How helpless and perilous is our infantile state! by the most marvellous providence we escape the dangers of it. How tender is the affection of a mother's breast! and monsters of brutality must they be who can neglect and destroy the fruit of their own womb. Magistrates, before whom such difficult causes come, have great need of their subjects' fervent prayers and of God's special direction. And the greater abilities men have, they are the more indebted to God who bestowed them. But alas! oftentimes the fear of detection and punishment from men is a greater restraint upon evil-doers than all the terrors of God's everlasting wrath.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 11. The daughter of Solomon to wife. Not signifying that he had her to wife when Solomon came to the throne—for Solomon was then too young to have a marriageable daughter—but who had her to wife before the time when the history was written. But if this be not admitted, she may, according to eastern custom, have been betrothed at an early age. C.]

Ver. 19. [Geber Ben-Uri in the land of Gilead, the land of Sihon king of the Amorites and Og king of Bashan; and the one officer who was in the land. This verse is somewhat obscure, especially when connected with ver. 13, 14. The meaning seems to be that Geber was set over the very wide district embracing the allotted territories of Reuben and Gad; part of which had originally been subject to Sihon, and a small part to Og; while to the whole the sacred writer now gives the name Gilead. Ver. 21. [All these countries acknowledged Solomon's authority, and paid tribute to him; but still this was not a fulfilment of the conditional promise made to Abraham. The countries specified were not then, and never were, possessed by the Israelites as a people. P.]

DAM, ABANA RIVER—A SCENE IN THE OLDEST CITY IN THE WORLD, INCLUDED IN THE KINGDOM OVER WHICH SOLOMON REIGNED. [I. KINGS, iv:21.]—"And Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: they brought presents and served Solomon all the days of his life." In the first chapter of Joshua, the Lord spake unto Joshua, saying, "Every place that the soul of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses from the wilderness, and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea towards the going down of the sun shall be your coast." The promise made to Joshua was practically confirmed and realized at the conclusion of David's reign. Solomon came into possession of this great inheritance, but by forgetting God he prepared the way for the dismemberment of his great kingdom. The Abana river is a scene near Damascus, at this time embraced within the dominions of Solomon.

31 For he was ¹wiser than all men; than Ethan² the Ezrahite, and Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol:³ and his fame was in all nations round about.

32 And he ⁴spake three thousand proverbs: and his songs were a thousand and five.

33 And he spake of trees, from the cedar-tree that ⁵is in Lebanon, even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall: he spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes.⁶

34 And there came ⁷of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth, which had heard of his wisdom.

CHAPTER V.

¹ Hiram, sending to congratulate Solomon, is certified of his purpose to build the temple, and desired to furnish him with timber for that purpose. ⁷ Hiram, blessing God for Solomon, and requesting food for his family, furnisheth him with timber. ¹³ The number of Solomon's workmen and labourers.

AND Hiram^a king of Tyre¹ sent his servants unto Solomon; (for he had heard that they had anointed him king in the room of his father:) for Hiram^b was ever a lover of David.

2 And ^cSolomon sent to Hiram, saying,

3 Thou knowest how that David my father could^d not build an house unto the name of the LORD his God, for the wars which were about him on every side, until the LORD ^eput them under the soles of his feet.

4 But now the LORD my God ^fhath given me rest on every side, so that there is neither adversary nor evil occurrent.

5 And, behold, I ^gpurpose ^hto build an house unto the name of the LORD my God,³ as the LORD spake unto David my father, saying, Thy son, whom I will set upon thy throne in thy room, he shall build an house unto my name.

6 Now therefore command thou that they hew me ⁱcedar-trees out of Lebanon; and my servants shall be with thy servants: and unto thee will ^jI give hire for thy servants, according to all that thou shalt appoint:⁴ for thou knowest that there is not among us any that can skill to hew timber like unto the ^kSidonians.⁵

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, that he rejoiced greatly, and said, 'Blessed be the LORD this day,'⁶ which hath given unto David a wise son over this great people.

8 And Hiram sent to Solomon, saying, I have considered⁷ the things which thou sentest to me for: and I will do all thy desire concern- ing timber of cedar, and concerning ⁸timber of fir.

9 My servants shall bring them down from ⁹Lebanon unto the sea; and I will convey them by sea in floats unto the place that thou shalt appoint⁸ me, and will cause them to be discharged there, and thou shalt receive them: and thou shalt accomplish my desire in ¹⁰giving food for my household.⁹

10 So Hiram gave Solomon cedar-trees, and fir-trees, according to all his desire.

11 And Solomon¹ gave Hiram twenty thou- sand ²measures of wheat for food to his house- hold, and twenty measures² of pure oil:³ thus gave Solomon to Hiram year by year.

12 And the LORD ⁴gave Solomon wisdom, as he promised him: and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon; and they two ⁵made a league together.

13 ¶ And king Solomon raised a levy out of all Israel; and the levy was ⁶thirty thousand men.

14 And he sent them to Lebanon, ten thou- sand a month by courses: a month they were in Lebanon, and two months at home: and ⁷Adoniram was over the levy.

15 And Solomon had threescore and ⁸ten thousand that bare burdens, and fourscore thou- sand hewers in the mountains;

16 Besides the chief of Solomon's officers which were over the work, ⁹three thousand and three hundred, which ruled over the people that wrought in the work.

17 And the king commanded, and they ¹⁰brought great stones,⁴ costly stones, and hewed stones, to lay the foundation of the house.

where they (the horses, not the officers) were—each man in his turn.' The word rendered 'dromedaries' means a swift animal, or an animal accustomed to perform journeys. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Great men should appear great, answerably to their stations. And it is often prudent for kings to continue most of their predecessors' officers in their respective places. But it is necessary for all men to provide for their household in the manner that is best for their own and the nation's advantage. God wisely balances men's honour and wealth with proportionate burdens of expense and care. He can give great happiness on earth: but infinitely greater is the happiness of Jesus' kingdom, which fills both heaven and earth; and unbounded are his provisions of new-covenant blessings. How gracious is God in the bestowal of his gifts and grace! But let us never envy such as outshine us. It is the Lord; let him give as seemeth him good! If we lack wisdom, let us ask it of God; and out of Jesus' fulness, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, let us receive, and grace for grace.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 6. The skill of the Sidonians in hewing timber was owing to two causes: 1. The cedar forests were in the mountains of Lebanon, within a very few miles of the city. There remains of ancient cedar forests have been discovered within the past five years. It was thought until very recently that the only remnant of the famous cedars was the little grove near the northern extremity of the mountain chain. Now, no less than seven distinct groves are known. 2. The Sidonians were the earliest and most celebrated navigators, they had consequently acquired skill in cutting timber for ship-building. P.]

Ver. 15. [It must be remembered that in those early days there were no regularly constructed roads, and there were no engines constructed to economize human labour. Palestine besides was a mountainous country; and transport was difficult. Every stone and beam had to be dragged along by strength of arm. Thousands were thus required to do work which as many scores could now do by the aid of machinery. The bearers of burdens and hewers spoken of in this verse were employed in the mountains around Jerusalem. It appears from 2 Ch. 2. 17, 18 that these pressed labourers were Canaanites. P.]

Ver. 17. [The stones laid bare by recent excavations round the walls of the temple area are of enormous magnitude, and the walls themselves, as now in part exposed to view, show what a vast amount of labour and time must have been spent upon them. Some of the stones measure nearly 40 ft. in length by 5 ft. in thickness. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Condolence with the afflicted is truly kind; and faithful friends love the children for their parents' sake. It is good for kings to cultivate peace with their neighbours, especially such as fear God. The more outward rest we have, the more earnestly we should lay out ourselves in promoting the

1 The building of Solomon's temple begun. 5 The chambers thereof. 11 God's promise unto it. 14 The ceiling and adorning of it. 23 The cherubims. 31 The doors. 36 The court. 37 The time of building it.

AND it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in the month Zif, which is the second month, that he began to build the house of the LORD.

2 ¶ And the house which king Solomon built for the LORD, the length thereof was three-score cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits.

3 And the porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the house; and ten cubits was the breadth thereof before the house.

4 ¶ And for the house he made windows of narrow lights.

5 ¶ And against the wall of the house he built chambers round about, against the walls of the house round about, both of the temple and of the oracle: and he made chambers round about.

6 The nethermost chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad: for without in the wall of the house he made narrowed rests round about, that the beams should not be fastened in the walls of the house.

7 And the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron, heard in the house while it was in building.

8 The door for the middle chamber was in the right side of the house: and they went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber, and out of the middle into the third.

9 So he built the house, and finished it; and covered the house with beams and boards of cedar.

10 And then he built chambers against all the house, five cubits high: and they rested on the house with timber of cedar.

11 ¶ And the word of the LORD came to Solomon, saying,

12 Concerning this house which thou art in building, if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments to walk in them; then will I per-worship and honour of God: and when we have God's promise to encourage us we need never doubt of our success. They have often most of natural ingenuity who have no real knowledge of God. And frequently God employs those in building his church who have no spiritual interest in her. But it is highly honourable to assist in promoting her welfare. In all bargains the conditions ought to be clear, that after-disputes may be prevented. And labourers' wages should be always paid with the greatest punctuality. When God hath a temple to build he can easily provide workmen; and in his work every one ought to have his particular allotment. But great is the mercy, that thousands numbered of Gentile sinners have been brought into the gospel church, and built up a spiritual temple, a meet habitation of God, through the Spirit.

CHAPTER VI. [Ver. 1. Began to build the house of the Lord. Chronologists differ widely respecting this most important epoch, ranging from 330 to 680, but no good reason seems assigned by any for questioning the correctness of the Hebrew text. C.]

13 And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not forsake my people Israel.

14 ¶ So Solomon built the house, and finished it.

15 And he built the walls of the house within with boards of cedar, both the floor of the house, and the walls of the ceiling: and he covered them on the inside with wood, and covered the floor of the house with planks of fir.

16 And he built twenty cubits on the sides of the house, both the floor and the walls with boards of cedar: he even built them for it within, even for the oracle, even for the most holy place.

17 And the house, that is, the temple before it, was forty cubits long.

18 And the cedar of the house within was carved with knops and open flowers: all was cedar; there was no stone seen.

19 ¶ And the oracle he prepared in the house within, to set there the ark of the covenant of the LORD.

20 And the oracle in the fore-part was twenty cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in the height thereof: and he overlaid it with pure gold; and so covered the altar which was of cedar.

21 So Solomon overlaid the house within with pure gold: and he made a partition by the chains of gold before the oracle, and he overlaid it with gold.

22 And the whole house he overlaid with gold, until he had finished all the house: also the whole altar that was by the oracle he overlaid with gold.

23 ¶ And within the oracle he made two cherubims of olive-tree, each ten cubits high.

24 And five cubits was the one wing of the cherub, and five cubits the other wing of the cherub: from the uttermost part of the one wing unto the uttermost part of the other were ten cubits.

25 And the other cherub was ten cubits: both the cherubims were of one measure and one size.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE POOLS OF SOLOMON—PART OF THE WATER SUPPLY OF THE MOSQUE OF OMAR. [I. Kings, vi:14.]—"So Solomon built the house, and finished it." We give a general view of the Pools of Solomon here because a part of the water which supplied the temple was brought to Jerusalem from this place. There are three of these pools. They are about nine miles from Jerusalem. The length of the upper cistern is about 380 feet, the breadth about 230 feet, the depth 25 feet. The middle cistern is 423 feet long, something over 200 feet broad, 39 feet deep. The lower cistern is 580 feet long, and over 200 feet broad, and 50 feet deep. The road from Hebron to Jerusalem passes just westward of them. Even to a recent day these cisterns sent water to the great mosque in Jerusalem, which is built on the site of Solomon's Temple.

wings of the cherubims, so that the wing of the one touched the one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall; and their wings touched one another in the midst of the house.

28 And he overlaid the cherubims with gold.

29 And he carved all the walls, of the house round about with carved figures of cherubims, and palm-trees, and open flowers, within and without.

30 And the floor of the house he overlaid with gold within and without.¹

31 ¶ And for the entering² of the oracle he made doors of olive-tree: the lintel and side-posts were a fifth part of the wall.

32 The two doors³ also were of olive-tree; and he carved upon them carvings of cherubims, and palm-trees, and open flowers,⁴ and overlaid them with gold, and spread gold upon the cherubims, and upon the palm-trees.

33 So also made he for the door of the temple posts of olive-tree, a fourth part⁵ of the wall.

34 And the two doors were of fir-tree: the two leaves of the one door were folding, and the two leaves of the other door were folding.

35 And he carved thereon cherubims, and palm-trees, and open flowers; and covered them with gold fitted upon the carved work.⁶

years in the erection of his royal palace.

Having made this general statement,

the historian proceeds to describe in detail the several parts of the magnificent structure. These were classed under four heads: 1. The house or rather hall of the forest of Lebanon. 2. The porch or adytum connected with it. 3. The throne-room or judgment-dwelling, which would now be called in the East the harem. Connected with the latter was a separate house for his Egyptian wife.—

reason why this house was so called.

That it was in or immediately adjoining to Jerusalem, seems evident from imagine the supreme court of law removed to any considerable distance. Still, it may have been sur-position, as may have suggested the name.

Bul, (which is the eighth month,)¹ was the house finished throughout all the parts thereof, and according to all the fashion of it.² So was he seven³ years in building it.

CHAPTER VII.

1 The building of Solomon's house. 2 Of the house of Lebanon. 6 Of the porch of pillars. 7 Of the porch of judgment. 8 Of the house for Pharaoh's daughter. 13 Hiram's work of the two pillars. 23 Of the molten sea. 27 Of the ten bases. 38 Of the ten lavers, 40 and all the other vessels.

BUT Solomon was building his own house thirteen⁴ years,¹ and he finished all his house.²

2 ¶ He built³ also the house of the forest of Lebanon,⁴ the length thereof was an hundred cubits, and the breadth thereof fifty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits, upon four rows of cedar-pillars, with cedar-beams upon the pillars.

3 And it was covered with cedar above upon the beams,⁵ that lay on forty-five pillars, fifteen in a row.

4 And there were windows in three rows, and light was against light⁶ in three ranks.

5 And all the doors and posts were square with the windows;⁷ and light was against light in three ranks.

6 ¶ And he made a porch of pillars; the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth thereof thirty cubits: and the porch was before them;⁸ and the other pillars and the thick beam were before them.⁹

7 ¶ Then¹ he made a porch for the throne where he might judge, even the porch² of judgment: and it was covered with cedar from one side of the floor to the other.³

8 ¶ And his house where he dwelt had height 30. The interior was 60 cubits long by 20 wide, and was divided by the veil into two chambers. The inner chamber, or holy of holies, was an exact cube, 20 cubits each way. The outer, or holy place, measured two cubes, being 40 cubits long, 20 wide, and 20 high. In front was a porch measuring half a cube, and containing the two pillars Jachin and Boaz. The door was in the east end, and in front of it was the great altar of burnt-offering. Along each side and the west end of the shrine was a range of small chambers for the priests, carried up in three stories to near the top of the temple walls. Above the whole rose a peaked roof 10 cubits high. The porch was remarkable. It was 120 cubits high. Probably each wing was carried up so as to form a great tower, resembling some of the English cathedrals. P.]

Ver. 37, 38. Never was such a magnificent structure on earth as this temple of Solomon. God himself had given the plan of it to David, 1 Ch. 28. 19. David and his princes prepared for the erection of it about 46,000 ton weight of gold and silver; amounting in all to about £942,719,750. About 183,600 Canaanites and Hebrews were employed in building it. It took about seven years to finish it. The whole top of Mount Moriah was inclosed within a wall to be a court for it. This court was divided into two: the outer for the clean Hebrews, which had an entrance from every side, but the principal one was from the east; and that of the royal family from the south-west: the inner court, separated from the outer by a low wall, was appointed for the priests and Levites. Here, just before the east end of the temple, stood the brazen altar, 36½ feet square, and 18½ high, with the brazen sea; ten lavers, five on each side of the entrance of the temple. Immediately westward from these was the porch of the temple, 36½ feet from north to south, and 18½ from east to west, and about 219 feet high: on each side it had an ornamental pillar of brass about 33 feet high. This served as a magnificent steeple, and as a place of shelter and prayer for the serving priests. Passing through this porch you entered into the sanctuary, an apartment about 73 feet long, 36½ broad, and 54½ high. This was illuminated by at least ten golden candlesticks; each of which had seven curiously adorned branches for lamps: five of these were placed on the north, and as many on the south side of the house. An equal number of golden tables, furnished each with 12 loaves of show-bread, stood on each side of the house, probably between the candlesticks. Close to the west end, in the middle, stood the golden altar of incense: passing by it, through a doorway hung with a fine veil, and having leaves for shutting it, the high-priest, on the day of atonement, entered into the Oracle, or most holy place. It was an apartment 36½ feet in length, and as much in breadth, and 54½ in height. Here, amidst perpetual darkness, was placed the ark, with its golden cherubims overshadowing it and the whole furniture. Solomon added two new cherubims of olive-trees, which stretched their wings over it and to the whole breadth of the house, each wing extending about 18 feet. The wall of this temple consisted of alternate rows of cedar planks and hewn stone, probably polished marble. The whole inside of the house was overlaid with fine gold, and curiously ornamented with figures of cherubims and palm-trees. On the outside of the wall were erected ninety chambers in three stories, for the accommodation of the priests who served at it. After Solomon had dedicated it to the service of God by solemn prayer and sacrifices, and God had taken possession of it, by the entrance of the cloud of glory, the priests, singers, and porters attended it in the order prescribed by king David. After it had stood about 416 years, and had been frequently pillaged, it was burned by Nebuchadnezzar. About 70 years after it was rebuilt, with inferior glory, by the captives who returned from Babylon. This had stood about 500 years when it was rebuilt with far more magnificence by Herod the Great; and a new court for the Gentiles was added; but in little more than 80 years after it was finally destroyed by the Romans, A.D. 72, 1 Ch. xvii. xxii.—xxix.; 2 Ch. ii.—viii.; 2 Ki. xxv.; Je. iii.; Ezr. ii.—vi.; Jn. i.

REFLECTIONS.—How little God regards pomp in his worship who wanted a temple so long in his holy nation! But when he calls for our substance, we ought cheerfully to give in proportion to our greatness and wealth. What we do in God's church should be done diligently, orderly, and peaceably. But a hearty obedience to his law is more valuable than the most expensive donations to his church. They who go forth with a desire to his glory, may confidently expect some tokens of his approbation. And whenever God, by his grace, begins a good work, he will finish it in his time. But great is our mercy that instead of a magnificent but carnal temple, we have now an incarnate, an ascended Redeemer! a glorious gospel church, planned, prepared for, erected, fashioned, and furnished by God:—that every believer is made a living temple for the Lord; and that in heaven we have a house eternal, immovable, incorruptible, and that faeth not away!

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 8. Like unto this porch. It is difficult, perhaps impossible, for those accustomed to European ideas of architecture to form any very accurate conception of Solomon's building. According another court within the porch, which was of the like work. Solomon made also an house for Pharaoh's daughter, whom he had taken to wife, like unto this porch.

9 ¶ All these ³ were of costly stones, according to the measures of hewed stones, sawed with saws, ⁴ within and without, even from the foundation unto the coping, and so on the outside toward the great court.

10 And the ⁴ foundation was of costly stones, even great stones, stones of ten cubits, and stones of eight cubits.

11 And above were costly stones (after the measures of hewed stones) and cedars.

12 And the great court round about was with ⁴ three rows of hewed stones, and a row of cedar-beams, both for the inner court of the house of the LORD, and for the porch of the house.

13 ¶ And king Solomon sent ⁵ and fetched Hiram ⁶ out of Tyre.

14 He was a widow's son ⁷ of the tribe of Naphtali, ⁸ and his father was a man of Tyre, a worker in brass; and he was ^mfilled with wisdom and understanding, and cunning to work all works in brass: and he came to king Solomon, and wrought all his work.

15 ¶ For he ⁿcast two pillars of brass, of eighteen cubits high apiece, ⁹ and a line of twelve cubits did compass either of them about.

16 And he made two chapters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars: the height of the one chapter ² was five cubits, and the height of the other chapter was five cubits:

17 And nets of checker-work, and wreaths of chain-work, for the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars; seven for the one chapter, and seven for the other chapter.

18 And he made the pillars, and two rows round about upon the one net-work, to cover the chapters that were upon the top with pomegranates: and so did he for the other chapter.

19 And the chapters that were upon the top of the pillars were of lily-work ⁴ in the porch, four cubits.

20 And the chapters upon the two pillars had pomegranates also above, over against the belly which was by the net-work: and the pomegranates were ^ptwo hundred, in rows round about upon the other chapter.

21 And ^q he set up the pillars in the porch of the temple: and he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof 'Jachin: ⁵ and he set up

35 And in the top of the base was there a round compass of a half cubit high: and on the top of the base, the ledges thereof and the borders thereof were of the same.

2 The wheels being intended for motion, the undersettors seem to have been intended for rest, so that when the laver was brought to its proper place, the weight might not rest altogether upon the axle. If shorter than the wheels they could have been of no use in bearing up the axle. But if equal, and of the very base itself, how could the wheels move? The whole is evidently the emblem of motion and stability—apparent contradictions, yet reconciled by Solomon. On the smooth floor of the temple the wheel must revolve, the undersetter slide—they must move, yet be steadfast.—C.

16 The clay was not used in the ordinary sense of moulds for the castings, such moulds being made of a species of fine sand, rendered adhesive by pressure. But such moulds can be formed only when there are metallic or wooden models. The clay in this case was used to form the castings, to form first the model of the interior of the vessel or figure, then to be covered by a layer of wax, of the proper thickness, and finished in form of the exterior. This being again covered with clay, the clay being dried, the wax is melted, thus leaving between the two surfaces a perfect mould for the vessel or figure required. In ruder castings of this description the wax is not required, but the internal and external moulds formed separately, and placed the one over the other. But in such a work as that of Hiram, with so many complicated figures, the clay and wax must probably were used as described.—C.

50 And the bowls, and the snuffers, and the basons, and the spoons, and the censers,⁵ of pure gold; and the hinges of gold, both for the doors of the inner-house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house, to wit, of the temple.

51 So was ended all the 'work that king Solomon made for the house of the LORD.⁶ And Solomon brought in the things⁷ which 'David his father had dedicated: even the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, did he put among the treasures of the house of the LORD.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The feast of the dedication of the temple. 12, 54 Solomon's blessing. 22 Solomon's prayer. 62 His sacrifice of peace-offerings.

¶ THEN Solomon¹ assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief¹ of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto king Solomon in Jerusalem, that they might 'bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the city of David, which is Zion.

2 And all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto king Solomon² at the 'feast in the month Ethanim, which is the seventh month.

3 And all the 'elders of Israel came, and the priests 'took up the ark.

4 And they brought up the 'ark of the LORD, and the 'tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, even those did the priests and the Levites bring up.

5 And 'king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel, that were assembled unto him, were with him before the ark, sacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not be told nor numbered for multitude.³

6 And 'the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, into the oracle of the house, to the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims.

7 For the 'cherubims spread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above.

8 And they drew out the staves, that the ends⁴ of the staves were seen out in the 'holy place before the oracle, and they were not seen without:⁵ and there they are unto this day.⁶

9 There 'was nothing in the ark save the planned and commenced a work of gigantic magnitude and boldness of design. He erected massive walls round the hill, filling up the space inclosed partly with earth and partly with enormous piers and arches. The south-east angle of the rampart, impending over the Kidron, has still an elevation of 133 feet, and the lower part is built of stones measuring from 10 to 30 feet in length; each course being 5 feet high. The south-western angle is no less than 190 feet high; and one of its stones which I measured, and which is placed 110 feet above the foundation, is 34 feet long, and weighs above 100 tons. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Great men may lodge and live in a manner becoming their station. But great builders had need to beware of neglecting to build up their own souls in their most holy faith, and of forgetting the building not made with hands, the house eternal in the heavens. If therefore we wish to be honoured let our great and earliest care be to honour God. It is an agreeable thing to have instruments employed in the church who are at once active, honest, and faithful. But great is our mercy, that instead of these material utensils we have the blessed Jesus as our pillar of stability and strength. We have him as the great propitiation—and full of grace and truth—to be our sea, our laver, for washing our hearts and hands in our approaches to, and dealings with, God.—We have him two tables of stone,⁵ which Moses put there at Horeb, when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.⁶

10 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud filled the house of the LORD, 11 So that the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD.

12 ¶ Then spake Solomon, The LORD said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.

13 I have surely built thee an house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide in for ever.

14 And the king turned his face about, and blessed all the congregation of Israel: (and all the congregation of Israel stood:)

15 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which spake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand fulfilled it, saying,

16 Since the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel to build an house, that my name might be therein; but I chose David to be over my people Israel.⁸

17 And it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

18 And the LORD said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart:

19 Nevertheless thou shalt not build the house; but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

20 And the LORD hath performed his word that he spake; and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

21 And I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ And Solomon stood before the altar of the LORD, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven.⁹

23 And he said, LORD God of Israel, there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, who keepest covenant and mercy

5 Aaron's rod, the pot of manna, and the copy of the law, formerly deposited there, must have been placed before or beside the ark; or it is possible these sacred relics had been purloined, perhaps at Bethshemesh, and if so that would well account for the heavy judgment there inflicted.

17 Solomon puts here an assertion in which the mercy and intervention of God would be indispensably requisite, and he earnestly bespeaks that mercy and intervention whenever the people should pray toward the holy place with sincerity and earnestness.—It would appear from this that it was the custom to take solemn oaths at the altar, whence arose the practice of swearing by the altar, Mat. 23. 30.—C.

with thy servants that walk before thee with all their heart;

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

25 Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, 'There shall not fail thee a man in my sight' to sit on the throne of Israel; so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me, as thou hast walked before me.

26 And now, O God of Israel, let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

27 But will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven, and heaven of heavens, cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?

28 Yet have thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee to-day:

29 That thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, 'My name shall be there; that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make toward this place.'

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 53. It will be useful in carefully reading and studying this prayer to compare the two reports of it—that given here, and that given in 2 Ch. 6. 1-39. Christian nations and the Christian church ought to learn from it important lessons:—I.

That afflictions, whether national, social, or individual, are often sent as chastisements for sins, and it is the duty of those afflicted to repent and turn to God. 2. That afflictions are sometimes sent, not so much as chastisements, as to arouse the careless, and to stir up Christians to more zeal. 3. That under every trial it is the duty of nations, churches, and individuals to resort to prayer and humiliation. 4. That we have reason to feel confident that God, in answer to earnest faithful prayer, will turn away his wrath and bestow blessings. P.]

47 Yet if they shall bethink themselves in the land whither they were carried captives, and repent, and make supplication unto thee in the land of them that carried them captives, saying, We have sinned, and have done perversely, we have committed wickedness;

48 And so return unto thee with all their heart, and with all their soul, in the land of their enemies which led them away captive, and pray unto thee toward their land which thou gavest unto their fathers, the city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name:

49 Then hear thou their prayer and their supplication in heaven thy dwelling-place, and maintain their cause,⁵

50 And forgive thy people that have sinned against thee, and all their transgressions wherein they have transgressed against thee, and give them compassion before them who carried them captive, that they may have compassion on them:

54 ¶ And it was so, that, when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the LORD, he arose from before the altar of the LORD, from kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven.

55 And he stood, and blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice, saying, ted its people. They were therefore most careful in ancient times, when removing from one country to another, to worship the deity peculiar to each country. There is unfortunately a relic of this superstition in Christian lands. Tutelary saints have taken the place of tutelary gods. The petition of Solomon had special reference to this form of idolatry. He prayed 'that all the nations of the earth may know that JEHOVAH he is God, and that there is none other.' P.]

56 Blessed be the LORD, that hath given rest unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised: there hath not failed one word of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant.

REFLECTIONS.—When religion prospers it is the subject of general joy to God's people: and when kings become nursing fathers to the church, courtiers will pretend much zeal for her interests. But it is pleasant to observe all ranks concur in the solemn worship of God. He rejoices to meet them who work righteousness, and remember him in all their ways, and to take up his abode with them. Though clouds and darkness be round about him, justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne, and mercy and truth go before his face. When God is present, and his Spirit poured out, with what liveliness do men observe the fulfilment of God's promises, and pour forth their prayers to him. The fervent petitions which are then presented to God, in the name of Christ our true temple, are always effectual, and available to nations, families, and individuals. What pardon—what healing—what purification—what victory—what deliverance, may they 61 Let your heart therefore be ^mperfect with the LORD our God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

62 ¶ And ^mthe king, and all Israel with him, offered sacrifice before the LORD.

63 And Solomon offered a ^osacrifice of peace-offerings, which he offered unto the LORD, two and twenty thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the king and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORD.²

64 The^o same day did the king hallow the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings; because ^tthe brazen altar that was before the LORD was too little to receive the burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings.

65 ¶ And at that time Solomon ^theld a feast, and all Israel with him, a great congregation, ^tfrom the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt, before the LORD our God, seven days and seven days, even fourteen days.

66 On ^tthe eighth day he sent the people away: and they blessed³ the king, and went unto their tents⁴ joyful and glad of heart, for all the goodness that the LORD had done for David his servant, and for Israel his people.

7 Then ^twill I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them: and this house, which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight; and Israel shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people:

The grateful sense of God's special favours thus enjoyed, the influences of his presence and grace, and the faith of his Son's mediation, most powerfully determine and constrain to a holy obedience to his laws. Such real and lively religion would make our meetings and partings on earth pleasant and happy. But how much more so shall our gathering to Jesus be, never to part, but to feast eternally on him as our great atonement, our only peace-offering, and our ALL and in ALL.

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 1. When Solomon had finished the building of the house of the Lord, and the king's house. It is recorded that 'the king's house' was not finished till thirteen years after the finishing of the temple, ch. 7. 1; are we therefore to conclude that the temple was not dedicated till after the secular works had been completed? We think not. We hold with Usher that the dedication took place eleven months after the building had been finished, ch. 8. 2.—Note. There is something peculiarly appropriate in God's appearing immediately after Solomon had finished his own house; for if ever there be a time when any man specially needs an admonition it is when he has completed for himself a dwelling-place, and, like the monarch of Babylon, is ready to say, 'Is not this great Babylon which I have built?' Da. 4. 30. And that wise men need this admonition as well as others the history of Solomon must testify. C.]

Ver. 13. [The word Galil signifies 'circuit' or 'ring,' and may at first have been given to one of the little circular upland plains amid the mountains of Naphtali. There is such a plain just beside Kedesh. From a comparison of ancient notices it appears that the circuit of Galilee lay on the level summit of a broad mountain ridge. Here were the towns offered by Solomon to Hiram. The latter, however, whose great want was

have been called the focus of Syria. In these mountains arise four great rivers. The Orontes flows northward, making Antioch possible; the Abana flows east, creating Damascus; the Litany flows west, and the Jordan flows south. Of these rivers only two reach the open sea—the Litany and the Orontes. The Jordan ends in the Dead Sea, and the Abana sinks out of sight in the Syrian desert. The Lebanon Mountains have always been celebrated for the great cedar trees which grow in them.

thou hast given me, 'my brother?' And he called them the land of Cabul⁷ unto this day.

15 ¶ And this is the reason of the 'levy which king Solomon raised; for 'to build the house of the LORD, and his own house, and 'Millo,¹ and the wall of Jerusalem, and 'Hazor, and 'Megiddo, and 'Gezer.

16 For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, 'Solomon's wife.

17 And 'Solomon built Gezer, and Beth-horon the nether, 21 Their children that were 'left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel also were not able utterly to destroy, upon those did Solomon 'levy a tribute of bond-service unto this day.

22 But 'of the children of Israel did Solomon make no bond-men:³ but they were men of war, and his servants, and his princes, and his captains, and rulers of his chariots, and his horsemen.

23 These 'were the chief of the officers that were over Solomon's work, five hundred and fifty, which bare rule over the people that wrought in the work.

24 ¶ But 'Pharaoh's daughter came up out of the city of David unto her house which Solomon had built for her: then did 'he build Millo.

25 ¶ And 'three times in a year did Solomon offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings upon the altar which he built unto the LORD, and 'he burnt incense upon the altar that was before the LORD. So he finished the house.⁴

26 ¶ And king Solomon made a navy of ships in Ezion-geber, which is beside Eloth, on the shore of the Red sea, in the land of Edom.⁵

27 And Hiram sent in the navy his servants, shipmen that had knowledge of the sea, 'with the servants of Solomon.

28 And they came to 'Ophir,⁶ and fetched from thence gold, 'four hundred and twenty talents, and brought it to king Solomon.

CHAPTER X.

1 The queen of Sheba admireth the wisdom of Solomon. 14 Solomon's yearly revenue in gold. 16 His targets. 18 The throne of ivory. 21 His vessels. 24 His presents. 26 His chariots and horsemen. 28 His tribute.

AND when the 'queen of Sheba¹ heard of the fame of Solomon concerning the name of the LORD, she came to prove him with hard questions.

2 And she came to Jerusalem with a 'very great train, with camels that bare 'spices, and very much gold, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

3 And Solomon 'told her all her questions: there was not any thing hid from the king, which he told her not.

4 ¶ And when the queen of Sheba had seen all Solomon's 'wisdom, and the house that he had built,

5 And 'the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel, and his cup-bearers, and his 'ascent by which he went up unto the house of the LORD;² there was no more spirit in her.

6 And she 'said to the king, It was a true report that I heard in mine own land of thy acts,³ and of thy wisdom.

7 Howbeit 'I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it; and, behold, the half was not told me: thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard.⁴

8 Happy⁵ are thy men, happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and that hear thy wisdom.

REFLECTIONS.—The Lord bears the greatest regard to his people's hearty and solemn worship of himself. Everywhere his eyes are on the righteous, and his ears are open to their cry. If we would secure to our children the entail of God's blessings, we must leave them the examples of our fidelity. But if our growth in grace does not correspond with our privileges, the best forms of religion will but delude and destroy us. How gracious are God's rewards of his people's obedience; and how severe his corrections of their transgressions! While we tremble at the ruin of Israel and their temple, let our care be to take fast hold of the better covenant, which is established upon better promises, and in which men are kept, by the power of God, through faith unto salvation. Generous minds are forward to discharge their obligations if it be in their power. But very diversified are the sentiments of men concerning worldly things. Nothing but Jesus Christ and God in him is answerable to every need, every state, every mind. And it is glorious when great activity in secular business is attended with a proportionate ardour in religion. They who make God's glory their first concern may expect his blessing upon the work of their hands; for at his command both earth and sea shall concur to enrich them.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 5. There can be little doubt that reference is here made to some grand entrance which Solomon had made to the temple. This entrance must have been from the palace; but the palace stood on Zion and the temple on Moriah; and between the two was the deep ravine of Tyropæon. Now we learn from Josephus that one of the most stupendous works of ancient Jerusalem was the bridge which connected the outer court of the temple with the palace on Zion, spanning the Tyropæon. The remains of it still exist, and recent excavations have enabled us to form

STABLES OF SOLOMON. [I. Kings, x:28.]—"And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt." In this picture we have the vaults which are found under the temple area. A tourist in 1722 gives a distinct account of these stables. One traveler represents them as capable of accommodating 2,000 horses, and it is thought that they were used in the times of crusades as stables. The floor of this vault is a little over 38 feet below the level of the pavement above. The arches are 11 feet 5 inches in span, and 5 feet 9 inches in height. The aisles open from south to north. Here the Jews sought refuge during the struggle against the Romans. Solomon's intercourse with Egypt brought horses into use in Israel. He was the first to ride in a chariot through the streets of Jerusalem.

10 ¶ And she gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store, and precious stones: there came no more such abundance of spices as these which the queen of Sheba gave to king Solomon.⁵

11 And the navy also of Hiram, that brought gold from Ophir, brought in from Ophir great plenty of almug-trees,⁶ and precious stones.

12 And the king made of the almug-trees 'pillars' for the house of the LORD, and for the king's house, harps also and psalteries for singers: there came no such almug-trees, nor were seen unto this day.

13 And king Solomon gave unto the queen of Sheba all 'her desire, whatsoever she asked, besides that which Solomon gave her of his royal bounty. So 'she turned and went to her own country, she and her servants.

14 ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred threescore and six talents⁷ of gold, 15 Besides that he had of the merchant-men, and of the traffick of the spice-merchants, and of all the kings of Arabia, and of the governors of the country.

16 ¶ And king Solomon made 'two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels⁸ of gold went to one target.⁹

17 And he made 'three hundred shields of beaten gold; three pound¹ of gold went to one shield:² and the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

18 ¶ Moreover, the king 'made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with the best gold.

19 The throne had six steps, and the top of the throne was round behind:³ and there were stays⁴ on either side on the place of the seat, and two lions stood beside the stays.

20 And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps: there was not the like⁵ made in any kingdom.

21 ¶ And 'all king Solomon's drinking-vessels were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold; none were of silver:⁶ it was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon.⁷

22 For the king had at sea a navy of 'Tharshish⁸ with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, 'ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

23 So king Solomon 'exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom.

24 ¶ And 'all the earth sought to Solomon, to hear his wisdom, which God had put in his heart.

25 And 'they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and garments, and armour, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

1 Solomon's wives and concubines. 4 In his old age they drew him to idolatry. 9 God threateneth him. 14 Solomon's adversaries were Hadad, who was entertained in Egypt. 23 Rezon, who reigned in Damascus, 26 and Jeroboam, to whom Ahijah had prophesied. 41 Solomon's acts, reign, and death: Rehoboam succeedeth him.

some estimate of its colossal dimensions. The breadth of the roadway was 50 feet; the span of each arch was 45 feet, and there were five arches; and the total height above the bed of the Tyropæon was 225 feet. The stones with which it was built were of colossal size; the spring-stones of one arch which are still in position measure 24 feet in length by 6 in thickness. I am inclined to believe that this was 'the ascent by which Solomon went up into the house of the Lord.' P.]

Ver. 28. [This is a very obscure passage. The meaning of the Hebrew word translated 'linen yarn' is much controverted. Some say it means 'toll' or 'duty'; some 'a band' or 'troop'; some a proper name with a preposition prefixed; some 'a cord' by which troops of horses were fastened. I prefer the interpretation of Gesenius, who renders the verse as follows:—'And the horses of Solomon were brought out of Egypt; and a band of the king's merchants brought up a band (of horses) at a fixed price.' This interpretation requires a change in the Masoretic accents, and would represent the merchants of Solomon as having entered into an arrangement with the Egyptian government to pay a gross sum of duty on each troop of horses. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—So respectable is true wisdom that one cannot purchase it too dear or fetch it too far; nor hath God confined it to one sex more than another. And such as have real knowledge should delight in the communication of it. But especially let us observe that God, on every occasion, has taken delight to prefigure the gathering of the Gentiles to Jesus Christ, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Good order in families, courts, and kingdoms is extremely amiable and useful; and to enjoy the converse of such as are wise in the things of God is a great and unspeakable mercy: but God, who is the author of all our mercies, deserves the praise of them all. Mutual presents are pledges of friendship: but happiest of all is friendship with God. Prosperity in earthly enjoyments shall attend the active honouring of him, if for the real good of his people, but the most certain prosperity of soul. The Almighty himself is their gold; and they shall have plenty of silver.

But in these labours, these glories of Solomon, let me contemplate the infinitely greater one, even Jesus Christ our Prince of Peace. He is JEDIDIAH, the darling of the Lord. His birth is our consolation against griefs and woes unnumbered. He is infinitely peaceful, prudent, and wise; and to him everything is naked and open. Notwithstanding oppositions innumerable, he was solemnly chosen, anointed, and enthroned by his Father. Justly he punishes the guilty and rewards the virtuous, particularly such as have favoured his cause in distress. Wisely he judges his subjects, and will judge the world. In infinite wisdom he indites and applies his revelations of truth. At infinite expense he builds the temple of his church, and consecrates her to God by his great sacrifice of himself and his prevalent intercession. Plentifully he enriches and prudently he governs his people in his extensive dominions. Great is the peace, the safety, the glory of his reign! and no report can sufficiently describe his glory and wisdom. Happy they who are his servants, behold his beauty, and for ever inquire reverently in his temple! And blessed be the Lord that multitudes, chiefly of Gentile sinners, are brought to him, admire his excellency, and labour in his service: nay, captivated with his love, grace, and beauty, abide in his house for ever.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 3. His wives turned away his heart. Hitherto we have viewed Solomon as the MILITARY MOSQUE, DAMASCUS—THE CITY PASSED BY ABRAHAM, WHEN HE CAME UP FROM UR, OF THE CHALDEES. [1. Kings, xi:24.]—"And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, when David slew them of Zobah; and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus." In going from Jerusalem to Damascus we pass through the gate in the west wall, and before reaching the center of the city we pass the military mosque on the side of the Abana river. Here the soldiers are quartered, and this building is both a place of worship and a barrack. Turkish soldiers are always in evidence in Damascus, and it is well that they are. Life and property would not be safe here without them. The foreign policy of the northern king of Israel was very much occupied in its relations to Damascus. During the reign of Solomon, Rezon made himself king of Damascus, and we learn from the 25th verse of the 11th chapter of 1. Kings that he was an adversary of Israel all the days of Solomon.

2 Of the nations concerning which the LORD said unto the children of Israel, 'Ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you; for surely they will turn away your heart after their gods. Solomon clave unto these in love.

3 And he had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines: and his wives turned away his heart.

4 For it came to pass, when Solomon was old,^a that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father.

5 For Solomon went after 'Ashtaroth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after 'Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites.

6 And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father.

7 Then did Solomon build an high place for 'Chemosh the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for 'Molech the abomination of the children of Ammon.^b

8 And likewise did he for all his strange wives, which burnt incense, and sacrificed unto their gods.^c

9 ¶ And the LORD was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the LORD God of Israel, which had appeared unto him twice,

10 And had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the LORD commanded.

11 Wherefore the LORD said unto Solomon, Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou hast not kept my covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant.

12 Notwithstanding in thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son.

13 Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom; but will give one tribe^d to thy son, for^e David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen.

14 ¶ And the LORD stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: he was of the king's seed in Edom,³

15 For^e it came to pass, when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, after he had smitten every male in Edom,

16 (For six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom),⁴

17 That Hadad fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a little child.⁵

18 And they arose out of 'Midian,⁶ and came to 'Paran: and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt; which gave him an house, and appointed him victuals, and gave him land.

19 And Hadad found great favour in the sight of Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the queen.

20 And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's house:⁷ and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh.

21 And when Hadad heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab the captain of the host was dead, Hadad said to Pharaoh, Let me depart,⁸ that I may go to mine own country.

22 Then Pharaoh said unto him, But what hast thou lacked with me, that, behold, thou seekest to go to thine own country? And he answered, Nothing:⁹ howbeit let me go in any wise.

23 ¶ And God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Eliadah, which fled from his lord Hadadezer king of Zobah:

24 And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, when David slew them of Zobah: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus.¹

25 And he was an adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon, besides the mischief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.

26 ¶ And Jeroboam the son of Nebat, an sun in his splendour, now we must view him sadly clouded and eclipsed. Blessed with unexampled and uninterrupted prosperity he forgets the God who gave it, breaks his law in principle, comp. Ex. 34. 16; De. 7. 3, with ver. 1, and in the letter, comp. De. 17. 17 with ver. 3, and forfeits all his character for wisdom by the lowest act of human folly—building temples for idols, and patronizing, if not joining in, their abominable worship, ver. 7, 8.—Note, His falling away is certain, ver. 4; God's displeasure revealed, ver. 9; of his repentance nothing is said—a silence that speaks volumes of warning to backsliders who have 'forgotten their first love.' One ray of hope arises from the reservation in the word 'fully,' ver. 6; and the favourable reference to his name by our blessed Redeemer, Mat. 12. 42. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Lord, what is man! Is this

Solomon—the beloved of the Lord—the miracle of wisdom—the man of prayer—the builder of the temple! How art thou fallen from heaven, O son of the morning! How ensnaring is the inordinate love of women! Every indulgence given to lewd desires only renders them more insatiable: and they who give way to one wilful sin never know when or where they shall stop. Indulgence of fleshly lusts makes the heart brutish and stupefies the conscience: and even sumptuous fare too fearfully pampers our lusts. No present attainment of gifts or grace, without continued watchfulness, will secure us against the most shameful falls. How sad, how stumbling, when the old age of once famous saints becomes a long and continued scene of profligacy! Alas! how Solomon's inordinate love of horses issues in an inordinate love of base women; and this in a multiplication of abominable idols! How the aged saint is ensnared by youthful lusts! How the wisest sage is made an arrant fool by silly women! How the man who so often warned others against levity and whoredom, turns out a monster of villainy! How the man once so familiar with his God is plunged into the vilest depths of fellowship with Satan and his most abominable agents! Let me then always suspect my corruptions and depend on the grace that is in Christ Jesus. Let me never covet great prosperity which hath so great snares attending it. Nay, if I have made a great profession of religion, let me take heed lest Satan render me a remarkable reproach to it. Never let me expect that base ingratitude and wilful disobedience will pass unpunished. But God never deals with his people in such severity as they deserve. For Jesus' sake he defers his anger, and in wrath remembers mercy. But, alas! how sin turns peace into Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, (whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman,) even he lifted up his hand against the king.

27 And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king: Solomon built Millo,² and repaired³ the breaches of the city of David his father.

28 And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour: and Solomon seeing the young man that he was industrious, he made him ruler over all the charge of the house of Joseph.⁴

29 And it came to pass at that time, when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet Ahijah the Shilonite found him in the way; and he had clad himself with a new garment; and they two were alone in the field:

30 And Ahijah caught the new garment that was on him, and rent it in twelve pieces.⁵

31 And he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee:

32 (But he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel:)

33 Because⁶ that they have forsaken me,⁶ and have worshipped Ashtarothe goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon,⁷ and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did David his father.

34 Howbeit I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand: but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David my servant's sake, whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes:

35 But I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes.⁸

36 And unto his son will I give one tribe,⁹ that David my servant may have a light alway before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there.

37 And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign according to all that thy soul desireth, and shalt be king over Israel.

g ch. 9. 15. It is difficult to decide what Millo was, but the best information may be obtained by consulting 2 Sa. 5. 9. 1 Ki. 9. 15. 2 Ki. 12. 20. 1 Ch. 12. 24. Ch. 32. 3. Some have supposed it to have been a valley which Solomon filled up; however, it evidently was a building, and was of the chief defences of Jerusalem, 2 Ch. 32. 3. From comparing Jer. 9. 6 with the above quotations, it appears not improbable that Millo was a name for a building comprehending a fortress and senate-house, or kind of forum for public assemblies.—C.

4 The part of the building allotted of Eubrah and Manasseh, the expense and labour of which, together with the probable character of Millo, as a citadel, not for defending, but overruling the city, may have laid the foundation of Jeroboam's rebellion.—C.

5 These were symbolical of the twelve tribes. The whole emblematic action seems to imply that the garment belonged to the prophet, and not to Jeroboam, and that he purposely provided himself with a new garment, and he gave ten parts of it to Jeroboam.—J.

8 Neither the design of God, nor the declaration of the prophet, excused Jeroboam's rebellion. David was faithful to Saul long after he had been anointed in his room. Jeroboam, moreover, instead of seeking to secure the promise by obedience, endeavoured to establish his throne by disobedience, and hence forfeited the kingdom both for himself and his posterity.—J.

10 The reasons of the assembly being held at Shechem do not appear. The most probable are: (1) It was situated between Ebal and Gerizim, where the blessings and curses of the law had been nationally announced, De. 11. 29. (2) It was the place of assembly for Joshua's last charge, Jos. xxiv. (3) It was an ancient place of coronation, Ju. ix. (4) It was a capacious valley, and much better suited to such a popular assembly than any around Jerusalem.

(5) The leaven of disobedience that was evidently working, led most probably to the selection of a 'mustering place,' distant from the influence of Jerusalem. It is the present called Nabulus, and is still a considerable town, beautifully situated amidst gardens and groves.—C.

GARDENS OF SHECHEM—WHERE REHOBAM WAS CROWNED KING OF ISRAEL. [I. KINGS, xii : 1.]—"And Rehoboam went to Shechem; for all Israel were come to Shechem to make him king." Rehoboam was the son of Solomon, by the Ammonite princess Naamah (I. Kings, xiv : 21.) He selected Shechem as the place of his coronation, 975 B. C. The people at Shechem demanded a remission of the severe burdens imposed by Solomon, but Rehoboam rejected the advice of his father's counsellors, and followed that of his young courtiers, and returned an insulting answer, which resulted in an open rebellion among the tribes. He fled to Jerusalem, the tribes of Judah and Benjamin alone remaining true to him. Jeroboam was made king of the Northern tribes. During Rehoboam's lifetime peaceful relations between Israel and Judah were never restored. In the fifth year of Rehoboam's reign Jerusalem was captured by the Egyptian Shishak.

wilt be a servant unto this people³ this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and which stood before him:

9 And he said unto them, 'What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter?

10 And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us; thus shalt thou say unto them, 'My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.⁴

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying, Come to me again the third day.

13 And the king answered the people roughly,⁵ and forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him;

14 And spake to them after the counsel of the young men, saying, 'My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 Wherefore the king hearkened not unto the people: for the cause was from the LORD, that he might perform his saying, which the LORD spake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 ¶ So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people answered the king, saying, 'What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David. So Israel departed unto their tents.

17 But as for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent Adoram, who was over the tribute;⁶ and all Israel stoned him

⁴ The scorpion is a poisonous animal, perhaps considered hideous because it is known to be dangerous and whose sting causes exquisite pain, or even death. It is here supposed by the rabbins to be a name for a scourge with sharp thorny twigs and knots. Others derive the name from an Arabian shrub called the scorpion. It is here the appropriate emblem of folly, cruelty, and tyranny.—Note. How thankful should a people be for a merciful government, where law, not will, governs, and where mercy and justice preside in every court and decision!—C.—Here a simple scourge is contrasted with another more painful. The latter is called a scorpion, probably to denote the pain occasioned by the scourge and the reptile. Isidore, and after him Calmer, assert that it was a sort of severe whip, the lashes of which were armed with iron points; while others say it was a long bag of leather, filled with sand, and stuck full of spikes.—I.

19 So Israel rebelled against the house of David unto⁷ this day.⁸

20 ¶ And it came to pass, when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only.⁹

21 ¶ And when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon.

22 But the word of God came unto Shemaiah the man of God, saying,

23 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people,¹ saying,

24 Thus saith the LORD, 'Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; for this thing is from me.² They hearkened therefore to the word of the LORD, and returned to depart, according to the word of the LORD.

25 ¶ Then Jeroboam built Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein; and went out from thence, and built Penuel.³

26 ¶ And Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David:

27 If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah.

28 Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto them, 'It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

29 And he set the one in Beth-el,⁴ and the other put he in Dan.

REFLECTIONS.—Sin is but a bad way of building families. By all his wives Solomon seems to have had but one son, and he a fool. Neither wisdom nor grace runs in the blood. And often the best instructions are thrown away upon children; especially if the parent has practically disregarded them himself. Some factious spirits are always ready to blow up the coals of sedition; and often their vile designs lurk under the most specious appearances. It is astonishing that we hear no complaint of Solomon's idolatry when we hear so much of his oppressive servitude. But most men seek their own, not the things of Jesus Christ. They are more concerned to save their money than their souls. That government is but in a tottering condition which subsists by severity, and where the king does not reign in the hearts of his subjects. They are our best friends who dissuade us from our rash designs, and they our worst enemies who soothe our folly and flatter our pride. It is mad to give true causes of provocation to those who are already provoked and made priests of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi.⁷

32 And Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast that is in Judah; and he offered upon the altar, (so did he in Beth-el,) sacrificing unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Beth-el the priests of the high places which he had made.

33 So he offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had devised of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he offered upon the altar, and burnt incense.¹

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Jeroboam's hand, that offered violence to him that prophesied against his altar at Bethel, withereth, 6 and at the prayer of the prophet is restored. 7 The prophet, refusing the king's entertainment, departeth from Bethel. 11 An old prophet, seducing him, bringeth him back. 20 He is reproved by God, 23 slain by a lion, 26 buried by the old prophet, 31 who confirmeth his prophecy. 33 Jeroboam still persisteth in his evil courses.

AND, behold, there came a man of God out of Judah by the word of the LORD unto Beth-el: and Jeroboam stood by the altar to burn incense.

2 And he cried against the altar in the word of the LORD, and said, O altar, altar! thus saith the LORD, Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, Josiah by name, and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be burnt upon thee.¹

3 And he gave a sign the same day, saying, This is the sign which the LORD hath spoken; Behold, the altar shall be rent, and the ashes that are upon it shall be poured out.

4 And it came to pass, when king Jeroboam heard the saying of the man of God, which had cried against the altar in Beth-el, that he put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him. And his hand, which he put forth against him, dried up, so that he could not pull it in again to him.

5 The altar also was rent, and the ashes poured out from the altar, according to the sign which the man of God had given by the word of the LORD.

But certain it is, that the calamitous death by the lion was peculiarly fitted to awaken inquiry concerning the message from heaven, and this might prove an unspeakable blessing to many Israelites, by leading them to repent of their idolatry.—Davieson. 2 Pe. 1. 19. Ga. 2. 18. ver. 9.

LORD thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored me again. And the man of God besought the LORD, and the king's hand was restored him again, and became as it was before.

7 And the king said unto the man of God, Come home with me, and refresh thyself, and I will give thee a reward.²

8 And the man of God said unto the king, If thou wilt give me half thine house, I will not go in with thee, neither will I eat bread nor drink water³ in this place:

9 For so was it charged me by the word of the LORD, saying, Eat no bread, nor drink water,⁴ nor turn again by the same way that thou camest.⁵

10 So he went another way, and returned not by the way that he came to Beth-el.

11 Now there dwelt an old prophet in Beth-el; and his sons came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father.

12 And their father said unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went which came from Judah.

13 And he said unto his sons, Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass: and he rode thereon;

14 And went after the man of God, and found him sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am.

15 Then he said unto him, Come home with me, and eat bread.

16 And he said, I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee; neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place:

17 For it was said to me by the word of the LORD, Thou shalt eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest.

18 He said unto him, I am a prophet⁶ also as thou art; and an angel spake unto me by the word of the LORD, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto him.

19 So he went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.

without cause. But it is common at courts to study the pleasure of the king more than the profit of the kingdom. And God fulfils his purposes, promises, and threatenings by the follies as well as by the crimes of mankind. When people once become unreasonable, they will not stick to condemn and calumniate the best of kings and the best of governments. And they who by oppression drive men into rebellion must blame themselves for the mischiefs which they incur. Princes, once infatuated in their counsels, readily add one blunder to another, running to the various extremes of haughtiness, silly compliance, and open violence. We often see the miseries which our follies occasion when it is too late to remedy them. Hasty words often produce endless mischiefs. But love to our brethren should make us put up with many injuries, rather than seek to redress them in a manner which may be ruinous to both: and when God's will contradicts our designs, we must submit without delay. If we fight against him, there can be no hope of success. Wicked princes soon forget the express conditions on which God granted them their power. And with infinite infamy, guilt, and danger to themselves and their subjects, they model the worship of God after patterns of human invention which they have seen, or which, by contrariety to what God has appointed, most gratifies their enmity against him. But to secure our safety by sin is only to hasten our ruin. Great men's examples are grievously infectious: and most subjects are ready to comply with any form of religion which their rulers please to appoint.

CHAPTER XIII. REFLECTIONS.—God warns men before he strikes. And his prophets must, without fear of the greatest or the worst, faithfully declare his messages. Nothing, however contingent or distant in futurity, is unknown to God: he has definite complete knowledge with respect to even the smallest circumstances of our lot. Shame and disgrace attend sin and sinners at last. Most daring is their presumption who persecute the faithful messengers of God: but faithful rebukes will often provoke proud wrath. Faithful preachers are the butt of wicked men's malice; but God will protect them. In the way of duty we need

20 ¶ And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that the word of the LORD came unto the prophet that brought him back.⁸

21 And he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch^b as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee, 22 But camest back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the place of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; thy carcass shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back.

24 And when he was gone, a lion⁹ met him by the way, and slew him; and his carcass was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcass.

25 And, behold, men passed by, and saw the carcass cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcass: and they came and told it in the city where the old prophet dwelt.

26 ¶ And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the LORD; therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath torn him, and slain him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake unto him.

27 And he spake to his sons, saying, Saddle me the ass. And they saddled him.

28 And he went, and found his carcass cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcass: the lion had not eaten the carcass nor torn the ass.¹

29 And the prophet took up the carcass of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back; and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn and to bury him.

30 And he laid his carcass in his own grave; and they mourned over him, saying, Alas, my brother!²

31 And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried; lay my bones beside his bones:

32 For the saying which he cried by the word of the LORD against the altar in Beth-el, and against all the houses of the high places which are in the cities of Samaria, shall surely come to pass.

33 ¶ After this thing Jeroboam returned not from his evil way,³ but made again of the lowest of the people priests of the high places: whosoever would, he consecrated him, and he became one of the priests of the high places.

34 And this thing became sin unto the house of Jeroboam, even to cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth.

CHAPTER XIV

1 Ahijah being sick, Jeroboam sendeth his wife disguised with presents to the prophet Ahijah at Shiloh. 5 Ahijah, forewarned by God, denounceth God's judgments. 17 Ahijah dieth, and is buried. 19 Nadab succeedeth Jeroboam. 21 Rehoboam's wicked reign. 25 Shishak spoileth Jerusalem. 29 Ahijah succeedeth Rehoboam.

AT that time Ahijah the son of Jeroboam fell sick.

2 And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam,¹ and get thee to Shiloh: behold, there is Ahijah the prophet, which told me that I should be king over this people.

3 And take with thee² ten loaves, and cracknels,³ and a cruse⁴ of honey, and go to him: he shall tell thee what shall become of the child.

4 And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, and went to Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah: but Ahijah could not see; for his eyes were set by reason of his age.

5 ¶ And the LORD said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son; for he is sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her: for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself to be another woman.

6 And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I am sent to thee with heavy tidings.

7 Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Forasmuch as I exalted thee fear no danger. But it is infinitely dangerous to condemn God's warnings, when he can so easily make us monuments of his justice. They who in prosperity condemn the messengers of God, may soon be obliged by their troubles to have recourse to their prayers. Nor must saints ever be averse to pray even for them who despitefully use them.—Impenitent sinners are in general more affected with their sufferings than with their sins: neither mercies nor judgments will make any lasting impression upon reprobates. And men are often more ready to thank the instruments of their deliverance than to thank God, the author of them. God and his faithful servants detest false worship, and everything which contributes to the support of it: and we should rather deny ourselves the common comforts of life than have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. How dangerous enemies to God's people are false prophets and unfaithful ministers, who pretend intercourse with God! Men may be seduced to evil by appearances of piety, when no fears of suffering can drive them to it. And none who have seduced us. God severely punishes the disobedience of his dearest saints; and yet how marvelously he bounds their trouble! How great his divine power in permitting the tempter to escape while the seduced is so awfully punished! How necessary is constant readiness for death! But hypocrites in vain claim kindred to and connection with the people of God, and wish their last end to be like theirs.—God will never want witnesses for his cause. If the man of God be dead, the false prophet must attest his warnings. And how desperate those sinners who, after repeated warnings, corrections, and mercies, continue impenitent! For, sooner or later, the judgment of God will overtake the sinner, and he shall perish in his own deceivings.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 14.] The concluding part of this verse is very obscure. The Hebrew words may be literally translated as follows:—'... who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam.—This is the day. And what, even now?' The meaning seems to be that Ahijah, after predicting the fall of Jeroboam's house, was enabled by prophetic vision to see its near approach, from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel,

8 And "rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee; and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, 'who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes;'

9 But 'hast done evil above all that were before thee: for thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images, to provoke me to anger, and 'hast cast me behind thy back:

10 Therefore, behold, 'I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam 'him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up and left in Israel, and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away 'dung, till it be all gone.

11 Him* that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat: for the LORD hath spoken it.

12 Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine own house; and 'when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall die.

13 And all Israel 'shall mourn for him, and bury him; for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave, because in him there is found some* good thing toward the LORD God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam.

14 Moreover, 'the LORD shall raise him up a king over Israel, who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day: but what? 'even now.

15 For the LORD 'shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water, and he shall root up Israel out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter them beyond the river, because they have made their groves, provoking the LORD to anger.

16 And 'he shall give Israel up, because of the sins of Jeroboam, 'who did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

17 ¶ And Jeroboam's wife arose, and departed, and came to 'Tirzah: and 'when she came to the threshold of the door, the child died;

18 And they buried him: and all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by the hand of his servant Ahijah the prophet.

19 ¶ And 'the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he warred, and how he reigned, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

20 And the days which Jeroboam reigned were two and twenty years: and he slept with his fathers, and Nadab his son reigned in his stead.

21 ¶ And Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned in Judah. Rehoboam was forty and one years old when he began to reign; and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there: and his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

22 And Judah did evil in the sight of the LORD, and they provoked him to jealousy with their sins which they had committed, above all that their fathers had done.

23 For they also built them high places and images, and groves, on every high hill, and under every green tree.

24 And there were also sodomites in the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

25 ¶ And it came to pass, in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem:

26 And he took away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he even took away all: and he took away all the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

27 And king Rehoboam made in their stead brass shields, and committed them unto the hands of the chief of the guard, which kept the door of the king's house.

28 And it was so, when the king went into the house of the LORD, that the guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard-chamber.

29 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

30 And there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days.

and then he broke out into the abrupt exclamation—'This is the day: i.e. the time is at hand when it shall happen. 'And what even now' is about to occur? The son and heir of Jeroboam is just expiring. His only hope of succession is gone. P.]

Ver. 17. [Tirzah was an ancient city of Ephraim, in the mountains, beautifully situated, about 4 miles north of Shechem. Its site is now occupied by the large village of Telluzah. P.]

Ver. 26. [A fuller account of Shishak's invasion is given in 2 Ch. 12. 2-9. He has been identified as the first of the Diospolitan dynasty. His name occurs on Egyptian tablets in the form Sheshouk. He appears to have been an Ethiopian, and to have dethroned Pharaoh, Solomon's father-in-law. In Karnak there is a bas-relief representing him bearing to the feet of his gods the chiefs of vanquished nations; and among them is one with a Jewish physiognomy, and having the inscription Yuda Melki, 'kingdom of Judah.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—When God visits our family with his rod, we ought to search out the sinful cause. And as sickness and death are equally the lot of young and old, we should always expect and prepare for it. It is common for sinners to be more anxious about the removal of their troubles than of their sins; and under whom they heartily hate. But it is absolutely folly for those who do evil to expect from God's faithful ministers an answer of peace. It is daring to attempt imposing upon them, however aged and blind. But as no covering can hide the hypocrite from the eye of God, no presents, nor compliments, nor flattery must ever divert a minister from a bold and free declaration of the mind of God. Fearfully confounded will such imposers appear when he discovers them, especially at his awful bar. And ingratitude for singular favours, and seduction of others to sin, entail upon the transgressors the most terrible ruin. God tenderly bestows his grace upon all, even the worst of families. He takes of such the greatest care, and often removes them from the evil to come by an honourable death. How amiable is early religion! and happy is it to be early ripe for, and transported to, the joy of the Lord! At the same time it is a fearful prelude of destruction to families or nations when the godly GOVERNMENT CAFE, DAMASCUS—THE CITY WHERE BEN-HADAD LIVED, TO WHOM ASA SENT THE GOLD AND SILVER THAT WERE IN THE HOUSE OF THE LORD. [I. Kings, xv:18.]—"Then Asa took all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hands of his servants: and King Asa sent them to Ben-hadad, the son of Tabrimon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, that dwelt in Damascus." Ben-hadad was the name which several of the princes of Damascus bore, as Pharaoh was the name of the kings of Egypt.

Damascus is the oldest city in the world. Shakespeare refers to the story that the murder of Abel took place here in King Henry VI:

"Winchester:—Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot;
This be Damascus, be thou cursed king
To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt."

This city was founded before Balbek and Palmyra. It is in the midst of a desert, and the Abana river is its life. The government cafe is simply one of the many coffee gardens of the city.

LORD, and walked in the way of his father, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

27 ¶ And Baasha the son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, conspired against him: and Baasha smote him at Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines; (for Nadab and all Israel laid siege to Gibbethon;)

28 Even in the third year of Asa king of Judah did Baasha slay him, and reigned in his stead.

29 And it came to pass, when he reigned, that he smote all the house of Jeroboam; he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed, until he had destroyed him, according unto the saying of the LORD, which he spake by his servant Ahijah the Shilonite.

30 Because of the sins of Jeroboam which he sinned, and which he made Israel sin, by his provocation wherewith he provoked the LORD God of Israel to anger.

31 Now the rest of the acts of Nadab, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

32 ¶ And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

33 In the third year of Asa king of Judah began Baasha the son of Ahijah to reign over all Israel in Tirzah, twenty and four years.

34 And he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

1, 7 Jehu's prophecy against the house of Baasha. 5 Elah succeedeth him. 8 Zimri conspiring against Elah succeedeth him. 11 Zimri executeth Jehu's prophecy. 15 Omri, made king by the soldiers, forceth Zimri desperately to burn himself. 21 The people being divided, Omri prevaileth against Tibni. 23 Omri buildeth Samaria. 25 His wicked reign. 27 Ahab succeedeth him. 29 Ahab's most wicked reign. 34 Joshua's curse fulfilled upon Hiel the builder of Jericho.

THEN the word of the LORD came to Jehu the son of Hanani against Baasha, saying,

2 Forasmuch as I exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel, and thou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and hast made my people Israel to sin, to provoke me to anger with their sins;

3 Behold, I will take away the posterity of Baasha, and the posterity of his house; and will make thy house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

1 He doubtless left the dead bodies of Jeroboam's family unburied, as Ahijah had foretold, ch. 14. 9-14. Baasha soon showed that his motive for this massacre was his own malice and ambition, and that in gratifying his thirst for blood he might secure his usurped authority; for though he roots out the sinners, he cleaves to their sins. Thus ungodly men are the rod of God's anger, even when ripening themselves for his judgment.

REFLECTIONS.—How few great men, especially kings, have any real piety! And what a plague to their subjects is their want of it! Parents' ill example is very pernicious to their children: and it is a double reproach on those who degenerate from the piety of their ancestors. Sin often shortens men's days, and hastens them to an untimely end. But what a remarkable blessing to nations and families are God's true children! Even after their death God often pities, from regard to them, and to his promises made to them. It is a mercy when God shortens the reign of wicked rulers to make way for better, and who will begin reformation at themselves and their court. Many defects are in the best; much imperfection in their works of reformation; and great proneness to rely upon an arm of flesh in the time of trouble. But God generally imbibers to his people the success of their own sinful projects. How wretched are nations when one wicked prince still follows another! when successors murder their wicked sovereigns, but continue cleaving to their ruinous wickedness!

CHAPTER XVI. [Ver. 33. Ahab made a grove. When a grove is said to be planted or cut down, there is no difficulty in the interpretation; but when the word occurs as in 2 Ki. 21. 7; 23. 6, it must be understood of an image, such as was ordinarily worshipped by the heathen in a grove. C.—The special aggravated sin of Ahab was this, he set aside Jehovah altogether from being the national God of Israel. His predecessor Jeroboam had only set up an idol to represent Jehovah; whereas Ahab made Baal the national deity, and built a temple of Baal in the capital. Baal was the supreme male deity of the Canaanites. The name signifies 'lord,' but in the sense of master or possessor, rather than ruler. It has always the article in Hebrew when a proper name, so that there is no difficulty in understanding in what sense it is used in any given passage. Here it is unquestionably the proper name of the Phœnician god. The worship of this god, when established in Israel by Ahab, was appointed with great pomp and ceremony. His priests were very numerous, were dressed in pontifical robes, burned incense, offered sacrifices, which were sometimes human victims. The officiating priests danced with frantic gestures and shouts round the smoking sacrifices, and cut themselves with knives to excite the attention and compassion of the god. P.]

16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp.

17 And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they besieged Tirzah.

18 And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and burnt the king's house over him with fire; and died,

19 For his sins which he sinned in doing evil in the sight of the LORD, in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin which he did, to make Israel to sin.⁹

20 Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

21 ¶ Then were the people of Israel divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him king, and half followed Omri.¹

22 But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

23 ¶ In the thirty and first year of Asa king of Judah began Omri to reign over Israel twelve years: six years reigned he in Tirzah.

24 And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver,³ and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, Samaria.⁴

25 ¶ But Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and did worse than all that were before him.

26 For he walked in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin where-with he made Israel to sin, to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger with their vanities.

27 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Omri which he did, and his might that he showed, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

28 So Omri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

And even when impropriety of conduct, such as cruelty, covetousness, or luxury, is admitted, it is seldom, if ever, condemned as sin against God.

The Scriptures alone trace disasters to sin, and characterize sin as direct rebellion against God.

4 This city was situated on a large insulated hill, 40 miles north of Jerusalem, and seems to have been selected for its capabilities of fortification, as appears from the various sieges it sustains during the days of Benhadad, 1 Ki. xx., to Shalmaneser, 2 Ki. xvii. and xviii. Subsequently it underwent various disasters and revivals; and at present a poor Turkish village, but with several ruins that indicate its ancient greatness. Its situation, however, is one of the most beautiful in Palestine, and the region one of the most fertile.—C.

7 The building of Jericho here referred to is manifestly the rebuilding of its walls, so as to make it a city. It appears to have had some inhabitants from the time of its capture by Joshua; but still the ban lay upon it. Its walls remained in ruins for five centuries; and now when they were rebuilt the prophet's curse fell upon the builder.—P.

2 Elijah is one of the most majestic characters in the Old Testament. In many respects he is scarcely inferior to Moses, while in a few he even excels him.

Yet their missions were very different.

Moses was a deliverer; Elijah a destroyer.

Moses was a law-giver; Elijah a reformer.

Elijah was valued, and is still celebrated, not for what he taught or said, but for what he did; not because he created a new and pure worship, but because he annihilated an old and corrupt one.

Stern, fearless, uncompromising, Elijah was specially fitted to counteract and overthrow the haughty and cruel Jezebel.—P.

29 ¶ And in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty and two years.

30 And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the LORD above all that were before him.

31 And it came to pass, as if it had been a light thing⁵ for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, that he took to wife Jezebel, the daughter of Ethbaal king of the Zidonians, and went and served Baal, and worshipped him.

32 And he reared up an altar for Baal in the house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria.

33 And Ahab made a grove; and Ahab did more to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

34 ¶ In his days did Hiel the Beth-elite build Jericho: he laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his first-born, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by Joshua the son of Nun.⁷

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Elijah, having prophesied against Ahab, is sent to Cherith, where the ravens feed him. 8 He is sent to a widow of Zarephath. 17 He raiseth the widow's son: the woman believeth him.

AND Elijah^a the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead,¹ said unto Ahab, As the LORD God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word.²

2 And the word of the LORD came unto him, saying,

3 Get thee hence, and turn thee eastward, and hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan.³

4 And it shall be, that thou shalt drink of the brook; and I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there.

5 So he went and did according unto the word of the LORD: for he went⁴ and dwelt by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan.

6 And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the brook.

REFLECTIONS.—For the wickedness of a land many and bad are the princes thereof: and they multiply their murders and massacres one of another. But short-lived and troublesome is the power and honour procured by murder. How eagerly do men follow the very sins, or worse, which ruined their predecessors before their eyes! But if thus they harden themselves in their ingratitude, their blood must be on their own heads. God indeed sometimes permits wicked men to die in their beds, and leave their wicked children to pay off their awful reckoning. Drunkards fearfully expose themselves to death in a thousand forms. And it is terrible to be hurried drunk to the tribunal of a holy God! Rebellious projectors often perish in the flames which they have kindled; and revenge and envy attend them in death. And it is terrible when God punishes men's harmony in wickedness with civil wars and discords. Dreadful is his case who is married to a wicked and abandoned woman: nothing is so base or horrid but she can persuade him to it. When kings are monsters of wickedness, the subjects will strive to outdo them in contempt of God. But such as despise his curse shall feel the weight of it.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 6. Ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning.] There was a rock called 'Oreb,' Ju. 7. 25, and there may have been a village of the same name, whose inhabitants secretly supplied the prophet; and the same word may be translated 'ravens,' or as it would be in English, 'people of Ravenstown.' But against this interpretation (1) we have—no mean authority—nearly all translations. (2) If any people brought food, they could have brought water, see ver. 7. (3) Hence we conclude he was literally supplied by ravens carrying away the flesh and bread dedicated in the groves to heathen idols. Thus the worship of the false, ministers to the prophet of the true God. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God will have his witnesses in the worst of times, and will endue them with gifts and graces proportionable to the difficulties with which they are called to struggle. Great and inexpressible is the power of fervent prayer with God. But it bodes ill for a people when God's prophets are driven into corners, and when obscurity becomes their duty by the call of

PALACE OF HEROD, SAMARIA—THE REMAINS OF THE PALACE, BUILT BY HEROD IN HONOR OF AUGUSTUS. [1. Kings, xvi:24.]—"And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver." The city of Samaria was built by Omri about 925 B. C. For two centuries it was the capital of the Ten Tribes of Israel. It was a seat of idolatry; a temple of Baal was built here by Ahab and destroyed by Jehu. Ahab was buried here. After the capture of the city by Shalmaneser and the exile of the Ten Tribes, Shechem became the capital of the new residents. The pillars we see in the picture are supposed to be the remains of the palace built by Herod in honor of Augustus. The site of this city is now occupied by the village of Sebastieh, and it is built chiefly out of the ruins of the ancient city. It is one of the most beautiful sites for a city in Palestine. Its strength, fertility and beauty have been praised by all who have seen it.

harder it is to be composed under it at first. In our troubles, how apt are we to quarrel with our best friends, and in our haste to speak unadvisedly with our lips! But it is more decent and becoming humbly to search out, confess, and acknowledge our sin, which is the cause of them. And if others be in trouble, our business is to sympathize with them, and intercede with God in their favour. And great is the mercy when troubles and deliverances concur to strengthen our faith and increase our knowledge. But how great the condescension of God—he hath chosen the poor, rich in faith, and heirs of his kingdom! How great his compassion in raising the monuments of his special kindness! A Canaanitish widow is regarded, is honoured with miracles, when multitudes in Israel, as destitute as she, are overlooked!

sacrifice is pointed out by local tradition; and its present name, el-Muharakah, 'the sacrifice,' connected with the general features of the district, leaves no doubt as to its identity. It is a rocky projection, overlooking the plain of Esdraelon, and forming the eastern termination of the ridge of Carmel. Here in a thicket of evergreens is a terrace of natural rock, in the midst of which are the remains of a building of large hewn stones. Upon this spot stood the altar of the Lord which Jezebel broke down and Elisha repaired. Close beneath, on a wide upland sweep, round a copious fountain, which may have supplied the water which the prophet poured on the altar, must have been ranged the people of Israel headed by Ahab. Before them opened the whole plain of Esdraelon, with the city of Jezreel visible on its eastern border. Beneath them, at the base of the mountain, flowed the Kishon. On the bank of the river is a mound called 'the hill of himself, and Obadiah went another way ^{by} himself.

7 ¶ And as Obadiah was ⁱⁿ the way, behold, Elijah met him: and he knew him, and fell ^{on} his face, and said, Art thou that my lord Elijah?

8 And he answered him, I am: go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

9 And he said, What have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me?

10 As^a the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom^b whither^c my lord hath not sent to seek thee: and when they said, He is not there, he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not.

11 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

12 And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that the Spirit of the LORD shall carry thee whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, he shall slay me:⁶ but I thy servant fear the LORD ^{from} my youth.

13 Was it not told my lord what I did when Jezebel slew the prophets of the LORD, how I hid an hundred men of the LORD's prophets by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water?

14 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here: and he shall slay me.

15 And Elijah said, As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely show myself unto him to-day.

16 So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him; and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, *Art thou he that troubleth Israel?*⁷

18 And he answered, I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the LORD, and thou hast followed Baalim.

19 Now therefore send, and gather to me all Israel unto mount Carmel,⁸ and the ^bprophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves⁹ four hundred, which eat at Jezebel's table.

20 So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto mount Carmel.

21 ¶ And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, *How long halt ye between two opinions?*¹ if the LORD be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him.² And the people answered him not a word.

slaughter,' which probably marks the scene, as it preserves the memory, of the slaughter of the 850 prophets of Baal. The Mediterranean is not visible from the place of sacrifice on the mountain brow; the view being intercepted by a projecting peak. That peak, however, can be ascended in a few minutes, and then a full view of the sea is gained. From it, doubtless, the prophet's servant saw, on his seventh visit, the little cloud 'like a man's hand.' P.]

28 It is thus ever that wicked men are self-deceived, attributing to the reprovers of their sins the troubles which these sins have produced.

41 The heathen are sometimes praised by infidels and semi-infidels for their toleration, a praise which have badly earned. See ver. 12. 13. The fact is, heathenism was never tolerant, but it readily amalgamated the worship of various gods, and in this way, and in this only, was tolerant to those who could degrade the worship of Jehovah, by joining it with idols—a junction which the prophet publicly denounces.—C.

44 From the earliest period the answer by fire was the universally recognized test of the acceptance of a sacrifice. The Israelites, degraded and ignorant as they were, in the days of Ahab, admitted this. To have denied it would have been to ignore their national history. They were taught by the priests of Baal to believe in his power. He was, in fact, the fire-god; a personification of the sun, the source of light, heat, and life. So they were led to believe; and believing this, they accepted of Elijah's test.

45 Baal's priests were doubtless averse to the trial; but in the presence of the king and of assembled Israel they dared not to draw back.—P.

I only, remain a prophet of the LORD; but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men.

23 Let them therefore give us two bullocks; and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under:

24 And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD; and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God.³ And all the people answered and said, It is well spoken.⁴

25 ¶ And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first; for ye are many; and call on the name of your gods, but put no fire under.

26 And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed it, and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying, O Baal, hear⁵ us!⁶ But there was ^{no} voice, nor any that answered.⁷ And they ^{leaped} upon the altar⁸ which was made.

27 And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said, Cry aloud: for he is a god;¹ either he is talking,² or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked.

28 And they cried aloud, and cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them.

29 And it came to pass, when mid-day was past, and they ^{prophesied} until the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that there was ^{neither} voice, nor any to answer, nor any that regarded.

30 ¶ And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him: and he repaired the altar of the LORD⁴ that was broken down.

31 And Elijah took ^{twelve} stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, saying, Israel shall be thy name;

32 And with the stones he ^{built} an altar in the name of the LORD: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

33 And he ^{put} the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and ^{pour} it on the burnt-sacrifice, and on the wood.

34 And he said, Do it the second time: and they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time: and they did it the third time.

MOUNT CARMEL—WHERE FIRE FELL AND CONSUMED THE SACRIFICE OF ELIJAH. [I. Kings, xviii:42.]—"So Ahab went up to eat and to drink. And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees." Carmel is first mentioned in Joshua, xix:26. Its name signifies "a fertile field." Ahab, the king of Israel who had married Jezebel, a Sidonian princess, introduced the Phœnician worship upon Carmel and built an altar to Baal there. It was here that through Elijah the relationship of the Israelite worship and that of the Phœnicians was brought into marked contrast and Carmel was brought into prominence by being the scene of it. Mounts were regarded as sacred places, as we learn that Tabor was in the time of Deborah, and when Samuel lived he sought the heights of Mizpah as a place of worship, and we are told in Micah, vii:14, that Jehovah himself dwelt upon Mount Carmel.

35 And the water ran⁵ round about the altar; and he filled the "trench also with water.

36 And it came to pass, "at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice,⁶ that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, "LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, "let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

37 Hear^a me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that thou hast "turned their heart back again.

38 Then^c the fire of the LORD fell,⁷ and consumed the burnt-sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.⁸

39 And when all the people saw it, they "fell on their faces: and they said, The LORD, he is the God; the LORD, he is the God.

40 And Elijah said unto them, "Take the prophets of Baal, let not one of them escape. And they took them: and Elijah brought them down to the brook "Kishon, and slew them there.⁹

41 ¶ And Elijah said unto Ahab, Get thee up, "eat and drink; for there is a sound of abundance of rain.¹

42 So Ahab went up to eat and to drink: and "Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and he^k cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees, 43 And said to his servant, "Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said, "Go again seven times.

44 And it came to pass, at the seventh time, that he said, Behold, there ariseth "a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. And he said, Go up, say unto Ahab, Prepare² thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.

45 And it came to pass, in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and "there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to "Jezreel.³

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Elijah, threatened by Jezebel, fleeth to Beersheba. 4 In the wilderness, being weary of his life, he is comforted by an angel. 9 At Horeb God appeareth unto him, sending him to anoint Hazael, Jehu, and Elisha. 19 Elisha, taking leave of his friends, followeth Elijah.

AND Ahab told Jezebel "all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had slain all the prophets with the sword.

2 Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, "So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by "to-morrow about this time.

3 And when he saw that, "he arose, and went for his life, and came to "Beer-sheba,¹ which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there.

4 ¶ But² he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness,³ and came and "sat down under a juniper-tree: and he requested "for himself that he might die; and said, It is enough; now, O LORD, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers.⁴

5 And "as he lay and slept under a juniper-tree,⁵ behold, then an angel touched him, and said unto him, Arise and eat.

6 And he looked, and, behold, there was "a cake baked on the coals, and a cruse of water at his head:⁶ and he did eat and drink, and laid him down again.

7 And the angel of the LORD came again the second time, and touched him, and said, Arise and eat; "because the journey is too great for thee.

8 And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went in the "strength of that meat "forty days and forty nights unto "Horeb⁷ the mount of God.

REFLECTIONS.—God can turn a fruitful land into barrenness for the sins of them that dwell therein: but judgments, instead of humbling, enrage the impenitent. When persecutors cannot wreak their malice and fury on God they do it upon his servants. But what a mercy is it that God, even in wicked courts, hath those who fear him and protect his ministers. It is very honourable when saints are so faithful in relative duties that such who hate their religion cannot but show them distinguished regard; and when persons in high station lay out their influence or wealth for the support of God's faithful ministers and people. But God often, when his people's condition is seemingly desperate, raises up helpers where they could be least expected. It is proper that saints be cautious in dealing with enraged persecutors: but sometimes they are apt to overdo in their caution. The faithful servants of Christ are often calumniated as enemies to the state: and even when they bring the best of tidings the impenitent brand them as their troublers. But they who by their sins provoke God against a nation, are the real troublers of it, and ought faithfully to be told it. God can overrule the hearts of his most inveterate enemies, and make them to grant what his servants demand for his honour. Unsettled notions of religion lead to unsound practices: and there can be no communion betwixt Christ and Belial. Let us then never, in inclination, profession, or practice, halt between God and his rivals. Nor must the ministers of Christ be discouraged when they see multitudes against them: it is enough that God is on their side. He can take the wise in their own craftiness, and turn the counsel of the froward headlong; and the hope of the hypocrite perishes. It is a poor religion that consists chiefly in externals; and a devilish one that requires inhuman severities. Nothing, neither disappointment nor public shame, will undeceive those whom God hath given up to strong delusions. But how condescending was it in God to put his own pre-eminence, or rather Godhead, to the trial! Graciously he answers the fervent prayers of his zealous servants: and gloriously he overcomes when he is judged. Dreadful is the ruin of such as obstinately dispute his supremacy. But when false prophets and evil ministers are removed from a land God will return and refresh it. Secret, importunate, and repeated prayers must indeed be used to draw down the promised blessings; and great mercies may arise from the very smallest beginnings. But distinguished humility, and dependence upon an all-strengthening God, ought to attend upon and flow from the receipt of such most distinguishing honours.

CHAPTER XIX. [Ver. 15. "The wilderness (i.e. the midbar, 'pastoral region' as distinguished from cultivated ground) of Damascus" lay to the south and south-east of the city. Sometimes one of these towns obtained a marked superiority over the others, over which it arrogated a species of dominion, and of this number was Damascus. But this dominion was no more than a forced alliance, which only obliged these cities to furnish troops and subsidies in time of war, without compromising their distinct existence, under their own laws and rulers.—Heeren.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Benhadad, king of Syria, not content with Ahab's homage, besiegeth Samaria. 13 By the direction of a prophet the Syrians are slain. 22 As the prophet had forewarned Ahab, the Syrians, trusting in the valleys, come against him in Aphek. 28 By the word of the prophet, and God's judgment, the Syrians are smitten again. 31 The Syrians submitting themselves, Ahab sendeth Benhadad away with a covenant. 35 The prophet, under the parable of a prisoner, making Ahab to judge himself, denounceth God's judgment against him for his unseasonable lenity.

AND Ben-hadad^a the king of Syria gathered all his host together: and there were ^bthirty and two kings with him,¹ and horses and chariots: and he went up and 'besieged Samaria, and warred against it.

2 And he 'sent messengers to Ahab king of Israel into the city, and said unto him, Thus saith Ben-hadad, 3 Thy 'silver and thy gold is mine; thy wives also and thy children, even the goodliest, are mine.

4 And the king of Israel answered and said, My lord, O king, according to thy saying, 'I am thine, and all that I have.

5 And the messengers came again, and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, 'Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives, and thy children;

6 Yet I will send my servants unto thee tomorrow about this time, and they shall search thine house, and the houses of thy ²servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is pleasant³ in thine eyes, they shall put it in their hand, and take it away.

7 Then the king of Israel called ⁴all the elders of the land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this man 'seeketh mischief; for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold, and I ⁵denied him not.

[Have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him.] The heathen kissed several of their idols, either by touching them with the right hand (Plin. lib. xxviii. c. 2), or by actually saluting them with the lips (Cic. in Verrem). A similar practice has been transferred into those superstitious forms of Christianity where the images of saints have displaced the ancient idols and set up modern idolatry. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The promoters of false worship desperately hate those who zealously oppose their designs. And no persecutor is more malicious or furious than a profane woman. How weak and spiritless are the greatest zealots for God when left to themselves! Elijah had just commanded both king and subjects:—Now he shrinks for fear of a dignified harlot. But it is mean to desire death as a refuge from distress; and to seek to die like a wandering sheep in the wilderness, while shunning the honourable death of a martyr for God at Jezreel. When men impatiently wish for death they are ordinarily in a frame very unfit for it, and would be ready to recall their wish if God were to grant it. We ought never to desert the path of duty though it lead us through the valley of the shadow of death. However dark providences appear we must never despair. We know not what further work God may have for us. To desire to be with Christ is laudable; but to be weary of our warfare is sinful. But God kindly overlooks the infirmities of his people; visits them when on the brink of despair; and lays meat before them when they shamefully desert his service. Such as are travelling to Horeb, to the mount of God in heaven, will find strength ministered to them for their journey, and angels to be their ministering spirits. To encourage their own peevish frowardness saints are apt to think matters in the church worse than they really are. But whom the Lord loves he will rebuke and chasten, he will direct and further employ. No place can exclude his gracious manifestations. It is the folly of human weakness to be discouraged for want of success in God's work. The sufficiency of the power is of God, not of ourselves. They that would be faithful for God in bad times must put their lives in their hands and be ready to die for him.—In the most terrible manner God often introduces his most mild and gracious intimations. God's saints are generally few; but they are often more numerous in times of general apostasy than good men think: and all of them are under the special knowledge and care of God. It bodes ill when God's children become intercessors

32 So they girded sackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads,⁹ and came to the king of Israel, and said, Thy servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, Is he yet alive? he is my brother.

33 Now the men did diligently observe whether any thing would come from him, and did hastily catch it: and they said, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he said, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he caused him to come up into the chariot.

34 And Ben-hadad said unto him, "The cities, which my father took from thy father, I will restore; and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus,"¹ as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. So he made a covenant with him, and sent him away.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Ahab being denied Naboth's vineyard is grieved. 5 Jezebel writing letters against Naboth, he is condemned of blasphemy. 15 Ahab taketh possession of the vineyard. 17 Elijah denounceth judgments against Ahab and Jezebel. 27 Wicked Ahab repenting, God deferreth the judgment.

AND it came to pass after these things, that Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria.

2 And Ahab spake unto Naboth, saying, Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house; and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it; or, if it seem good to thee,¹ I will give thee the worth of it in money.

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, The LORD forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee.²

4 And Ahab came into his house heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him; for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers: and he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.³

5 ¶ But Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

6 And he said unto her, Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry:⁴ I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

8 So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto the elders and to the nobles that were in his city, dwelling with Naboth.

9 And she wrote in the letters, saying, "Proclaim⁵ a fast,⁶ and set Naboth on high among the people:⁷

10 And set two men, sons of Belial, before instruments God can abase the proud, and defeat the most powerful armies even when flushed with victory and success. But we must never on earth think the danger over. Earth and hell cannot long lie quiet. Atheistical apprehensions of God effectually plunge men headlong into misery. For they that fight against him will at last be covered with confusion and despair. Malicious persecutors are in general extremely indulgent to horrid murderers and blasphemers. But sinful indulgence issues in men's own ruin. God's servants have need of great boldness and zeal, that they may declare his mind to the most powerful transgressors. And it is peculiarly stinging when men are condemned out of their own mouth.

Learn, O my soul, notwithstanding all my emptiness, to be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. If my spiritual enemies compass me about like bees, let me attack them in the name of the Lord. If I obtain one victory let me prepare for another assault. But let me never show mercy to the most humble and suppliant lust—to pity those who are careless of God's honour and cruel to myself.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 8. Naboth dwelt in Jez-reel and had his patrimony there. It therefore was his city. But though Ahab had a palace there, Jezreel was not his usual place of residence. Samaria was the capital of the kingdom, and he appears to have returned to it after vainly endeavouring to obtain possession of Naboth's vineyard while on a visit to Jezreel. The whole narrative shows that Naboth's accusation and death occurred at Jezreel, his native city, and that Ahab and Jezebel were then at a distance. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Nearness to great men often exposes to oppression; and there is need of steadfast

A T THE WELL, SAMARIA—WHERE AHAB, KING OF ISRAEL, BUILT A TEMPLE TO BAAL, THE GOD OF THE SIDONIANS. [I. Kings, xxi:18.]
 —“Arise, go down to meet Ahab, king of Israel, which is in Samaria.” The city of Samaria was built by Omri, king of Israel, and became the capital of the ten tribes until the captivity. Ahab built a temple to Baal here, which was destroyed by Jehu. “He reared up an altar for Baal in the house of Baal which he had built in Samaria. And Ahab made a grove: and Ahab did more to provoke the Lord God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.”—I. Kings, xvi:32-33. We give above a picture of the well in Samaria. The prophecy uttered with reference to this place in Micah, i:6, is literally fulfilled: “I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard: and I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, and I will discover the foundations thereof.” This has literally come to pass.

him, to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the king;⁸ and then carry⁹ him out, and stone him, that he may die.⁹

11 And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, did as Jezebel had sent unto them, and as it was written in the letters which she had sent unto them:

12 They proclaimed a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people.

13 And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him: and the men of Belial witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying, Naboth did blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him with stones, that he died.

14 Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, "Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

16 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead,¹ that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 ¶ And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying, 18 Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, which is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

19 And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, In the place where dogs licked the blood² of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

20 And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?³ And he answered, I have found thee; because thou hast sold thyself to work evil⁴ in the sight of the LORD.

4 And he said unto Jehoshaphat, Wilt thou go with me to battle to Ramoth-gilead? And Jehoshaphat said to the king of Israel, I am as adherence to the Lord's command when we meet with strong temptations. How insatiable is a covetous heart! Many great men, in all that they have, can enjoy but small pleasure because of some fancied want: and proud and discontented spirits terribly torment themselves. What a plague to nations are covetous and tyrannical rulers! Having their heart set on wickedness, the devil quickly furnishes the means: and nothing is too base and hypocritical, or even horrid or blasphemous, for them to stick at. When sin has hardened their heart, men glory in their wickedness and are lost to shame. But that which is unlawfully gotten frequently proves a burden instead of a comfort. The very presence of faithful ministers, who cannot endure to see the wicked perishing in their iniquities, is a terror to such, and their faithful rebukes torment them: but how much more, and how often even in this life, does the eternal justice of God perplex and pursue them! Legal terrors may produce strong professions of repentance, but only a sense of God's pardoning love can convert the heart. And if God mark such regard to apparent repentance how great is his mercy, and how great is his regard to those who sorrow after a godly sort!

CHAPTER XXII. REFLECTIONS.—Wicked sovereigns pay little regard to the laws either of gratitude or of solemn treaties. It is taking hold of the opportunities which God puts in our hand, not leagues with perfidious princes, that will secure our rights; and least of all ought leagues extorted by distress to be trusted to. The worst of men from selfish motives will court the friendship of the godly; but whenever opportunity serves are sure to expose them to danger. The conscience, the life of saints, yea, and all that they have, are endangered by sinful compliances to evil men: but tender saints can never delight in evil and flattering ministers, nor fail to regard the faithful servants of God. Unity and multitude are poor proofs of a good cause. Nothing is a surer sign of an evil minister than his encouraging wicked and hypocritical men to sleep on in their sin: nor is anything a more dreadful plague to persons or nations than the united flattery of unfaithful ministers. When flatterers abound the men of God ought to be the more bold and faithful in opposition to them. Hardened sinners will indeed hate them for dealing faithfully with their conscience, but God will stand by them when he gives up the lovers of flattery to be imposed on by it to their own ruin; and multitudes of evil spirits are always awaiting his permission to delude into destruction their own

5 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, 'Inquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.⁴

6 Then the king of Israel gathered the prophets together, about four hundred men,⁵ and said unto them, Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; for the LORD⁶ shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

7 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might inquire of him?

8 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet one man (Micaiah the son of Imlah) by whom we may inquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

9 Then the king of Israel called an officer,⁷ and said, Hasten hither Micaiah the son of Imlah.

10 And the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, sat each on his throne, having put on their robes, in a void place⁸ in the entrance of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets prophesied before them.

11 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah made him horns of iron; and he said, Thus saith the LORD, With these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou have consumed them.

12 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the king's hand.

13 And the messenger that was gone to call Micaiah spake unto him, saying, Behold now, the words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one mouth: let thy word, I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good.⁹

14 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, what the LORD saith unto me, that will I speak.

15 ¶ So he came to the king. And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered him, Go, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.¹

16 And the king said unto him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the LORD?

1 Was the Lord's prophet guilty of uttering an untruth? or false, not according to the meaning they may or ordinarily do bear, but according to the meaning they are at any special time intended and known to bear. Ahab knew, probably by Micaiah's looking at or pointing to the false prophets, or by the tone of Micaiah's voice, that the words were not his own, but a quotation, and therefore he adjures him to deliver his own words. accompanied Micaiah's words. Many instances of irony are to be found in Scripture, and that Micaiah now spoke in irony is too manifest to escape the notice of the most cursory reader. His words are precisely those of the false prophets, ver. 6, 12, and were intended by him to reprove the king for his idolatry and impiety. That the design of the prophet was perceived by Ahab is evident from his immediately adjuring him to speak nothing but the truth, that is, to discover to him what really would be the result of the expedition, upon which the prophet assumed another tone, and related to him his vision.—C.

⁷ This may be understood literally, for God by giving us liars to the guidance of a lying spirit is righteously adjudging them to the darkness they loved, and in that sense, and in that only, may be said not to permit a lying spirit to enter, but actually to put a lying spirit in their mouth.—C.

herd: and the LORD said, These have no master; let them return every man to his house in peace.

18 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil?

19 And he said, Hear thou therefore the word of the LORD: I saw the LORD sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left.

20 And the LORD said, Who shall persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner.

21 And there came forth a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will persuade him.

22 And the LORD said unto him, Where-with? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also: go forth, and do so.

23 Now therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil concerning thee.

24 ¶ But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and smote Micaiah on the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

25 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyself.

26 And the king of Israel said, Take Micaiah, and carry him back unto Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

27 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I come in peace.

28 And Micaiah said, If thou return at all in peace, the LORD hath not spoken by me. And he said, Harken, O people, every one of you.

29 ¶ So the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead.

30 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, I will disguise myself, and enter into the battle; but put thou on thy robes. And the king of Israel disguised himself, and went into the battle.

31 ¶ But the king of Syria commanded his thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, saying, Fight neither with most hearty votaries. Faithful ministers are commonly rewarded with persecution and abuse: and none are more bitter enemies than the teachers of lies. But God will quickly vindicate his servants in accomplishing the threatenings which they have denounced. Such as are guileless themselves are unsuspecting of others:

but wicked men, to compass their own ends, will not stick to betray their best friends. And indeed when the godly are out of the way of their duty they need small nor great, save only with the king of Israel.

32 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, Surely it is the king of Israel. And they turned aside to fight against him; and Jehoshaphat cried out.⁹

33 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from pursuing him.

34 ¶ And a certain man drew a bow at a venture,¹ and smote the king of Israel between the joints² of the harness: wherefore he said unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the host; for I am wounded.³

35 And the battle increased⁴ that day: and the king was stayed up⁵ in his chariot against the Syrians, and died at even: and the blood ran out of the wound into the midst⁷ of the chariot.

36 And there went a proclamation throughout the host about the going down of the sun, saying, Every man to his city, and every man to his own country.⁸

37 ¶ So the king died, and was brought⁹ to Samaria; and they buried the king in Samaria.

38 And one washed the chariot in the pool of Samaria; and the dogs licked up his blood; and they washed his armour; according unto the word of the Lord which he spake.

39 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and the ivory house¹ which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

40 So Ahab slept with his fathers; and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

not wonder that they fall into mischief. But if they cry unto the Lord they will find him a present help in the time of trouble. When the hour of men is come there is no avoiding their destiny. By events which to us are purely accidental, God can execute his purpose and accomplish his word. No character on earth except Christ's is perfectly spotless. Even good men are apt to indulge long-rooted customs of sinning. But how unwise is it for them to cultivate familiarity with the wicked, even after they have smarted for it! and it is a mercy if repeated strokes make them amend their error at the last.

AHAB'S WELL IN JEZREEL, WHERE AHAB BUILT HIS IVORY PALACE. [I. KINGS, xxii: 39.]—"Now the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and the ivory house which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?" Jezreel, now known by the name of Zerin, lies at the base of the Gilboa mountain, 10 miles southeast of Nazareth. There are about 20 houses here now and a square tower. It is a beautiful site for a city, and is conspicuous for many miles around. The historic well, which we give in the above picture, is at the bottom of the hill to the north of the city. To this place the women from Jezreel still come, as in Bible times, with their earthen jars to get water. It was in Jezreel that Ahab lived with Jezebel, his heathen wife, and it is in evidence that here he built his ivory house, and here there was a temple and grove of Astarte, with his establishment of 400 priests of Baal supported by Jezebel.

THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS.

The Second Book of Kings is but a continuation of the former, from the death of Ahab to the death of Jehoiachin, which is about three hundred and forty years. The principal events recorded are, (1) The miracles of Elijah and Elisha, i.-vii. xiii. (2) The destruction of the family of Ahab by Jehu, viii.-x. (3) The misery and captivity by the Assyrians, xv. xvii. (4) The history of Judah under fifteen kings; of whom Jehoram, Ahaz, Manasseh, and Amon were most wicked, and Hezekiah and Josiah most pious and reforming: and in fine, of their harassment and captivity by the Chaldeans, viii.-xxv.

THEN Moab^a rebelled against Israel after the death of Ahab.

2 And Ahaziah fell down through a lattice¹ in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and was ²sick: and he sent messengers, and said unto them, Go, inquire of ³Baal-zebub, the god of ⁴Ekron,⁵ whether I shall recover of this disease.

3 But the angel of the LORD said to ⁶Elijah the Tishbite, Arise, go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, ⁷Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron?

4 Now therefore thus saith the LORD, ⁸Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, ⁹but shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.

5 ¶ And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back?

6 And they said unto him, There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ¹⁰Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

7 And he said unto them, ¹¹What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you these words?

8 And they answered him, He was an ¹²hairy man,⁵ and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins.⁶ And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite.

9 Then the king ¹sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty: and he went up to him: (and, behold, he sat ²on the top of an hill:?) and he spake unto him, ³Thou man of ⁴God, the king hath said, Come down.

10 And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, If I ⁵be a man of God, then ⁶let fire come down from heaven,⁹ and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

11 Again⁷ also he ⁸sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty: and he ⁹answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly.

12 And Elijah answered and said unto them, ¹⁰If I ¹¹be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

13 ¶ And he sent ¹²again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty: and the third captain of fifty went up, and came and ¹³fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, ¹⁴O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, be precious in thy sight.

14 Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight.

15 And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him; ¹⁵be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king.

16 And he said unto him, ¹⁶Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, (¹⁷is it not because there is no God in Israel to inquire of his word?) therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

CHAPTER I. REFLECTIONS.—If we apostatize from God we need not wonder that our inferiors revolt from or rebel against us. Death often appre-hends men when and where they least expected it. And much more ready are men curiously to inquire when they shall die, than to prepare for a happy death.

Many choose rather to risk their expense and toil, nay their damnation, in consulting the devil, than to consult God freely, to their present and eternal advantage.

17 ¶ So he died, according to the word of the LORD which Elijah had spoken: and Jehoram reigned in his stead, in the second year of Jehoram¹ the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah; because he had no son.²

18 Now the rest of the acts of Ahaziah which he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

CHAPTER II.

1 Elijah, taking his leave of Elisha, with his mantle divideth Jordan, and, granting Elisha his request, is taken up by a fiery chariot into heaven. 12 Elisha, dividing Jordan with Elijah's mantle, is acknowledged his successor. 16 The young prophets, with difficulty obtaining leave to seek Elisha, could not find him. 19 Elisha with salt healeth the unwholesome waters. 23 Bears destroy the children that mocked him.

AND it came to pass, when the LORD would take^a up Elijah into heaven¹ by a whirlwind, that Elijah went^b with Elisha from Gilgal.

2 And Elijah said unto Elisha, "Tarry here, I pray thee;² for the LORD hath sent me to Beth-el. And Elisha said unto him, "As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Beth-el.

3 And the sons of the prophets that were at Beth-el came forth to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master^c from thy head to-day? And he said, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

4 And Elijah said unto him, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to Jericho.³ And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho.

5 And the sons of the prophets that were at Jericho came to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to-day? And he answered, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.⁴

6 And Elijah said unto him, "Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the LORD hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on.

7 And fifty men of the sons of the prophets went, and stood^m to view afar off: and they two stood by Jordan.

8 And Elijah tookⁿ his mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were divided hither and thither; so that they two went over on dry ground.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, "Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

Persecutors and mockers of God's faithful prophets and messengers shall not escape unpunished. Such as have turned aside to idolatry, even after miraculous demonstrations of the wickedness of it, richly deserve death for their punishment: and if they will harden their heart against the terrors of God, it is just that their destruction be uncommonly terrible. The way to prevail with God is not to insult him, but humbly to bow before him; and the sufferings of others should be our rebelled against me: 'wilt thou go with me against Moab to battle? And he said, I will go up: I am as thou art, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses.⁵

warning. God can endow his servants with such honourable boldness, that captains and kings look contemptible before them. And those who consult the devil, if superabounding mercy prevent not, may expect soon to have their lodging with him in hell.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. This was not the Gilgal in the Jordan valley near Jericho, where the Israelites first encamped, but a city in Mount Ephraim, north of Bethel. The statement in verse 3 proves this, for it is said 'they went down to Bethel'; whereas Gilgal in the plain of Jericho is more than 3000 ft. below Bethel. There is a village called Fililia, six miles north of Bethel, on the top of the mountain ridge, which is probably the same as the Gilgal here mentioned. P.]

Ver. 8. [At, or close to, the same spot where the waters of the river had been dried up, six centuries before, to let the Israelites pass over; at, or close to, the same spot where our Lord was baptized, nine centuries later. P.]

Ver. 9. [Let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me. If the translation fully represent the original, it may be a reference to the double portion of the first-born, De. 21. 17. And if it were so, it was no vain ambition that dictated the desire; for if the spirit of Elijah was a spirit of power, it was also a spirit of much affliction, which no worldly mind can desire. But it has been translated 'a repetition,' or continuance, a sense that seems to be favoured by ver. 15. C.]

Ver. 23. [There came forth little children. Not necessarily little children, but young persons. Isaac was so called (in the Hebrew) when twenty-eight, and Joseph when thirty-nine, Ge. 25. 6; 45. 9. See also Ge. 14. 24; 18. 7.—Go up, thou bald head. Marking the idea of Elijah's ascent into heaven in a manner that proves they were not 'little children,' in the literal sense, but infidel sons of Belial, with thoughts only for earth, and contempt of eternity and glory. C.]

Ver. 24. [There came forth two she-bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two. It is not said whether any were killed, or how much they were torn. The bears were probably mothers 'robbed of their whelps,' Pr. 17. 12, whose maternal fondness is a lesson to humanity; but whose fierceness would be immeasurably increased by the destruction of their young. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—What honour God delights to put upon his faithful servants! The least of them shall lack nothing of Elijah's happiness, but that they must lodge a little in the grave on their way to the perfect felicity above. Faithful saints have the good of the rising generation much on their heart; and we should make the most of their conversation while we can have it. It is very distressing, though hopeful, to part with dear friends, high in favour with God. And how easy and majestic is their composed retirement to the heavenly state, even in their passage through Jordans of trouble and of death! The removal of such is indeed a great loss to churches and nations, especially if iniquity be come to a great height. But when God removes one eminent servant, he can raise up another equally endowed with the Holy Ghost. And when an animating pattern, a powerful prayer of faith, and the distinguished presence of God concur, there is great ground of hope. They whom God honours ought to be honoured; and the strong must bear with the infirmities of the weak. A people ought to make all the profitable improvement of their ministers they can while they have them: for what bitterness, barrenness, and death can God cure by their gospel ministrations! They often bring, even to accursed places, the most distinguished mercies where Providence orders their lot. But how terrible are the consequences of idolatry, and of careless education of children! For parents are often punished for their neglect, or bad example, in the loss, the wretchedness, or ruin of their seed.

But stop, thou ascending Elijah, till in thy character and work I contemplate the glories of my Redeemer. His call to his mediatorial office was solemn; and was remarkably confirmed by miracles of mercy and judgment. His condition on earth was mean, afflicted, and persecuted. His holy zeal was ardent; his rebukes pungent; his denunciations of wrath terrible and effective: his prayers for mercy to his friends, or destruction to his foes, were always prevalent; his fast was long and afflicting; his great sacrifice was inflamed by infinite and unquenchable love from within, and by infinite wrath from above: and by means of it he showed the Lord to be God, restored the true worship of God in the world, and made the unclean spirits and false prophets to pass out of the land. By him kings are appointed to death or dominion; and prophets, apostles, and ministers called to, and furnished for, their office. In infinite wisdom he removed his ordinances from the Jews, that he might dwell with raven-like publicans and sinners; dwell with long-widowed Gentiles, and restore to life their children, dead in trespasses and sins. Baptized in Jordan, and travelling through trouble and death, he ascended to heaven without seeing corruption. In vain have the Jews ever since searched for a promised Messiah. And dreadful and lasting justice has, or shall overtake his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, or other obstinate enemies, according to the predictions of his mouth.

CHAPTER III. [Ver. 11. Poured water on the hands of Elijah. In most eastern countries they eat with the fingers; and pouring water on the hands after meals is an act which, in what Europeans would call 'the learned professions,' indicates not a servant, but a disciple. The orientals have a great objection to washing the hands in a basin, holding the water polluted after one contact; the hands are therefore held over the basin, while the water is poured out of a ewer with a narrow neck, but otherwise much like an ordinary British coffee-pot. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—To be better than monsters in crimes is no evidence of real goodness: and a partial reformation is often made without real conversion. To forbear the sins which we no longer love, while we cleave to those which are more pleasing and profitable, liveth, before whom I stand, surely, were it not that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee.

15 But now bring me a minstrel.⁹ And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the hand of the LORD came upon him.

16 And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Make this valley full of ditches:

17 For thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not see wind,¹ neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts.²

18 And this is but a light thing in the sight of the LORD: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand.

19 And ye shall smite every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall fell every good tree,³ and stop all wells of water, and mar every good piece of land with stones.

20 And it came to pass in the morning, when the meat-offering was offered, that, behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country was filled with water.⁵

21 And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight against them, they gathered⁶ all that were able to put on armour,⁷ and upward, and stood in the border.

22 And they rose up early in the morning, and the sun shone upon the water, and the Moabites saw the water on the other side as red as blood.⁸

23 And they said, This is blood: the kings are surely slain,⁹ and they have smitten one another: now therefore, Moab, to the spoil.

24 And when they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them: but they went forward smiting¹ the Moabites in their country.

25 And they beat down the cities, and on every good piece of land cast every man his stone, and filled it; and they stopped all the wells of water,² and felled all the good trees: only in Kir-haraseh left they the stones thereof; howbeit the slingers went about it, and smote it.

26 And when the king of Moab saw that

The meaning seems to be that the king, driven to despair by the cruelties of the conquerors, offered up his son as a sacrifice to Chemosh, on the wall of Kir-haraseh, in sight of the Israelites. This barbarous act, to which the unfortunate monarch was driven by the Israelites, was always employed to denote the anger or displeasure of God on account of sin.—P.

the battle was too sore for him, he took with him seven hundred men that drew swords, to break through even unto the king of Edom: but they could not.

27 Then he took his eldest son, that should have reigned in his stead, and offered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall. And there was great indignation against Israel;³ and they departed from him, and returned⁴ to their own land.⁵

CHAPTER IV.

1 Elisha multiplieth the widow's oil. 8 He giveth a son to the good Shunammite. 18 He raiseth again her dead son. 38 At Gilgal he healeth the deadly pottage. 42 He miraculously satisfieth an hundred men with twenty barley loaves.

NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of the 'sons of the prophets' unto Elisha,¹ saying, Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the LORD: and the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to 'be bondmen.²

2 And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house? And she said, Thine handmaid hath not any thing in the house, save a pot of oil.

3 Then he said, Go, borrow thee vessels abroad of all thy neighbours, even empty vessels; borrow not a few.³

4 And when thou art come in, thou shalt shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full.

5 So she went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her; and she poured out.

6 And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed.

7 Then she came and told the man of God: and he said, Go, sell the oil, and pay thy debt, and live thou and thy children of the rest.

8 And it fell on a day,⁴ that Elisha passed to Shunem,⁵ where was a great woman; and she constrained him⁶ to eat bread. And so it was, that as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread.

shows the insincerity of our pretended repentance. Sinners prefer the recovery of outward losses to all the advantages of real godliness; and they readily court the friendship of such saints as are remarkably prosperous in outward things. Rash counsels generally drive men into great straits; and these into murmuring against the providence of God. And if we keep company with sinners, we are in danger of smarting under their rod. Afflictions often drive those to God who in their prosperity neglected him. His mercies are not only beyond our desert, but beyond our expectation; and others fare the better for their connections with his people: for he will not leave his own who cry unto him: even in the straits into which their folly has plunged them. What a remarkable blessing are pious commanders and faithful ministers to armies! and the fervent prayer of a religious man availeth much. How composed ought our minds to be in all our approaches to God! and never must we expect a gracious answer to our requests, but only through Jesus' offering of himself a sacrifice for sins. How strangely men fancy what they wish! for God often infatuates those whom he intends to destroy, and makes them to rush headlong upon their own destruction. What inhuman and bloody courses will people take to procure the favour of their idol, or to mark themselves desperately obstinate.

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS. — Parents ought carefully to avoid dying in debt, as it may render their children miserable. Yet when persons are involved in debt, not by their own rashness, prodigality, or sloth, but by the afflicting providence of God, they deserve our pity, not our censure. Unforeseen providences may involve the most honest man in debts which he cannot pay. And how grievous is it (though not unjust) when Providence obliges a faithful minister to die indebted to rigid creditors! But if providence distress a good man, it will also relieve him. Let husbands then fear God, and he will take care of their widows and children. Let poor distressed widows and fatherless children cast all their care upon him: he is ready to relieve them in the most destitute case. And if we wish or expect God to do for us, we must do all that is in our own power. It is only in our diligent endeavours that we can rightly expect his blessing: and then let us believe, and we shall quickly find that God is more ready to give than we are to receive. To our utmost let us endeavour to clear our debts, though what remains should prove a very scanty livelihood: for nothing is properly our own till this be done. Ac-

GARDENS OF SHUNEM—WHERE ELISHA RESTORED THE WOMAN'S SON TO LIFE. [II. Kings, iv:8.]—"And it fell on a day that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman; and she constrained him to eat bread. And so it was, that as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread. And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is a holy man of God, which passeth by us continually. Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall; and let us set for him there a bed and a table and a stool and a candlestick; and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither." Shunem literally means "two resting places." It is a city in the territory of Issachar. It is in the plain of Jezreel. Here lived the worthy woman who built a room for Elisha, and whose son the Prophet restored to life. It is now the village on the declivity of the western extremity of Little Hermon.

9 And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God⁷ which passeth by us continually.⁸

10 Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall,⁹ and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick: and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither.

11 And it fell on a day, that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there.

12 And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him.

13 And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? wouldest thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, I dwell among mine own people.¹

14 And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily she hath no child, and her husband is old.

15 And he said, Call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door.

16 And he said, About this season,² according to the time of life, thou shalt embrace a son. And she said, Nay, my lord, thou man of God, do not lie unto thine handmaid.³

17 And the woman conceived, and bare a son⁴ at that season that Elisha had said unto her, according to the time of life.

18 ¶ And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers.

19 And he said unto his father, My head, my head!⁵ And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother.

20 And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then died.

21 And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.

22 And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may run to the man of God, and come again.

23 And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is neither new-moon, nor sabbath. And she said, It shall be well.⁶

24 Then she saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward; slack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee.

25 So she went, and came unto the man of God to mount Carmel.⁷ And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite:

26 Run^m now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well.

27 And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught him by the feet:⁸ but Gehazi came near to thrust her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is vexed within her: and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me.⁹

28 Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me?

29 Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins,¹ and take my staff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again:² and lay my staff upon the face of the child.

30 And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her.

31 And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but there was neither voice, nor hearing:⁴ wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not awaked.⁵

32 And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed.

33 He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord.

34 And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands; and he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm.

35 Then he returned, and walked in the house to and fro;⁶ and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven times,⁷ and the child opened his eyes.

36 And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her: and, when she was come in unto him, he said, Take up thy son.

37 Then she went in, and fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and took up her son, and went out.

38 ¶ And Elisha came again to Gilgal: and there was a dearth in the land; and the sons of the prophets were sitting before him:

quaintance and friendship with God's servants is a principal ornament of the great: and happy are those families where both heads agree in it. HOUSE OF NAAMAN, THE LEPER—WHERE THE CAPTAIN OF THE KING OF SYRIA LIVED. [II. Kings, v:1.]—"Now Naaman, Captain of the host of the King of Syria, was a great man with his master * * * but he was a leper." There is a house outside of the east gate of Damascus on the banks of the Abana river, that is said to stand upon the site of Naaman, the leper's house. This is now a leper hospital, and there are about thirty-five or forty of as wretched looking human beings in this hospital and strolling about the premises, as are to be found perhaps on the face of the earth. They seem to do their own cooking, go and come at will, and make a living by begging backsheesh in the most pitiable tones, from travelers. It is not surprising that Naaman, the proud Captain who resided at Damascus, should have refused to wash in the River Jordan, when he remembered the beautiful Abana that flowed by his house.

Vol. 2—3

ROADWAY ALONG THE ABANA, DAMASCUS. [II. Kings, v:12.]—"Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? May I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned and went away in a rage." In reality the Pharpar river does not come up as far as Damascus. This ancient city is watered by the Abana alone, and the Abana has four sources; one is from Fijeh, under the Lebanon Cliff; another from near Amri el-hamah, north of Zebdany; another west of Zebdany, and the fourth west of Ruklah and Hermon. The trees and flowers along the banks of this river are beautiful beyond description. The shrubbery grows down to the very water's edge. The leaves are so green they are almost black. As Egypt is the gift of the Nile, so Damascus is the gift of the Abana river. It really creates an island in a desert.

that there is no God in all the earth but in Israel; now therefore, I pray thee, take a blessing⁸ of thy servant.

16 But he said, As the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, I will receive none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused.

17 And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth?⁹ for thy servant will henceforth offer neither burnt-offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the LORD.

18 In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my hand, and I bow² myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, the LORD pardon thy servant in this thing.

19 And he said unto him, *Go in peace.*³ So he departed from him a little way.

20 ¶ But Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said, Behold, my master hath spared Naaman his Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought; but, as the LORD liveth, I will run after him, and take somewhat of him.

21 So Gehazi followed after Naaman: and when Naaman saw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, Is all well?

22 And he said, All is well. My master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the sons of the prophets: give them, I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

f Naaman came a heathen, and though now a convert, is a young and childish one. He, therefore, still retains his original ideas of 'holy earth,' an opinion still prevalent among the Jews, with whom, in Europe, 'Jerusalem earth' is a considerable article of import. The same superstition prevails amongst Mahometans, who carry into all countries the 'holy earth' of Mecca; and amongst Romanists, whom we have seen dig up, and carry to great distances, similar 'holy earth' from the reputed grave of their so-called patron saint at Down, in Ireland. CHAPTER VI.

1 Elisha, giving leave to the young prophets to enlarge their dwellings, causeth iron to swim. 8 He discloseth the king of Syria's counsel. 13 The army which was sent to Dothan to apprehend Elisha is smitten with blindness. 19 Being brought into Samaria, they are dismissed in peace. 24 The famine in Samaria causeth women to eat their own children. 30 The king sendeth to slay Elisha.

AND the "sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us.

2 Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam,¹ and let us make us a place there where we may dwell. And he answered, Go ye.

3 And one said, Be content, I pray thee, and go with thy servants. And he answered, I will go.

4 So he went with them. And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood.

Ver. 12. [The Abana, now called Barada, rises in a beautiful plain in the very heart of the range of Anti-Lebanon, and cuts its way through a sublime ravine down to the plain of Damascus. Before entering the plain, and also after entering it, a number of canals are led off from the river at different elevations, and are carried along the higher parts of the plain for purposes of irrigation. By this means an immense extent of country, which would otherwise be a parched desert, is converted into a paradise. The Abana flows through the city and across the plain eastward for 20 miles, and then falls into a lake. The Pharpar, now called Awaj, rises high up on the eastern side of Mount Hermon, flows through the plain south of Damascus, at the distance of about 7 miles from the city, and falls into a separate lake or marsh. Numerous canals are also led off from the Pharpar for purposes of irrigation; and some of them are carried within a mile of the city. By means of these two rivers the plain of Damascus is made the richest and most beautiful in the world. There was much truth, therefore, in the haughty exclamation of Naaman: 'Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Greatness and wealth avail so little to make men happy, that they cannot preserve them from the sorest and most loathsome calamities. God can make the captivity and distress of his people a useful mean for spreading the knowledge of himself, and even out of the mouths of babes and sucklings he can perfect praise. It is a great privilege to have servants who know God and seek the welfare of the family. Men are generally willing to try every expedient, and bestow the utmost expense and trouble, to obtain a cure of their bodily distempers; but how few regard the worth or welfare of their souls! and how readily carnal men fancy that supernatural benefits must be purchased by carnal profits! Men who are conscious of their ill deserts often tremble at every shadow, and disquiet their minds by misinterpreting the most innocent intentions of their neighbours. But God in mercy oftentimes helps the wicked far beyond what they have reason to expect. And ministers ought to seize upon every opportunity of manifesting the power and grace of God: but never ought they to sully their character by a complaisant crouching to the pride of great men. Proud spirits readily interpret the least suspected slight into a heinous affront: and the wise in their own conceit often ruin themselves by contempt of the simple dictates and ordinances of God. But O the riches of his grace, that stops our course when we forsake our own mercy! It is happy for proud and passionate masters to have servants faithful, calm, and prudent, to offer them an advice: and we see here the happy consequences of sometimes attending to it. Hopeful is our case if we once submit to God's method of relief: for by what simple means can he effect the most wonderful deliverance! Never then let me, through the pride of my heart, reject his means of salvation, or stumble at the simplicity of a crucified Redeemer: his blood and spirit can cleanse the foulest leprosy of sin and restore the most diseased sinner; and I am bid only to wash and be clean. Never let me wish to prescribe to him in the paths of his providence, who can thus, by the weakest means, produce the greatest ends, and manifest his power and glory. That knowledge of God which is obtained by such an experience of his goodness, will always be most fruitful, while holy gratitude disposes us to a careful performance of duty both towards God and men, leads us to regard the prayers of God's people, to remember past transgressions with grief, and to resolve for the future to abstain from all appearance of evil. But alas! that those who have most and best instructions and examples should have all lost upon them! Parents and masters cannot convert their children or servants. Covetousness tempts to lying and almost every other evil: and one sin always leads on to another. Hope of concealment and impunity is a great encouragement to do evil. But short-lived, transitory, and bitter in the end, is prosperous wickedness: and how often men, by their covetousness and falsehood, entail plagues on themselves and their posterity!

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—It is comfortable to see Christ's disciples increase in the worst of times; but often faithful people are in very poor outward circumstances. Nor in evil times ought a minister to grudge if his own hands must minister to his necessities: but it ill becomes him to be an idle vagabond or slothful loiterer. Things borrowed ought to be carefully preserved. And it is extremely galling to an honest or generous mind to hurt his neighbour. How restless are the enemies of God's people! But it is easy for God, who knows all things, to frustrate their counsels by warning his servants of them; and it is

MILL AT DOTHAN—WHERE THE HORSES AND CHARIOTS OF FIRE WERE SEEN ABOUT ELISHA. [II. Kings, vi:13.]—"And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan." Here in this place, near where Joseph was cast into a pit by his brethren, and where Elisha's young man saw the mountain full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha, we saw the only steam mill that we observed in Palestine. It is rather a crude affair, but shows that the material elements of modern civilization are gradually penetrating this, one of the oldest countries. The civilization of Palestine in the days of David and Solomon, and even down to the coming of Christ, was far higher than what it is to-day. It was not only arrested by Moslem religion, but has been set back and degraded to a degree lower almost than any other civilization in the world, above that of the barbarian.

5 But as one was felling a beam, the axe-head² fell into the water: and he cried, and said, 'Alas, master!³ for it was borrowed.

6 And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he showed him the place. And he cut⁴ down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron did swim.

7 Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

8 ¶ Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my camp.⁵

9 And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are come down.

10 And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice.⁶

11 ¶ Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not show me which of us is for the king of Israel?

12 And one of his servants said, None,⁷ my lord, O king: but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bed-chamber.

13 And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan.⁸

14 Therefore sent he thither horses, and chariots, and a great host: and they came by night, and compassed the city about.

15 ¶ And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host compassed the city, both with horses and chariots: and his servant said unto him, Alas, my master! how shall we do?

16 And he answered, Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them.

17 And Elisha prayed, and said, LORD, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the LORD opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain² was full of horses and chariots³ of fire round about Elisha.

18 ¶ And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the LORD, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindness.⁴ And he smote them with blindness, according to the word of Elisha.

19 And Elisha said unto them, This is not the way,⁵ neither is this the city:⁶ follow me, and I will bring you to the man whom ye seek. But he led them to Samaria.

20 And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, LORD, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the LORD opened their eyes, and they saw; and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria.

21 And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, My father, shall I smite them? shall I smite them?

22 And he answered, Thou shalt not smite them: wouldest thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow? Set bread and water⁷ before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master.

23 And he prepared great provision for them: and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. So the bands of Syria⁸ came no more into the land of Israel.

24 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Ben-hadad king of Syria gathered all his host, and went up,⁹ and besieged Samaria.

25 And there was a great famine in Samaria: and, behold, they besieged it, until an ass's head¹ was sold for fourscore pieces of silver,² and the fourth part of a cab³ of doves' dung⁴ for five pieces of silver.⁵

26 ¶ And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying, Help, my lord, O king!

27 And he said, If the LORD do not help thee,⁶ whence shall I help thee? out of the barn-floor, or out of the wine-press?

28 And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him to-day, and we will eat my son to-morrow.

29 So we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the next⁷ day, Give thy son, that we may eat him:⁸ and she hath hid her son.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he rent his clothes; and he passed by upon the wall, salutary to attend exactly to his admonitions. On the contrary, it is mad impiety for the mightiest to attempt fighting against God and his servants. When there is at best but little faith, the mind is easily overwhelmed with consternation and tempted to despair of divine protection. But they who are strong ought to pray for the weak and bear with their infirmities. Clear views of God's goodness, power, and kindness, and of his angelic guards, can effectually remove our slavish fear of temporal calamities. How often they who fight against God are given up to stupidity and strong delusions; and find themselves conquered or ruined where they hoped to triumph! But if we have our enemies at our mercy it is best to render them good for evil, and thus soften and captivate their hearts. But no kindness will long impress a hardened and obstinate foe. And how dreadful is the scourge of a furious war! It may quickly render us destitute of our necessary food; and raging hunger may prevail against the strongest natural affections. None know what miseries await them before they die. And in our distresses, particularly those of our soul, if God

PART OF OUR CARAVAN AT DOTHAN, WHERE ELISHA'S YOUNG MAN SAW THE MOUNTAINS FULL OF HORSES AND CHARIOTS. [II. KINGS vi:17.]—"And Elisha prayed, and said, Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." The scene which is described in this picture was at Dothan. Dothan lay upon the highway which the Ishmaelite merchants were compelled to travel, and it was during one of their regular marches along this way that they bought Joseph from his brethren, as we are told in Genesis xxxvii:17. Here we know it was that the Lord opened the eyes of Elisha's young man, because when the King of Syria warred against Israel, he wanted to know of the whereabouts of Elisha, the man of God. In the 13th verse of the 6th chapter of II. Kings we are told: "And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan."

and the people looked, and, behold, *he had sackcloth within upon his flesh.*⁹

31 Then he said, "God do so and more also to me, if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphat shall stand on him this day.

32 But Elisha "sat in his house, and the elders sat with him; and the king sent a man from before him: but ere the messenger came to him, he said to the elders, See ye how this son^p of a murderer¹ hath sent to take away mine head? look, when the messenger cometh, shut the door, and hold him fast at the door; is not the 'sound of his master's feet behind him?

33 And while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger came down unto him: and "he^a said, Behold, this evil is of the LORD; what should I wait for the LORD any longer?³

CHAPTER VII.

1 Elisha prophesieth incredible plenty in Samaria. 3 Four lepers, venturing into the host of the Syrians, bring tidings of their flight. 12 The king, finding by spies the news to be true, spoileth the tents of the Syrians. 17 The lord who would not believe the prophecy of plenty, having the charge of the gate, is trodden to death in the press.

THEN Elisha "said, Hear ye the word of the LORD; Thus saith the LORD, 'To-morrow about this time 'shall a measure¹ of fine flour be sold for a shekel,² and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate³ of Samaria.

2 Then a lord, "on whose hand the king leaned,⁴ answered the man of God, and said, Behold, 'if the LORD would make windows in heaven, might^t this thing be?⁵ And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt 'not eat thereof.

3 ¶ And there were four leprous men "at the entering in of the gate: and they said one to another, Why sit we here until we die?

4 If we say, We will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there; and if we sit still here, we die also. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the host of the Syrians: 'if they save us alive, we shall live; and if they kill us, we shall but die.

5 And they rose up in the 'twilight, to go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria, behold, there was no man there.

6 For the LORD had made the host of the Syrians to "hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us the kings of the Hittites,⁶ and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us

7 Wherefore they arose and 'fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life.⁷

MAT-WEAVERS, SYRIA—CHARACTERISTIC OF SYRIA IN ALL AGES. [II. KINGS, vii: 15.]—"And they went after them unto Jordan; and lo, all the way was full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their haste." There are a great many Bedouins in Syria who live in tents. These tents are woven of black goats' hair, and are covered with thick, heavy mats. We see in the above picture a rude contrivance the natives use for weaving these mats. They cut the rushes of which the mats are woven from the Jordan. The native Bedouins when aroused or threatened are full of hate, but when approached in their tents by foreigners and addressed kindly they appear to be very polite and gentle. Our party spent a night camping within the confines of a Bedouin village, and they treated us with the greatest respect and kindness, brought us milk, assisted our cook in the preparation of our food, and our muleteers in feeding and tying our horses.

19 And that lord answered the man of God, and said Now, behold, if the LORD should make windows in heaven, might such a thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof.

20 And so it fell out unto him: for the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The Shunammite, having left her country seven years, to avoid the forewarned famine, for Elisha's miracle sake hath her land restored by the king. 7 Hazael, being sent with a present by Benhadad to Elisha at Damascus, after he had heard the prophecy, killeth his master, and succeedeth him. 16 Jehoram's wicked reign in Judah. 20 Edom and Libnah revolt. 23 Ahaziah succeedeth Jehoram. 25 Ahaziah's wicked reign. 28 He visiteth Jehoram wounded, at Jezreel.

THEN spake Elisha unto the woman, whose son he had restored to life, saying, Arise, and go thou and thine household, and sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn: for the LORD hath called for a famine; and it shall also come upon the land seven years.

2 And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God: and she went with her household, and sojourned in the land of the Philistines seven years.

3 And it came to pass at the seven years' end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and she went forth to cry unto the king for her house, and for her land.

4 And the king talked with Gehazi, the servant of the man of God, saying, Tell me, I pray thee all the great things that Elisha hath done.

5 And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how he had restored a dead body to life, that, behold, the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the king for her house, and for her land. And Gehazi said, My lord, O king, this is the woman, and this is her son, whom Elisha restored to life.

6 And when the king asked the woman, she told him. So the king appointed unto her a certain officer, saying, Restore all that was her's, and all the fruits of the field since the day that she left the land, even until now.

7 And Elisha came to Damascus; and Benhadad the king of Syria was sick: and it was told him, saying, The man of God is come hither.

8 And the king said unto Hazael, Take a present in thine hand, and go, meet the man of God, and inquire of the LORD by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

1 It appears strange to many that there could be a famine in Israel and plenty in Philistia, countries between which there was no difference of soil or climate, and that lay so contiguous to each other. Those who either wonder or object show little knowledge or observation in agriculture. Such occurrences are common in all countries, and arise from various causes, such as (1) Diversity of agricultural skill. (2) Variety in the staple crop, which people are not easily induced to change to suit seasons. (3) From the local nature of drought and rain, which, though generally equalized, are sometimes very unequal. (4) From the destructive powers of insects, generated at particular degrees of temperature and moisture. (5) From facilities of import— which last was altogether in favour of the Philistines, who dwelt along the borders of the Mediterranean.—C.

9 So Hazael went to meet him, and took a present with him, even of every good thing of Damascus, forty camels' burden, and came and stood before him, and said, Thy son Benhadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

10 And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest certainly recover: howbeit the LORD hath showed me that he shall surely die.

11 And he settled his countenance stedfastly, until he was ashamed: and the man of God wept.

12 And Hazael said, Why weepeth my lord? And he answered, Because I know the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strong holds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and wilt dash their children, and rip up their women with child.

13 And Hazael said, But what! is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing? And Elisha answered, The LORD hath showed me that thou shalt be king over Syria.

14 So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master; who said to him, What said Elisha to thee? And he answered, He told me that thou shouldst surely recover.

15 And it came to pass on the morrow, that he took a thick cloth, and dipped it in water, and spread it on his face, so that he died: and Hazael reigned in his stead.

16 And in the fifth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel, Jehoshaphat being then king of Judah, Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah began to reign.

17 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

18 And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, as did the house of Ahab; for the daughter of Ahab was his wife: and he did evil in the sight of the LORD.

19 Yet the LORD would not destroy Judah for David his servant's sake, as he promised him to give him alway a light, and to his children.

20 In his days Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah, and made a king over themselves.

21 So Joram went over to Zair, and all the chariots with him; and he rose by night, and Hard necessity will compel men to the most dangerous adventures; and if God grant us relief, we ought to publish our mercies, that others may share with us in our comforts. But how terrible is their destruction who have contemned the promises of God! The means of deliverance to others prove ruinous to them. No human greatness or favour of kings can protect them from the arm of God; nay, nor even from being victims of popular rage. Stand in awe, my soul; always believe that it shall be unto thee as God hath said: for is there anything too hard for the Lord? In depths of distress cast thyself on his mercy. None perish that trust in him. Comfort others with the consolations wherewith thou art comforted of Christ. And God forbid that I should see the glories of redemption and yet never share thereof.

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 10. Thou mayest certainly recover. These words in the Hebrew may be rendered either of two ways, according as they are pointed. If pointed as in the Masoretic text their literal translation is—'Go, say to him, Thou shalt surely live.' But if pointed as the letters seem naturally to require, then they must be translated—'Go, say, Thou shalt not surely live;' and the prophet explains this to Hazael by the statement made to himself:—'For Jehovah hath shown me that he shall surely die.' P.]

Ver. 15. [Crafty though Hazael was, Elisha, by divine inspiration, read his wicked designs; and his searching look brought a blush to the traitor's face. The whole circumstances of this tragic episode in sacred history are thoroughly oriental; the forty camels' burden of every good thing of Damascus; the accomplished duplicity and cruelty of the confidential servant; the ease with which the murderer mounted the throne of his victim; and the subsequent barbarity of the usurper.

22 Yet Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. Then Libnah revolted at the same time.¹

23 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

24 And Joram slept with his fathers,² and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ In the twelfth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel did Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah begin to reign.

26 Two and twenty years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign;³ and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Athaliah, the daughter of Omri king of Israel.

27 And he walked in the way of the house of Ahab, and did evil in the sight of the LORD, as did the house of Ahab: for he was the son-in-law of the house of Ahab.

28 ¶ And he went with Joram the son of Ahab, to the war against Hazael king of Syria in Ramoth-gilead; and the Syrians wounded Joram.

29 And king Joram went back to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him at Ramah, when he fought against Hazael king of Syria: and Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Joram the son of Ahab in Jezreel, because he was sick.

It was taken by Joshua after the defeat of the confederate kings at Gibeon. The reason of its revolt at this particular period was its connection with the Edomites, who were extending their conquests over the southern border of Philistia, and were anxious to stir up revolt against Israel wherever it was possible. TOWER OF JEZREEL—WHERE THE WATCHMAN STOOD AND SPIED THE COMPANY OF JEHU. [II. KINGS, ix:17.]—"And there stood a watchman on the Tower of Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take a horseman and send to meet them, and let him say, Is it peace?" The modern name of the City of Jezreel is Zerin. It is but a village and is in decay. It consists of only a few houses which stand among the ruins, and it commands a view of the Beisan Plain on the east and the plain of Esdraelon on the west. The Jezreel of the Hebrews was known as Esdraelon among the Greeks, and as Stradela in the Middle Ages. There is a fountain here, and the Israelites are represented as pitching their tents by a fountain which is in Jezreel. Ahab and Jezebel once had their royal residence here. Here was the vineyard of Naboth. We are in full view from this point of Mount Carmel.

of Nimshi, 'conspired against Joram: (now Joram had 'kept Ramoth-gilead,¹ he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria:

15 But 'king Joram² was returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria: and Jehu said, If it be your minds, then 'let none go forth nor escape out of the city, to go to tell it in Jezreel.

16 ¶ So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel; (for Joram lay there:) and 'Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram.

17 And there stood 'a watchman on the tower in Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take an horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, *Is it peace?*³

18 So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu said, What hast thou to do with peace?⁴ turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again.

19 Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me.

20 And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and the driving⁵ is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; for he 'driveth 'furiously.⁷

21 And Joram said, Make ready.⁸ And his chariot was made ready. And Joram king of Israel, and Ahaziah king of Judah, went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and met⁹ him 'in the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite.

22 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, 'Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, What peace, so long as the 'whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel and her witchcrafts¹ are so many?

23 And Joram 'turned his hands, and fled, and said to Ahaziah, There is treachery, O Ahaziah.

24 And Jehu drew a bow with his full strength,² and 'smote Jehoram between his arms, and the arrow went out at his heart, and he sunk³ down in his chariot.

25 Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain,

Ramoth-gilead was one of the chief strongholds east of the Jordan, and was appointed a city of refuge in the tribe of Gad. Its site has been identified in the modern town of Saif. The situation is strong and picturesque. It stands on a hill, which is separated by deep ravines from the loftier mountains that encompass it. On the summit is the castle or citadel, a rectangular building with massive walls and a deep moat. In the cliffs and ravines round it are great numbers of tombs and grottoes.—P.

The Targum reads 'quietly, slowly; Josephus has it 'slowly, and in good order.' This sense was proposed to adopt; for, if driving furiously, how could the dialogues recorded have passed, or the watchman have so distinctly reported? Besides, Jehu, a politician determined, would wish to avoid giving alarm, and take Joram unawares. C.—The literal meaning is 'in madness,' 'madly.' Slow driving would scarcely be characteristic of any man.

REFLECTIONS.—God's ministers must communicate their labours and honours one with another; and must discharge their office in a faithful, prudent, active, and disinterested manner, let men account them mad or anything they please. To what terrible lengths professors of the true religion go before God entirely rejects them from being his people! But such as rule ought to consider God as the source of their power, and to use it humbly for his glory. To what fearful work God sometimes appoints magistrates! and there is need of great singleness and steadiness in executing it. To ask advice from our equals or inferiors is the most effectual method to procure their consent; and matters of importance ought to be transacted with proper secrecy and despatch. Tottering is the throne of wicked kings; and terrible destruction hangs over the sinner's head! But persecutors of God's people are reckoned by him the most heinous offenders; and they who persist in their impotence shall be rooted out at last; and companions of fools shall be destroyed along with them. Solid peace can never consist with wilful sinning, let sinners wish and expect it as they will; and whoredoms, which are now men's pleasure, will shortly issue in everlasting pain. Providence strangely connects the circumstances of men's punishment with those of their crimes and his own threatenings; and all things work for their overthrow who give themselves up to wilful sin. Themselves are made to rush on their ruin: and God's infinite justice may be insulted, but will not be intimidated. Wickedness and wretchedness are really inseparable, and at last meet in fearful

CHAPTER X.

1 Jehu, by his letters, causeth seventy of Ahab's children to be beheaded. 8 He excuseth the fact by the prophecy of Elijah. 12 At the shearing house he slayeth two and forty of Ahaziah's brethren. 15 He taketh Jehonadab into his company. 18 By subtilty he destroyeth at once all the worshippers of Baal. 29 Jehu followeth Jeroboam's sins. 32 Hazael oppresseth Israel. 34 Jehoahaz succeedeth Jehu.

AND Ahab had "seventy sons" in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto "the rulers of Jezreel," to the elders, and to them that brought up³ Ahab's children, saying,

2 Now, "as soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour,

3 Look even out "the best and meepest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and fight" for your master's house.⁵

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, Behold, "two kings stood not before him; how then shall we stand?"

5 And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers-up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, "We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes.

6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be mine,⁶ and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye "the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. (Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up.)

7 And it came to pass, when the letter came to them, that they took the king's sons, and slew^h seventy persons, and put their heads in baskets, and sent him them to Jezreel.

8 ¶ And there came a messenger, and told him, saying, They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said, "Lay ye them in two heaps" at the entering in of the gate until the morning.

9 And it came to pass in the morning, that he went out, and stood, and said to all the people, Ye be "righteous:" behold, I conspired against my master, and slew him; but who slew all these?

ae That the sin of drunkenness had made considerable progress in Israel, appears probable from 1 Ki. 4. 20 and 26.9; and the notice of the Syrian king, 1 Ki. 20. 12, 16. Of this sin, Jehonadab, the son of Rechab, an Arabian, and not far from the latter, was a vigorous opponent—a notable reformer of his country's dissolute manners. Honest and self-denying himself, he rebuked Jehu solikewise, and therefore goes out to meet him, while the shrewd, cunning and reckless zealot takes advantage of his popularity to countenance and aid him in his selfish proceedings.—C.

earth nothing of the word of the LORD, which the LORD spake concerning the house of Ahab: for the LORD hath done that which he spake by⁹ his servant Elijah.

11 So Jehu slew "all that remained of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, and all his great men, and his kinsfolks," and "his priests, until he left him none remaining.

12 ¶ And he arose, and departed, and came to Samaria: and as he was at the "shearing-house" in the way.⁴

14 And he said, "Take them alive. And they took them alive, and slew them at the "pit of the shearing-house, even two and forty men; neither left he any of them.

17 And when he came to Samaria, he slew all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had "destroyed him, according to the saying of the LORD, which he spake to Elijah.

19 Now therefore call unto me all "the prophets of Baal, all his servants, and all his priests, let none be wanting; for I have a great sacrifice to do to Baal: whosoever shall be wanting, he shall not live. But Jehu did it "in subtilty, to the intent that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

20 And Jehu said, "Proclaim a solemn assembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it.

forms. Painting and pampering do but ripen for tremendous woe. And though for a time sinners may lift their heads high, they will shortly be brought low in death and still lower in hell: and not only their corpse, but their memory, shall rot and perish. And whether instruments intend it or not, the word of the Lord shall have its full accomplishment.

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS. — Obstinate sinners lay up terrible judgments for themselves and their seed: and loads of guilt extirpate numerous and flourishing families. But none are more ready to imbrue their hands in the blood of a sovereign's children than those who have been his instruments in murdering the innocent. No regard to their prince will afterwards restrain those whose hands have by his order been drenched in blood. They who debauch men's consciences will find the effects of it return on their own heads. Guilt makes men spiritless cowards when brought to a trial: they will be always ready to side with the strongest: and when they want an excuse to cover their shame, any shadow of argument will stand. It is common for wicked men to lessen their guilt by comparing it with that of others. But friendship and intimacy with sinners involves us in their punishment: and such as have been instruments in wickedness share in the ruin of their wicked encouragers. How righteous are the judgments of God, even when the executors act wickedly! But it is ill-boding when pretended reformers are proud of their work, and indulge themselves in hypocrisy and falsehood to accomplish it. They who boast of their zeal give ground to suspect their sincerity. And though the godly, whom they care for their selfish interests, cannot but approve what is apparently good, the Lord will at last discover their hypocrisy and evil. False religion ought to be extirpated, and wicked men overcome: and if men overlook them, Jesus will at last convene them to execute his justice upon them. It shows the great evil of the heart when the wisdom of the serpent meets with its poison in our work; and when with severity we extirpate one form of false worship, yet cleave at the same time to another. Real converts must put away all sin without reserve. For how awful will be our state, if, when we have done good to the souls of others, we should lose our own by our negligence in the service of God! If hypocrites receive their temporary reward of good deeds on earth, how much more glorious the reward of the diligent saint! And while God rewards men for what they do well, it is just that he should severely punish them for what they do amiss.

the worshippers of Baal came, so that there was not a man left that came not: and they came into the house of Baal; and the house of Baal was full from one end to another.¹

22 And he said unto him that was over the vestry, Bring forth vestments for all the worshippers of Baal. And he brought them forth vestments.³

23 And Jehu went, and Jehonadab the son of Rechab, into the house of Baal, and said unto the worshippers of Baal, Search, and look that there be here with you none of the servants of the LORD, but the worshippers of Baal only.

24 And when they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt-offerings, Jehu appointed fourscore men without, and said, If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life shall be for the life of him.

25 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, that Jehu said to the guard and to the captains, Go in, and slay them; let none come forth. And they smote them with the edge⁴ of the sword; and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city⁵ of the house of Baal.

26 And they brought forth the images⁶ out of the house of Baal, and burned them.

27 And they brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draught-house⁷ unto this day.

28 Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel.

29 ¶ Howbeit⁸ from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, Jehu departed not from after them,⁹ to wit, the golden calves that were in Beth-el, and that were in Dan.

30 And the LORD said unto Jehu, *Because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab according to all that was in mine heart, thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel.*⁹

31 But Jehu took no heed¹ to walk in the law of the LORD God of Israel with all his heart: for he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, which made Israel to sin.²

32 ¶ In those days³ the LORD began to cut⁴ Israel short,⁵ and Hazael smote them in all the coasts of Israel;

33 From Jordan eastward,⁶ all the land of Gilead, the Gadites, and the Reubenites, and the Manassites, from Aroer, (which is by the river Arnon,) even Gilead and Bashan.⁷

CHAPTER XI.

1 Jehoash, being saved by Jehoheba his aunt from Athaliah's massacre of the seed royal of Judah, is hid six years in the house of God. 4 Jehoiaada, giving order to the captains, in the seventh year anointeth him king. 13 Athaliah is slain. 17 Jehoiaada restoreth the worship of God.

AND when 'Athaliah,¹ the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose, and destroyed all the seed royal.²

2 But 'Jehosheba, the daughter of king Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain; and they hid³ him, even him and his nurse, in the 'bed-chamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain.

3 And he was with her hid in the house of the LORD six years: and Athaliah⁴ did 'reign over the land.⁵

4 ¶ And the seventh year⁶ Jehoiaada sent and fetched the 'rulers over hundreds, with the captains and the guard, and brought them to him into the house of the LORD, and made a 'covenant with them, and took an oath of them in the house of the LORD, and showed them the king's son.

5 And he commanded them, saying, This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part⁷ of you that enter in on the sabbath shall even be keepers of the watch of the king's house;

6 And a third part shall be at 'the gate of Sur; and a third part at the gate behind the guard:⁷ so shall ye keep the watch of the house, that it be not broken down.⁸

7 And two 'parts¹ of all you that 'go forth on the sabbath, even they shall keep the watch of the house of the LORD about the king.²

8 And ye shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and he that cometh within the ranges,³ let him be slain: and be ye with the king as he goeth out, and as he cometh in.

9 And the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiaada the priest commanded: and they took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that should go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiaada the priest.

CHAPTER XI. REFLECTIONS.—Mad ambition to reign steels the heart against the most natural affections: and men would be devils incarnate, were it not for the restraining grace of God. Even women would do everything horrid to secure their unlawful power, or wreak their ralice against God and his people. What terrible bloodshed, and ruin to a family, does the introduction of one wicked woman produce! [Comp. 2 Ch. 21. 4; 22. 1; 2 Ki. 10. 14; 11. 1.] But however sinners triumph in their wickedness, their judgment lingers not; and believers shall be plucked as brands out of the burning. The promise of God shall be fulfilled, let Satan and his agents do their worst: and all the activity of sinners shall but hasten their own ruin. Evil shall hunt out the remains of accursed families till they be utterly destroyed: and neither wicked calumnies nor loud cries shall avail them. But what a blessing is one great man to a 11 And the guard stood, every man with his weapons in his hand, round about the king, from the right corner⁴ of the temple⁵ to the left corner of the temple, along by the altar and the temple.

12 And he brought forth ^othe king's son, and put the crown upon him, and gave him the testimony;⁶ and they made him king, and anointed² him; and they clapped their hands, and said, 'God save the king.

13 ¶ And when Athaliah heard the noise of the guard and of the people, she came to the people into the temple of the LORD.

14 And when she looked, behold, the king stood by a pillar,⁷ as the manner was, and the princes and the trumpeters by the king; and all the people of the land rejoiced, and blew with trumpets: and Athaliah rent her clothes, and cried, 'Treason, Treason!

15 But Jehoiada the priest commanded the captains⁸ of the hundreds, the officers of the host, and said unto them, Have her forth without the ranges; and him that followeth her kill with the sword. For the priest had said, Let her not be slain in the house of the LORD.⁸

16 And they laid hands on her: and she went by the way by the which the horses came into the king's house; and there⁹ was she slain.

17 ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, that they should be the LORD's people; between the king also and the people.⁹

18 And all the people of the land went into the house of Baal, and brake it down; his altars and his images brake they in pieces thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars: and the priest appointed officers¹ over the house of the LORD.²

19 And he took the rulers over hundreds, and the captains, and the guard, and all the people of the land; and they brought down the king from the house of the LORD, and came by the way of the gate of the guard to the king's house: and he sat on the throne of the kings.

1 Jehoash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada. 4 He giveth order for the repair of the temple. 17 Hazael is diverted from his design against Jerusalem by a present of the hallowed treasures. 19 Jehoash being slain by his servants, Amaziah succeedeth him.

IN the seventh year of Jehu Jehoash began to reign; and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And Jehoash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all his days wherein Jehoiada the priest instructed him.

3 But the high places were not taken away; the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 ¶ And Jehoash said to the priests, All the money of the dedicated things² that is brought into the house of the LORD, even the money of every one that passeth the account, the money that every man³ is set at, and all the money that cometh into any man's heart⁴ to bring into the house of the LORD,

5 Let the priests take it to them, every man of his acquaintance: and let them repair the breaches of the house, wheresoever any breach shall be found.

6 But it was so, that, in the three and twentieth year of king Jehoash, the priests had not repaired the breaches of the house.

7 Then king Jehoash called for Jehoiada the priest, and the other priests, and said unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the house? Now therefore receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house.

8 And the priests consented to receive no more money of the people, neither to repair the breaches of the house.⁵

9 But Jehoiada the priest took a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the LORD: and the priests that kept the door put therein all the money that was brought into the house of the LORD.

10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that the king's scribe and the high priest came up, and they put up⁷ in bags,⁸ and told the money that was found in the house of the LORD.

11 And they gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that church and nation, when he is active, prudent, and pious! They who first give themselves to the Lord, may comfortably hope for his blessing upon their undertakings: and civil establishments are best founded in a due care of true religion. That kingdom will be truly happy where God's word is made the rule of the monarch's government and of the people's obedience: and when religion comes in fashion, every man will appear zealous; and religion, liberty, and order will support one another.

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 4. The first clause of this verse contains a general command that all the money which was wont, according to law, to be given to the temple, should be applied by the priests for repairs. This money, or sacred tax, was of three kinds, and these are enumerated in the succeeding clauses of the verse, as follows:—1. 'The money of the numbered,' i.e. of those who, as ordered in Ex. 30. 13, give on being registered half a shekel as an offering to the Lord. 2. 'The money at which each man is estimated,' i.e. the money which was to be paid to the Lord for redemption by any one who by a special vow had devoted himself, or any portion of his property, to God. 3. All money of a free-will offering. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Old and evil customs are hard to root out: and rarely is the reformation of religion exactly answerable to the divine standard of God's word. Fear of men, or hopes that corruptions will die away of their own accord, often make good men to stop short. What a mercy it is for youth, particularly princes, to have pious, prudent, and faithful tutors! And often young hypocrites, under such care, manifest for a time more forwardness in the work of reformation than the aged servants of God. How hopeful it is when liberality in contributing for sacred purposes meets with prudence and fidelity in the disposal! But when men are only restrained from evil by the influence of others, their wickedness readily breaks out at last, and they destroy what they have built. Hypocrites will not always call on God, but will become foolish in their imaginations, and hasten their own ruin by 13 Howbeit there were not made for the house of the LORD bowls² of silver, snuffers, basons, trumpets, any vessels of gold, or vessels of silver, of the money that was brought into the house of the LORD:³

14 But they gave that to the workmen, and repaired therewith the house of the LORD.

15 Moreover, they reckoned not with the men into whose hand they delivered the money to be bestowed on workmen; for they dealt faithfully.⁴

16 The trespass-money and sin-money was not brought into the house of the LORD: it was the priests'.

17 ¶ Then⁵ Hazael king of Syria went up and fought against Gath,⁶ and took it: and Hazael set his face to go up to Jerusalem.

18 And Jehoash king of Judah took all the hallowed things that Jehoshaphat, and Jehoram, and Ahaziah, his fathers, kings of Judah, had dedicated, and his own hallowed things,⁷ and all the gold that was found in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and in the king's house, and sent it to Hazael king of Syria: and he went away⁸ from Jerusalem.

¹ This verse is reconciled with ver. 10 by supposing, as in some other cases, that Jehoash, ver. 10, had become co-regent with his father, Jehoahaz, three years before his death—a circumstance most probable in such miserable and unsettled times. C.—As sons frequently reigned with their fathers during the Hebrew monarchy, their reigns are made in some instances to commence from their partnership with their fathers in the throne, and in others from the commencement of their governing alone, after their fathers' decease. Thus we read here that Jehoahaz of Israel began to reign in the twenty-third year of Joash of Judah, and in ver. 10 we read it was in the thirty-seventh of Joash that Jehoash of Israel began to reign. Jehoahaz reigned seventeen years, which would make about the fortieth of Joash. This is explained by supposing his father admitted him to the government two or three years before his death.—*T. H. the means which they use to prevent it. And upon none does God more readily imprint distinguished marks of his justice than upon apostate hypocrites, who chiefly dishonour his cause.

CHAPTER XIII. REFLECTIONS.—How obstinately do men cleave to that which is evil! When idolatry is once rooted in a nation, nothing but the power of God can extirpate it: and when men make themselves wicked, they also become base and miserable. But he is ready to hear the prayer of distress. His mercy abounds even to the chief of sinners.

But they who, after both judgments and mercies, continue in their sin, may expect to have at last judgment without mercy. How wisely God magnifies his servants, or renders them obscure, as is best. In what diversified forms they leave this world! Evident marks of God's favour and image are impressed upon some ministers and saints, that even wicked magistrates or others are in conscience constrained to honour them, and lament the loss of them; and what instruction, deliverance, and victory might kings obtain by an intimacy with such! The death-beds of noted ministers are useful schools of important wisdom: but the removal of the few faithful is a great weakening to the defence of a nation. Their loss is felt in death, who when alive were neglected. God himself, however, liveth as our protector and deliverer; and when his everlasting arms are employed in our favour, nothing can detain or withstand us. But, alas! our confined desires and expectations often cramp our distinguished mercies. We improve not the offers and advantages which God puts into our hands, and often we grieve him and his servants by losing our mercies for want of desire to obtain them. The death of God's eminent servants is frequently marked with tokens of wrath against their nation or 14 ¶ Now Elisha was fallen sick of his sickness whereof he died. And Joash the king of Israel came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said, 'O my father, my father! the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof!'

15 And Elisha said unto him, Take bow and arrows. And he took unto him bow and arrows.

16 And he said to the king of Israel, Put thine hand⁷ upon the bow. And he put his hand upon it: and Elisha put his hands upon the king's hands.

17 And he said, Open the window eastward:⁸ and he opened it. Then Elisha said, Shoot:⁹ and he shot. And he said, 'The arrow of the LORD's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria: for thou shalt smite the Syrians in 'Aphek, till thou have consumed them.'

18 And he said, Take the arrows: and he took them. And he said unto the king of Israel, Smite¹⁰ upon the ground: and he smote thrice, and stayed.

19 And the man of God was wroth¹ with him, and said, Thou shouldest have smitten five or six times; then hadst thou smitten Syria till thou hadst consumed it: whereas now thou shalt smite Syria but thrice.

20 ¶ And Elisha² died,³ and they buried him. And the bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year.

21 And it came to pass, as they were burying a man,⁴ that, behold, they spied a band⁵ of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha: and when the man was let down,⁶ and touched the bones of Elisha, he revived,⁷ and stood up on his feet.⁸

22 ¶ But 'Hazeal king of Syria oppressed Israel all the days of Jehoahaz.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Amaziah's good reign. 5 His justice on the murderers of his father. 7 His victory over Edom. 8 Amaziah, provoking Jehoash, is overcome and spoiled. 15 Jeroboam succeedeth Jehoash. 17 Amaziah is slain by a conspiracy. 21 Azariah succeedeth him. 23 Jeroboam's wicked reign. 28 Zachariah succeedeth him.

IN the second year of Joash¹ son of Jehoahaz king of Israel reigned 'Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah.

2 He was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

3 And he did that which was bright² in the sight of the LORD, yet not like David his father: he did according to all things as Joash his father did.³

4 Howbeit the high places were not taken away: as yet the people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places.

5 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as the kingdom was confirmed in his hand, that he slew⁴ his servants which had slain the king his father.

6 But the children⁵ of the murderers he slew not: according unto that which is written in the book of the law of Moses, wherein the LORD commanded, saying, 'The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, nor the children be put to death for the fathers; but every man shall be put to death for his own sin.'

7 ¶ He slew of 'Edom in the valley of Salt ten thousand, and took 'Selah⁷ by war,⁸ and called the name of it Joktheel unto this day.⁹

8 ¶ Then Amaziah sent messengers to Jehoash, the son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us look one another in the face.¹

9 And Jehoash the king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, 'The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was church. And even a prospect of victory over one enemy is attended with trouble from another. But what blessings are good men, by their former examples, instructions, and prayers, even after they are dead! And quickly is the fate of the most powerful and conquering nations reversed when God pleases.—But does not this Elisha present before us a figure of the great God our Saviour? How abundant his fitness for his work! He was endowed with the Spirit above measure. Ardent was his zeal for God, and tender his compassion towards destitute, grieved, fainting, and endangered men. How express and solemn was his call to his offices, which was confirmed by numerous and diversified miracles! Coming after the New Testament Elijah, John Baptist, he was solemnly initiated to his work on Jordan's bank. By his complete robe of righteousness he divided the depths of wrath and Jordans of trouble. By his new covenant of salt, and the grace thereof, he rectifies the bitter waters and barren soil of law precepts and curses, and of multiplied troubles. By him streams of gospel truths, ordinances, and influences break forth in the wilderness for perishing sinners; and the barren Gentile world he makes a joyful mother of Christians, and these fruitful in good works. To destitute souls and churches he multiplies their oil of grace, till there be no more room to receive it. By his word he often quickened the dead; and many such his death discharged from their graves. By his death and intercession he quickens millions dead in trespasses and sins. By his word he sweetens our bitter lots of temptations and troubles; he restores our sinking spirits, and supplies our famished souls. Multitudes of Gentile sinners he freely cures of their sinful leprosy, by complete purification in the river of his blood and Spirit; and renders them hearty worshippers of the true God. He is the strength and protector of his church, who gives his people victories, ruins their enemies, and manages the nations around for their good. How terrible is the resentment of Heaven against his injurers! They that mock him are rent in pieces, while there is none to deliver them. Those ministers who preach for filthy lucre, or who, by error and falsehood, wound his honour, shall infamously perish in their sin. They who attend his ordinances with malignant intentions, shall be smitten with spiritual blindness and delusion. They who discredit his word, or despise his promised fulness, shall see it with their eyes, but never share of its benefits. Tremendous judgment befell Judas, who betrayed him: and awful is the curse that has fallen on the Jews, who reviled, disbelieved, and persecuted him; and which shall at last fall on all his obstinate despisers.

CHAPTER XIV. REFLECTIONS.—It is an easy thing to be a formalist in religion—but God tries the heart. How short-lived is the prosperity of traitors and murderers! Vain minds are proud of little, and are obstinate against good advice. But others will be found proud enough to mortify them, and strong enough to render them miserable. It is madness for the people of God to weaken themselves before their common [II. Kings, xiv:25.]—"He restored the coast of Israel from the entering of Hamath unto the sea of the plain, according to the word of the Lord God of Israel, which he spake by the hand of his servant Jonah, the son of Amittai, the prophet, which was of Gath-hepher." Cana of Galilee occupies the site upon which Ittah-kazin was situated in Old Testament history, referred to in Joshua, xix:13. Cana of Galilee was also the scene of the first miracle. The Greeks have the jars here in which they claim the water was turned into wine. It is upon the Roman road from Sephoris to Tiberias, between Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee.

in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

10 Thou hast indeed smitten Edom, and thine heart hath lifted thee up: glory of this, and tarry at home; for why shouldest thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

11 But Amaziah would not hear: therefore Jehoash king of Israel went up; and he and Amaziah king of Judah looked one another in the face at Beth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah.

12 And Judah was put to the worse before Israel, and they fled every man to their tents.

13 And Jehoash king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Jehoash, the son of Ahaziah, at Beth-shemesh; and came to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, from the gate of Ephraim unto the corner-gate, four hundred cubits.

14 And he took all the gold and silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and hostages, and returned to Samaria.

15 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoash which he did, and his might, and how he fought with Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

16 And Jehoash slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel; and Jeroboam his son reigned in his stead.

17 ¶ And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Jehoash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years.

18 And the rest of the acts of Amaziah, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

19 Now they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to Lachish: but they sent after him to Lachish, and slew him there.

20 And they brought him on horses: and he was buried at Jerusalem with his fathers in the city of David.

21 ¶ And all the people of Judah took Azariah, which was sixteen years old, and made him king instead of his father Amaziah.

22 He built Elath, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

23 ¶ In the fifteenth year of Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah, Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel began to reign in Samaria, and reigned forty and one years.

enemy by their mutual contentions. They who are least fond of war have ordinarily the best success in it: and they who govern ill raise discontents among their subjects, that issue in their ruin. But whatever refuge sinners flee to, it will be found incapable to protect them. God will take care that his providence shall exactly correspond with his purpose and word. Often indeed wicked persons, families, or nations are allowed a transient blaze of prosperity just before their final fall into lasting misery and ruin: but death and hell shall quickly overtake the most prosperous transgressors.

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN, SAMARIA—WHERE THE KINGS OF ISRAEL ARE BURIED. [II. Kings, xv:17.]—"In the nine and thirtieth year of Azariah king of Judah began Menahem the son of Gadi to reign over Israel, and reigned ten years in Samaria." Samaria was a hill and city in Ephraim. It was the capital of the Ten Tribes of Israel, 42 miles north of Jerusalem. It was built 925 B. C. by Omri, the sixth king of Israel. Its inhabitants were carried away to Assyria by Shalmanezzer in 720 B. C., and their place was supplied by persons from Babylon who brought their gods with them. It is six miles northwest of Shechem and nineteen miles east of the Mediterranean. Omri, Ahab, Ahaziah, Jehu, Jehoahaz, Joash, and some of the other kings of Israel were buried in Samaria. Elijah the prophet lived here. The Church of Saint John was erected during the crusades between 1150 and 1180, over the traditional grave of John the Baptist.

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN, SAMARIA—WHERE HOSHEA REIGNED OVER ISRAEL NINE YEARS. [II. Kings, xvii:1.]—"In the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began Hoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel nine years. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord." We learn from I. Kings, xvi:23, 24, that the hill upon which Samaria was situated, was bought from Shemer by King Omri. Before the purchase of the hill by Omri, Tirzah had been the capital of Israel and before Tirzah, Shechem had been the capital. Jeroboam transferred his royal residence to Tirzah, as we learn from Solomon's Song, vi:4, and I. Kings, xiv:17, and because of the fertility of the soil about Samaria, Omri was led to purchase it. The Church of Saint John was erected between the years 1150 and 1180, over the traditional grave of Saint John the Baptist. It is now a complete ruin, and was, when this picture was taken, being torn down to make room for a mosque.

3 ¶ Against him came up Shalmaneser king of Assyria; and Hoshea became his servant, and gave³ him presents.⁴

4 And the king of Assyria found⁵ conspiracy in Hoshea: for he had sent messengers to So king of Egypt, and brought no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year: therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and bound⁶ him in prison.

5 ¶ Then the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years.

6 In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.

against Judah, by all the prophets, and by all the seers,² saying, Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets.

14 Notwithstanding they would not hear, but hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that did not believe in the LORD their God.

15 And they rejected his statutes, and his covenant that he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he testified against them; and they followed vanity, and became vain,³ and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should not do like them.

16 And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and made them molten images, even two calves, and made a grove,⁴ and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal.

17 And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire,⁵ and used divination and enchantments, and sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

18 Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight: there was none left but the tribe of Judah only.

19 Also Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

20 And the LORD rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight.

21 For he rent Israel from the house of David; and they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and Jeroboam drave Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin a great sin:

rush headlong into the very sins which ruined their neighbours before their eyes. In the day of distress sinners are bent upon turning themselves every way for relief, but from God alone can they have it. They will stick at nothing slavish, dishonest, or shameful, to obtain that from men which they might have from him in the most honourable manner. Yea, they will choose those very idols for saviours whose insufficiency to save has been manifested as with a sunbeam. What a plague to princes are those ministers who flatter them in their impiety, and readily comply therewith! And the most abandoned profligates are often very fond of that devotion which themselves have devised.

CHAPTER XVII. [Ver. 6. The Israelites when taken captive were settled 'in Halah, and in Habor, the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.' Gozan was a province of Mesopotamia, called by Ptolemy Gausanitis. It lay along the southern base of Mount Masius, and embraced the regions watered by the upper Khabur and Jerjer rivers, to the ranges of Sinjar and Hamma. The province of Halah lay along the banks of the upper Khabur, extending from its source at Ras el-Ain, to its junction with the Jerjer. One of the mounds on the bank of this river, marking the site of an ancient city, bears the name of Kalah. 'Habor, the river of Gozan,' is identical with the modern Khabur, which rises in lat. 36° 40', lon. 40°, and flows eastward to its junction with the Jerjer. The united streams form the lower Khabur. It is a remarkable fact that down as late as the 12th century there were large Jewish communities dwelling on the banks of the Khabur. P.]

Ver. 16. [The word rendered 'grove' in this verse and verse 10 is Ashara, and is generally the proper name of the Phoenician goddess Astarte, sometimes called Ashtoreth, the companion and consort of Baal. But the word is also frequently employed to signify the image of the goddess (in the plural images), which was set up either in a temple or on some sacred hill. The meaning grove, which has been adopted from the Septuagint and Vulgate versions, is altogether unsuitable here. The signification is 'an image of Astarte.' P.]

Ver. 17. [Divination. Various pretended methods of prying into futurity, such as an examination of the entrails of sacrificed animals, the flight of birds, palmistry.—Enchantments. The various impostures in which the eyes are deceived by great dexterity, or the mind subdued by the wonderful effects produced by the concealed knowledge of natural causes, also various pretended secret means of acquiring affection or inflicting revenge.—Sold themselves to do evil. These pretended arts were, and even in Christian lands still are, practised for money, especially by the people called Gipsies, whom happily, at last, Christian care is beginning to reach and settle in fixed habitations and useful employments. C.—Sold themselves. We find the same kind of expression in Ro. 7:14: 'I am carnal, sold under sin.' Now the Hebrew and Greek words in these places signify primarily 'to sell,' but according to the idiom of these languages, a man who gave himself up to any course of action, or to any form of sin, was said to sell himself. But the English word to sell can have no such latitude of meaning. The proper rendering therefore would be, 'they gave themselves up to do evil.' P.]

Ver. 29. [It has been generally supposed that the Samaritans were a mixed race of Jews and Gentiles. Such was not the case. They were wholly of Gentile origin. Strangers in blood, they were merely instructed in some of the leading points of the Jewish religion, which they observed while they retained their own national deities. They received the Pentateuch as their revelation; and their reverence for this sacred book eventually led them to renounce their idolatry. In after-times the Jews refused to acknowledge them in any way, and would not permit them to assist in building the second temple. Being cast off by the CHAPTER XVIII. REFLECTIONS. — God never makes a full end of his people, however sinful; but provides them relief in one part of the world when he almost extirpates them in another. Nay, in the darkest times he can raise up the most burning and shining lights. His grace can enable them to overcome the strongest obstacles, and to persevere to the end. Never, therefore, need they fear who boldly trust on God in the path of duty. No length of custom can ever consecrate an evil practice. If our parents have the images,* and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the brazen serpent that Moses had made: for unto those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it: and he called it Nehushtan.*

5 He trusted in the LORD God of Israel; so that after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him.

6 For he clave to the LORD, and departed not from following him,* but kept his commandments, which the LORD commanded Moses.

7 And the LORD was with him; and he prospered whithersoever he went forth: and he rebelled against the king of Assyria,* and served him not.

8 He smote the Philistines, even unto Gaza,* and the borders thereof, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.*

9 ¶ And it came to pass in the fourth year of king Hezekiah, which was the seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Sennacherib king of Assyria came up against Samaria, and besieged it.

10 And at the end of three years they took it; even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, (that is, the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel,) Samaria was taken.

11 And the king of Assyria did carry away Israel unto Assyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes;

12 Because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but transgressed his covenant, and all that Moses the servant of the LORD commanded, and would not hear them, nor do them.*

13 ¶ Now in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did Sennacherib king of Assyria come up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them.*

14 And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah three hundred talents of silver, and thirty talents of gold.*

15 And Hezekiah gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house.

16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off the gold from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave it to the king of Assyria.*

this narrative has re-

30 Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

31 Hearken not unto Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, 'Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his cistern;'

32 Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil-olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah, when he persuadeth you, saying, The LORD will deliver us.

33 Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

34 Where are the gods of Hamath,⁶ and of Arpad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim,⁷ Hena, and Ivah? have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand?

35 Who are they among all the gods of the countries that have delivered their country out of mine hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of mine hand?

36 But the people held their peace, and answered him not a word:⁸ for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

37 Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah, with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-shakeh.

and pompous promises ought never to be trusted. How affecting is it to hear, though often improper to answer, virulent reproaches of God and his people! Silence is the best answer to insolent abuse. It but exasperates a fool to answer him according to his folly.

in calling upon God for relief. But while our helper is almighty we ought never to despair. Let us, however, always interest in our behalf the prayers of Jesus Christ and his ministers and people. Thus trusting in God we shall never be confounded; while those who lift up their tongues against him shall bring down swift vengeance on their own heads. Wicked men dare to defy God, and are fond of trumpeting forth

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

4 It may be the LORD thy God will hear all the words of Rab-shakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God; and will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that are left.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the LORD, Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

8 So Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

9 And when he heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee; he sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly; and shalt thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were in Thelasar?

If the great object of our requests be the manifestation of his glory, we shall certainly be heard; and often God's returns to the prayers of faith are speedy as well as comfortable. How honourable, in God's view, are his people in their open, LORD, thine eyes, and see; and hear the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent him to reproach the living God.

17 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have ^adestroyed the nations and their lands;

18 And have cast their gods into the fire: for they ^bwere no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them.

19 Now therefore, O LORD our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou ^cart the LORD God, even thou only.

20 ¶ Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying, ^dThus saith the LORD God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib^e king of Assyria I have heard.

21 This ^fis the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him; ^gThe virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

22 Whom ^hhast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted ⁱthy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against ^jthe Holy One of Israel.

23 By thy messengers thou hast reproached the LORD, and hast said, ^kWith the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall cedar-trees thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof; ^land I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into ^mthe forest of his Carmel.

24 I have digged and drunk strange waters, and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of besiegedⁿ places.

25 Hast thou not heard long ago ^ohow I have done it, and of ancient times that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps.²

26 Therefore their inhabitants were of ^psmall power, they were dismayed and confounded; they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the house-tops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

27 But ^qI know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

28 Because ^rthy rage against me and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore ^sI will put my hook in thy nose,³ and my bridle e The Old Testament authorizes prayer against an enemy: the New Testament commands us to pray for him. Are these contradictory? are they of different spirits? Is the New Testament a new law? By no means. The command that enjoins us to pray for our enemies, requires us to pray for his conversion: the example that authorizes us to pray against him, is not against him personally, but against his wicked designs and plans. We pray for the spiritual welfare of the most wicked enemy, but we pray against the diabolical plots, and plans, and combinations of his subtlety, malice, and cruelty.

-Note. To pray for the conversion of a sinner, is to pray with God—to pray for the success of a sinner in his sinful purposes, would be to pray against God.—C.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Hezekiah, having received a message of death, by prayer hath his life lengthened. 8 The sun goeth ten degrees backward for a sign of that promise. 12 Berodach-baladan sending to visit Hezekiah, because of the wonder, hath notice of his treasures. 14 Isaiah understanding thereof foretelleth the Babylonian captivity. 20 Hezekiah dieth: Manasseh succeedeth him.

IN those^a days was Hezekiah sick unto death; and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz came to him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ^bSet thine house in order; for ^cthou shalt die, and not live.¹

2 Then he ^dturned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the LORD, saying,

3 I beseech thee, O LORD, ^eremember now how I have walked before thee in ^ftruth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which greatest distress! and contemptible in his sight are the greatest of his opposers—an empty noise, a proud puff, and no more! Nor hell nor earth can rage any further than his limits permit them. He protects, delivers, and provides for his people above what they think or ask, and all for Jesus' sake. But what a speedy regard to his promise! What terrible majesty is with him! How fearful to fall into his hands! How great the power of his angels! and how safe those who have millions of such guardians and protectors! But miserable is the end of blasphemers! Often their very gods or children, from whom they expected support, become the instruments of their ruin.

CHAPTER XX. REFLECTIONS.—Neither greatness nor goodness can exempt from sickness or death. Not a moment of life but the present is certain. And often God lays men aside from their work when we think there is most need of them. But, oh! the vast preparation of state, frame, and exercise that is necessary for a comfortable entrance into eternity! There is need for ministers to inculcate this in the most earnest and solemn manner. In dying moments it is the greatest mercy, and should be our greatest desire, to have all our hopes founded on Jesus' blood, and attended with the testimony of a good conscience: and to have the consolations of God enabling us to triumph

CARAVAN NEAR MT. HERMON—IN VIEW OF THE SPOT WHERE OUR LORD WAS TRANSFIGURED IN THE PRESENCE OF PETER, JAMES AND JOHN. [II. KINGS, xix: 23.]—"By thy messengers thou hast reproached the Lord, and hast said, With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon." Above is an illustration of the southern side of Mt. Hermon, a mountain which belongs to the Lebanon range. We have here a long line of donkeys on their way to Damascus. Upon the backs of these donkeys little villages through this mountain country are supplied with the freight which is brought to them from the cities. In this view we have a clump of olive trees to the left of the picture, and we have very accurately brought out the topographical features of the country. This is not far from a village called Mejd el esh-Shems, where the Druses live.

is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept sore.²

4 And it came to pass, afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle court,³ that the word of the LORD came to him, saying,

5 Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people, Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will heal thee:⁴ on the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the LORD.

6 And I will add unto thy days fifteen years;⁵ and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

7 And Isaiah said, Take a lump of figs:⁶ and they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered.

8 ¶ And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day?

9 And Isaiah said, This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees,⁷ or go back ten degrees?

10 And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

11 And Isaiah the prophet cried unto the LORD; and he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial⁸ of Ahaz.⁹

12 ¶ At that time Berodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon,¹ sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah: for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.

13 And Hezekiah hearkened unto them, and showed² them all the house of his precious things,³ the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armour,⁴ and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah showed them not.

14 ¶ Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far country, even from Babylon.

15 And he said, What have they seen in

1 The fault lay not in showing, but in the vanity of show-

2 This custom of heaping up treasure is common in the East. Vertomannus, describing the treasure of the king of Calicut, says that it was esteemed 50 in-consisted of precious stones, plates of gold, and as much coined gold as might load 100 mules.—C.

in itself—that is im-wrought^h much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a graven image of the grove⁵ that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son, In^k this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither will I make the feet of Israel move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

9 But they hearkened not: and Manasseh seduced^d them to do more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake⁶ by his servants the prophets, saying,

11 Because^p Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, and hath done wickedly above all that the Amorites did, which were before him, and hath made Judah also to sin with his idols;

12 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle.

13 And I will stretch over Jerusalem the line⁷ of Samaria, and the plummet⁸ of the house of Ahab: and I will wipe Jerusalem, as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down.⁹

14 And I will forsake the remnant¹ of mine inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies;

15 Because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.

16 Moreover, Manasseh shed innocent blood very much,² till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another;³ besides his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin, in doing that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.⁴

during the first part of his reign; but during the latter part he appears to have been a humble penitent, and an accepted and devoted servant of the God he had so long dishonoured. It is a remarkable fact that only the first or wicked part of his reign is recorded in this book; his repentance is not mentioned, and were it not for the account furnished in the book of Chronicles, we should have known nothing of his conversion. This is one among many examples of reading Kings and Chronicles in harmony. During the first part of Manasseh's reign there was a more complete and systematic departure from the worship of the true God in Jerusalem than had ever been seen. Every faith was tolerated there except the faith of JEHOVAH. The great altar of burnt-offering was taken away; the ark was removed from the sanctuary, and an idol substituted; the sacred books were destroyed or proscribed; the Sabbath was despised; prophets and priests of God were slain. Never, in fact, had there been such a thorough apostasy as was seen at this period. An account of the conversion of Manasseh and its happy results is given in 2 Ch. xxxiii. 1-22. 45, 50. ch. 15, 6, 7, 36, 38, 20, 21. 2 Ch. 33, 1-20.
This mode of burial prevailed amongst the Jews in the time of our Lord. In 1941. But Manasseh most probably was so buried, apart from the reasons above given, out of regard to some of his idols whose statues he had erected in his garden.—C.

MOSQUE OF OMAR FROM THE JERICHO ROAD—A VIEW FROM THE JERICHO ROAD OF THE PLACE WHERE THE HOUSE OF THE LORD STOOD. [II. Kings, xxiii:1-2.]—"And the king sent and they gathered unto him all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem. And the king went up into the house of the Lord, and all the men of Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the people both small and great; and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant which was found in the house of the Lord." The artist who took these pictures, and the writer, arose in Jericho about 2:30 o'clock, and after a slight breakfast started at 3 o'clock for Jerusalem. We passed by the Judean mountains, as in awful solemnity they stood around us in the quiet moonlight, and reached Bethany, two miles from Jerusalem, at 8 o'clock. This picture was taken about 8:30 as we approached Jerusalem from Bethany.

the LORD, and to keep his 'commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all their heart, and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book: and all the people stood to the covenant.

4 ¶ And the king commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the 'priests of the second order, and the keepers of the door, to bring forth out of the temple of the LORD all the 'vessels that were made for Baal, and for the grove, and for all the host of heaven:³ and he burnt them without Jerusalem in the fields of Kidron, and carried the ashes of them unto 'Beth-el.

5 And he put down⁴ the idolatrous priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem; them also that burnt incense unto 'Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the planets,⁵ and to all the host of heaven.

6 And he brought out the 'grove⁶ from the house of the LORD, without Jerusalem, unto the brook Kidron, and burnt it at the brook Kidron, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the powder thereof upon the graves⁷ of the children of the people.⁸

7 And he brake down the houses of the sodomites,⁹ that were by the house of the LORD, where the women wove 'hangings⁹ for the grove.

8 And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had burnt incense, from Geba¹ to Beer-sheba,¹ and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of the city.

9 Nevertheless the 'priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the LORD in Jerusalem, where they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren.

10 And he defiled 'Topheth,² which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom,³ that no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Molech.

11 And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the 'sun,⁴ at the entering in of the house of the LORD, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the chamberlain,⁵ which was in the suburbs, and burnt the chariots of the sun with fire.

12 And the altars that were 'on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars which 'Man-

Whether the horses mentioned in the text were sculptures, or real horses dedicated to the sun, does not appear. It is most probable they were living horses, as, had they been statues, of bronze or marble, they had likely shared the fate of the idolatrous altar, recorded ver. 13, 14.

23 But in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, wherein this passover was holden to the LORD in Jerusalem.

24 ¶ Moreover, the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the images, and the idols, and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, that he might perform the words of the law which were written in the book that Hilkiah the priest found in the house of the LORD.

25 And like unto him was there no king before him, that turned to the LORD with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him.

26 ¶ Notwithstanding the LORD turned not from the fierceness of his great wrath, wherewith his anger was kindled against Judah, because of all the provocations that Manasseh had provoked him withal.

27 And the LORD said, I will remove Judah also out of my sight, as I have removed Israel, and will cast off this city Jerusalem, which I have chosen, and the house of which I said, My name shall be there.

28 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

29 ¶ In his days Pharaoh-nechoh king of Egypt went up against the king of Assyria to the river Euphrates: and king Josiah went against him; and he slew him at Megiddo, when he had seen him.

30 And his servants carried him in a chariot dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre: and the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and anointed him, and made him king in his father's stead.

31 ¶ Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

32 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

33 And Pharaoh-nechoh put him in bands at Riblah, in the land of Hamath, that he might not reign in Jerusalem; and put the land to a tribute of an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

7 Among the good kings recorded in Scripture, David was signalized by many excellences, but was also guilty of great errors, and one surpassing crime, never passed over by the recording Spirit of God. So that his real eminence lies in his deep remorse and repentance, through faith in the Redeemer. Hezekiah stands next distinguished above all other kings, by confidence in God—whom yet he partially forgot in the day of his prosperity—and whom threatened judgments were necessary to bring to his remembrance, ch. 20. 13. 15-19. Josiah stands above them all in purity of life, and ardent and untiring zeal for reformation.

36 ¶ Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Jehoiakim, first submitting to Nebuchadnezzar, then rebelling against him, procureth his own ruin. 5 Jehoiachin succedeth him. 7 The king of Egypt is vanquished by the king of Babylon. 8 Jehoiachin's evil reign. 10 Jerusalem is taken, and carried captive into Babylon. 17 Zedekiah is made king, and reigneth wickedly: he rebelleth, to the utter destruction of Judah.

IN his days Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakim became his servant three years: then he turned and rebelled against him.

2 And the LORD sent against him bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by his servants the prophets.

3 Surely at the commandment of the LORD came this upon Judah, to remove them out of his sight, for the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did;

4 And also for the innocent blood that he shed, (for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood,) which the LORD would not pardon.

5 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

6 So Jehoiakim slept with his fathers: and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

7 ¶ And the king of Egypt came not again any more out of his land: for the king of Babylon had taken, from the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates, all that pertained to the king of Egypt.

8 ¶ Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when speed do those judgments hasten to ruin the guilty! and when neither warnings restrain, nor good examples influence, destruction is evidently near.

CHAPTER XXIV. [Ver. 1. The history of the kingdom of Judah under Jehoiakim, as given in this book, is very brief; but from a comparison of Da. i., 2 Ch. 36. 6, and Je. 25. 1, sq., the following facts may be gleaned, and they throw light on the detached statements here made. In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim Nebuchadnezzar set out on his first expedition against Palestine and Western Asia. His march across the desert must have occupied some time; then he met and conquered the Egyptians at Carchemish; then he conquered Northern Syria and Phoenicia; and at length, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, he besieged Jerusalem, and captured it about a month after. He took the king prisoner, bound him in fetters to carry him to Babylon, and took some of the precious vessels of the temple to place them in the temple of Bel. For some reason which is not stated Nebuchadnezzar changed his purpose regarding Jehoiakim, and placed him again on the throne. He remained subject for three years, when he rebelled, probably because Nebuchadnezzar was engaged in other wars. The Babylonian king being unable himself to punish the rebel, appears to have sent against Judah bands of the Chaldees, he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem three months: and his mother's name was Ne-hushta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father had done.

10 ¶ At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city was besieged.

11 And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it.

12 And Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers: and the king of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign.⁸

13 And he carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the LORD, as the LORD had said.⁹

14 And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour,¹ even ten thousand captives, and all the craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save the poorest sort of the people of the land.

15 And he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers,² and the mighty of the land; those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon.

16 And all the men of might,³ even seven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths a thousand, all that were strong and apt for war, even them the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon.

17 ¶ And the king of Babylon made Mattaniah his father's brother king in his stead, and changed his name to Zedekiah.⁴

18 Zedekiah was twenty and one years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Hamutal,⁵ the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

19 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

20 For through the anger of the LORD⁶ it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled⁶ against the king of Babylon.

1 Jerusalem is again besieged. 4 Zedekiah taken, his sons slain, and his eyes put out. 8 Nebuzaradan defaceth the city, carrieth the remnant, except a few poor labourers, into captivity, 13 spoileth and carrieth away the treasures. 18 The nobles of Judah are slain at Riblah. 22 Gedaliah, who was set over the people that remained, being slain, the rest flee into Egypt. 27 Evil-merodach advanceth Jehoiachin in his court.

AND it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about.¹

2 And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.²

3 And on the ninth day of the fourth month the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land.³

4 ¶ And the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden; (now the Chaldees were against the city round about;) and the king went the way toward the plain.⁴

5 And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho; and all his army were scattered from him.

6 So they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon to Riblah; and they gave judgment upon him.⁵

7 And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon.⁶

8 ¶ And in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, (which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) came Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard,⁸ a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem:

9 And he burnt the house of the LORD, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire.

10 And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about.

11 Now the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carry away.

12 But the captain of the guard left of the Syrians, Moabites, &c., by whom the whole country was ravaged, and the last days of Jehoiakim rendered miserable. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—By their own wickedness men destroy themselves when they give themselves to sin. Multitudes of wicked men, for their own selfish purposes, are always ready to execute the righteous purpose of God; and all resistance is vain when God will judge. If men mourn not for their fathers' iniquities, they will smart for them; and not one jot or tittle of God's threatenings shall fail. In a day of wrath the vain confidences of sinners shall utterly fail them; and the mightiest arm of flesh will be a weak support against an angry God. In his great power he nips wicked princes in the bud, and lifts them up so their fall becomes the more ruinous and miserable. How craftily conquerors weaken the nations which they purpose to keep enslaved! But there is no evil in the city which the Lord hath not done. Hardened indeed must men be in wickedness, when the repeated miseries of their fellow-transgressors deter them not at all from treading in their steps. And a nation is on the verge of ruin, when God gives up her rulers to infatuation; and when, for the sin of a land, many and wicked are the princes thereof.

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS.—How dreadful are the fruits of sin in persons, cities, and nations! And fearful is the case of those in cities which are long besieged, or taken by force. But no contrivance for safety will at last avail them who have contemned the counsels of God. The final doom of

INTERIOR OF THE MOSQUE OF OMAR—STANDING OVER THE ROCK WHERE ABRAHAM IS THOUGHT TO HAVE OFFERED UP ISAAC, AND SOLOMON BUILT THE TEMPLE. [II. Kings, xxv:13-14.]—"And the pillars of brass that were in the house of the Lord, and the bases, and the brazen sea that was in the house of the Lord, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon. And the pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away." The interior of the temple that stood where the Mosque of Omar now stands was richly furnished. So the interior of this Mohammedan place of worship is most elaborately furnished. The building has 8 sides, each 68 feet long, the whole being covered with richly colored porcelain tiles, and a frieze of tiles running around the building upon which are written passages from the Koran. The great dome is supported by Corinthian columns. There are 56 stained glass windows of great brilliancy and beauty. The dome is 98 feet high, and 66 in diameter.

47 In times and countries abounding with petty sovereignties, we need not be surprised to hear of many captive kings being congregated at Babylon. England, at a period comparatively modern, contained seven distinct kingdoms. Providence, by thus distinguishing the captive monarch of Judah, had the great end in view of drawing the attention of the Babylonian monarch to the revealed word and divine ordinances of Moses and the prophets, and of thus preparing the way for the development of those instructions and warnings which, through Babylon, continue to be still addressed by Daniel and other prophets, to the mighty kings and proud cities of the earth.—C.

impenitent sinners is to be bound with chains of darkness unto the judgment of the great day! How terribly the ordinances of God suffer for the sin of their attendants! And woe to that city or kingdom from which they are removed! Dreadful is the universal overthrow that surely follows: and men of rank, in the time of such public calamities, are exposed to the most distinguished miseries, answerable to their distinguished influence in the sinful causes thereof. But observe here how exactly the threatenings of God by Moses and the prophets are now fulfilled. Notwithstanding Nebuchadnezzar's intentions, not a remnant of Jews is left in the land of Canaan: and yet, in the very midnight of their captivity, he grants them a token of their future deliverance.

THE FIRST BOOK OF CHRONICLES.

This and the following book were probably written by Ezra the noted reformer after the captivity. They comprehend a history of about 3500 years from the creation till after the Jews returned from Babylon. Their manifest scope is to fix the genealogies of the Jewish nation, and to narrate the noted transactions of David and his royal descendants. As the ancient names of persons or places are sometimes altered in whole or in part, and a number of circumstances, not formerly mentioned, inserted, there is sometimes a seeming, but not a real, contradiction between them and the preceding books; particularly 2 Samuel and the two books of Kings. If we are at any loss to reconcile some of these passages let us blame our own weakness, but never the oracles of God. Things relative to these mere circumstances might be obvious to the ancient Jews, which are now to us obscure or unknown. The first book contains, (1) A collection of sacred genealogy for about 3600 years, from Adam till long after the captivity, mingled with some shreds of history not formerly inserted, i.-ix. This genealogy was of great use to the Jews who returned from Babylon, to fix them in their respective tribes and families; and is of use to us, to manifest our Redeemer to be the promised seed of David, Judah, Abraham, and Eve, according to the flesh. And now that he is come, for whose sake the registers were chiefly preserved, no genealogy of the Jews, for more than 1700 years backwards, is in the least to be depended on. (2) A repeated view of the translation of the kingdom of Israel from Saul to David, and of the triumphs of the latter, with several additions, x.-xii. xviii.-xxi. (3) An account of David's settling the ark at Jerusalem; fixing the orders of the priests, Levites, singers, porters, and other ecclesiastical officers; appointing the officers of his property and trained bands; of the vast preparations he made for building the temple; and the directions he gave to Solomon and others concerning it; most of which is not before narrated; xiv.-xvii. xxii.-xxix.

[The First and Second Books of Chronicles were originally one. Jerome informs us that in his time they formed but one book in all Hebrew MSS.; but that the early Christian churches had divided them on account of their length. The name Chronica, or Chronicorum Liber, given to them in the Vulgate, and from which comes their modern appellation, appears to be derived from Jerome. Jewish tradition assigns the compilation of the books to Ezra, and with this their internal character entirely agrees. It is worthy of note that the book of Ezra is a continuation of Chronicles. The two may be said in fact to form one complete history. The more immediate causes of the compilation of Chronicles appear to have been, (1) A desire to rectify and preserve the genealogical registers of the nation, which had doubtless become seriously deranged by the captivity. Without these registers the redistribution of Palestine among the returned captives would have been impossible. (2) A desire to reconstruct the whole temple service and national worship in accordance with the Mosaic law. This could only be effected by the residence of the priests and Levites in Jerusalem in the order of their courses, as arranged by David. The whole registers of the tribe of Levi had therefore to be revised; and the laws for the tithes and offerings had to be fully considered. These facts will explain the leading characteristics of the books of Chronicles. The scholar observes a striking resemblance in style to the book of Ezra; he also notices many Chaldee words and forms of expression, showing that the author, while he wrote in Hebrew, was familiar with the Chaldee tongue. CHAPTER I. REFLECTIONS.—What ground have all men to be humble, when they are sprung of Adam, who disobeyed God! and it is necessary to love all as our neighbours and brethren, since God has made of one blood all nations of the earth. How contemptible and short the years of all generations appear before the everlasting God! Quickly men post into death and eternity: and scarcely are they born, in God's reckoning, when they die. How marvellous is the providence of God in keeping up the degenerate race of mankind in the world, and in such equality between the sexes, amidst such a multitude of changes! Remarkably trodden are the paths of death, though still unknown. What multitudes have gone before us, as there are innumerable that follow: and how great and to find families almost desolated by the sword. God takes peculiar pleasure to exalt the low, and abase that which is high. David, the youngest son of Jesse, is raised to the throne.—Even so, Father, because so it seemed good in thy sight! By what incontestable wisdom God ordereth the condition of families, giving or withholding children, or of this or that sex, as it pleases him! Let all therefore learn, in whatever state he places them, to be therewith content. Let parents learn rather to marry their children to pious servants than to the ungodly rich. And let those who, like the Kenites, join God's people in their warfare, expect to dwell with them in their Canaan above.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—Even good men may have large families with little appearance of piety or wisdom among most of them, while there is plenty of crosses: and often children die and leave their names to others. But it is highly becoming when we so love our reprovers, and especially our God, as to commemorate them in the names of our children.¹ What distinguished respect God pays to his promise, and to the noted piety of his servants! Never, perhaps, but in David's family, did a crown go directly from father to son for seventeen generations! But great indeed is our mercy that we now have Jesus, the strength, and be protected from all their enemies. How differently God disposes of men in respect of their callings and stations on earth! He advances them to honour and power, or degrades them to the meanest employments, as seemeth good in his sight. This world is a changing scene: nothing substantial or enduring is to be expected in it. Let it quicken our diligence to secure a better, where our dignity will be secure, without variability or shadow of turning. Behold how God rewards the Simeonites, who cleaved to the family of David! They are provided with new habitations; when their brethren, who joined the kingdom of Israel, are carried into captivity. If I firmly adhere to God and my duty, he will always provide for me what I need; and that which appears an afflictive separation, shall at last prove a comfortable deliverance. But the curse of God shall hunt out the sinners, as it did the Amalekites, till they are utterly destroyed.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—Behold how sin degrades men and thrusts them down from their excellency! And one false step often leaves an indelible stain upon their memory. But God does not utterly cast off those who fall foully at first, and are severely punished in the flesh. Behold how he divides the honours which had been sinfully forfeited, that no flesh may glory in his presence!—how he casts out the enemy from before his people by little and little, and gives them residence and substance as they have need of it! Behold these Gadites in their pride; and see how God in his wisdom, to mark them not utterly cast off, takes up their names just before their removal into a long captivity! But what mighty things the people of God can do when they take him along with them! With ease they tread down their enemies, and gather their spoils when they go forth crying to and trusting in him. But sin is pregnant with the greatest mischief to the temporal as well as the eternal interests of professors. God sometimes serves his own purposes by the ambition of the most proud, tyrannical, and murderous princes. And the most lasting destruction

1 By the law of God, De. 21. 17, the first-born was entitled to a double portion of a father's possessions. This right was transferred to Joseph, who inherited two shares of the land in Ephraim and Manasse. Judah had but one share, but from him descended David and Messiah—the one the type, the other the real ruler.—C.

3 Salcah was a strong city, situated on the top and sides of a conical hill, at the southern extremity of the mountain range of Bashan. It was 12 miles east of Bozrah. It is now deserted, though many of its old stone houses are still perfect. Its citadel or castle, whose remains crown the summit of the hill, must have been one of the strongest in Palestine.—P.

4 In ch. 27. 20. Is. 35. 2; 35. 9. 65. 10. Ca. 1. 1, not ascertained. According to Eusebius the whole district of country between Joppa and Caesarea was called Sharon; and its richness and fertility are noticed by most travellers. Another district lying between Mount Tabor and the Sea of Galilee was also distinguished by the same name; and a third, on the east of Jordan, in the tribe of Gad, seems to be that described in the text. C.—The celebrated plain of Sharon extended along the coast of the Mediterranean, from the base of Carmel on the north to Joppa on the south, where it joined the plain of Philistia. It was, and still is, famous for its pastures. Eusebius and Jerome speak of two Sharons, one lying between Tabor and Tiberias; but the sacred writers mention only one of these. The Sharon referred to in this verse is not the plain of western Palestine. Its exact situation is not known, but it seems probable it was the pastoral plateau extending eastward from the mountains of Gilead to the walls of Bozrah and Salcah on the borders of Bashan.—P.

7 A war (as such) comes from men's lusts that war in their members, Ja. 4. 1; but war, as a judgment and punishment, comes from God, who gives the invading nation up to their own evil desires, and the invaded to the retribution of the idolatries they have practised, the injustice they have done, and the cruelties they have committed.—C.

10 It therefore appears from this verse that the country occupied by the tribes of Jetur, Nephish, and Nodab lay along the northern and now western border of Bashan, and extended to the mountain range of the Jettur.

Some suppose the word Joel to have dropped out of the text, and that Vashni, which signifies second, is an epithet to be joined with Abiah. There seems no necessity for this conjectural emendation, as the first-born of Samuel may have been called both Joel and Vashni.—C.

CITADEL OF TIBERIAS. [I. Chron., vi:63.]—"Unto the sons of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities." Tiberias in Old Testament times was in the territory of Zebulun, and the particular city which stood upon the site of Tiberias was called, according to the Jewish Talmud, Rakkath. It is also by the Talmud identified with the ancient Hammath, and some have supposed it to be the same as Chinnereth, referred to in Joshua, xix:35. The excesses and vices of the Roman court were transferred to this capital of the weak and cruel Herod Antipas, and Tiberias remained the metropolis of the province of Galilee till the Emperor Nero placed Agrippa II. in charge of the province. It became in the time of the great Jewish afflictions a center of refuge for the rabbis. Thirteen synagogues were built here and in the thirteenth century a school of Jewish learning was established which attained great celebrity.

59 And ¹Ashan with her suburbs, and Bethshemesh with her suburbs:

60 And out of the tribe of Benjamin; Geba with her suburbs, and ²Alemeth with her suburbs, and Anathoth with her suburbs. All their cities, throughout their families, were thirteen cities.⁹

61 And ³unto the sons of Kohath, which were left of the family of that tribe, were cities given out of the half-tribe, namely, out of the half-tribe of Manasseh,¹ by lot, ten cities.

62 And ⁴to the sons of Gershom, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

63 Unto the ⁵sons of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

64 And ⁶the children of Israel gave to the Levites these cities, with their suburbs.

65 And they ⁷gave by lot out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, and out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, these cities which are called by their ⁸names.³

66 And ⁹the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath had cities of their coasts out of the tribe of Ephraim.

67 And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, Shechem in mount Ephraim with her suburbs; they gave also ¹⁰Gezer with her suburbs, d The number of cities and extended

Levi may seem a large and even undue proportion to so small a tribe; but it is to be reflected that these cities and by the Levites, but in some species of co-partnership with the secular tribe by whom they were granted, and that consequently the Le-were reduced to little more than a mere residence. C.—None who through want of ability or change of circumstances are precluded from one

REFLECTIONS.—How God multiplies a people

amidst hard country labour as he did that of Issachar! He can multiply families after they had been almost utterly extirpated, as were the Benjamites, Ju. xx. How early the Hebrews, even in Egypt, began to contract marriages with the heathen! We go astray from the womb, speaking lies. The families and nations

A WOMAN OF SAMARIA—IN THE ANCIENT CAPITAL OF ISRAEL. [I. Chronicles, vi:67.]—"And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, Shechem in Mount Ephraim with her suburbs." Upon one of the hills in the neighborhood of Shechem, this picture of a Woman of Samaria was taken. The Samaritans have always lived in this region, and their central place of worship is Mount Gerizim, which overlooks the city. Shechem is mentioned during the exile in Jeremiah, xli:5, and after the exile, though Samaria had been the previous capital of the country (Ezra, iv:10) at the building of the new temple on Gerizim, Shechem, which was hard by, was made by Manasseh, probably before the time of Alexander the Great, the chief center of Samaritan worship. After this the Samaritans were the objects of Jewish scorn. Josephus says that John Hyrcanus destroyed the temple on Gerizim 129 years B. C. after it had stood 200 years.

⁵ The omission of the genealogy of Dan in this its proper place, can be accounted for by a reference to Jos. 18. 30, 31, from which it appears that they continued not only in schismatical separation from the church of God, but in a state of uninterrupted idolatry till the days of the captivity.—C.

Greenfield proposes the following change in the translation:—The sons of Manasseh were Ashriel, whom his Syrian concubine bare to him; and Machir the father of Gilead, whom his wife bare to him. Machir took for a wife Maachah, sister to Huppim, &c.

⁹ Hezron, a grandson of Judah, married his daughter, and their child was reckoned to the tribe of Manasseh, ch. 2. 21-23. ¹⁰ B.C. 1430. ¹¹ Zelophehad was not literally the son, but the descendant of Manasseh in the third generation. Zelophehad was the son of Hephher, Nu. 26. 33, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, Nu. 26. 29. This, with the apparent want of connection with the genealogy, has induced some expositors to reject it as a fragment unaccountably interpolated. Such a criticism is both rash and unwarranted. The narrative was a legal conveyance of family property, and were we acquainted with all the family history, the cause of its insertion would no doubt appear, and the obscurity of the whole passage be dissipated.—C.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The tribe of Benjamin adhered to Judah in the division of the kingdom, and returned with the Jews from Babylon; and as the history is about to open with the translation of the kingdom from Saul of that tribe to David of Judah, we have here a more copious account given of it than of several other tribes. But either some of the sons of Benjamin had several names, or those called his 'sons were his more remote descendants. Gera, called his son in Genesis, is here mentioned as his grandson by Bela, and the whole subsequent genealogy is very obscure.—C.

⁵ Not an error for Hupham, as some suppose, but another name for the same person.—C. ⁶ The Benjamites have their genealogy and location most largely given, because they gave birth to the royal house of Saul, and because they adhered most firmly to the house of David, and affectionately and patriotically returned with them from Babylon.

⁷ As Gibeath and Gera are only the masculine and feminine form of the same word (meaning 'hill'), some think them the same; but that they were two distinct places is evident from Jos. 18. 24; comp. 5. 29; 2 Sa. 13. 20; comp. 5. 3-7. ⁸ ch. 2. 52-54. ⁹ Settled out of the family, ver. 6. The Gibeonites who were condemned by Joshua to be 'hewers quently added to,

probably by captives taken in war.—P.

LYDDA, THE ANCIENT LOD OF THE OLD TESTAMENT—WHERE THE APOSTLE PAUL RESTORED THE SICK AENEAS. [I. Chronicles, viii:12.] —“And Lod, with the towns thereof.” Lydda occupies the site of the Old Testament I cd, which is referred to in Ezra, ii:33, and Nehemiah, xi:35. It was an ancient Benjamite city which was rebuilt after the captivity, and through all the ages has preserved its ancient name. Lydda is but a slightly modified form of Lod. The Gospel was preached at Lydda very early, and here the Apostle Paul restored the sick Aeneas. In the time of the Emperor Vespasian this was a center of Jewish learning. The great caravan road runs from Lydda to Jimzu, the ancient Gimzo (II. Chronicles, xxviii:18), which the Philistines once took, and which also has preserved its name to the present day. One of the first episcopates in Palestine was that of Lydda, and the signatures of its bishops are said to be found as late as the year 518.

15 And Bakbakkar, Heresh, and Galal, and Mattaniah the son of Micah, the son of Zichri, the son of Asaph;

16 And Obadiah the son of Shemaiah, the son of Galal, the son of ^mJeduthun, and Berechiah the son of Asa, the son of Elkanah, that dwelt in the villages of the ⁿNetophathites.

17 And the ^oporters were, Shallum, and Akkub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren: Shallum was the chief;

18 (Who hitherto waited in ^pthe king's gate eastward:⁹) they were porters in the companies of the children of Levi.

19 And Shallum the son of Kore, the son of Abiasaph, the son of Korah, and his brethren, of the house of his father, the ^qKorahites, were over the work of the service, keepers of the gates⁷ of the tabernacle:⁸ and their fathers, being over the host of the LORD, were keepers of the entry.⁹

20 And ^rPhinehas¹ the son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past, and the LORD was with him.

21 And Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy in their villages, whom ^sDavid and Samuel the seer did ordain² in their ^tset office.⁴

23 So they and their children had the oversight of the gates of the house of the LORD, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards.

24 In⁴ four quarters were the porters, toward the east, west, north, and south.

25 And their brethren, which were in their villages, were to come after ^useven days from time to time with them.

26 For these Levites, the four chief porters, were in their ^vset office, and were over the chambers⁵ and treasuries of the house of God.

27 And they lodged round about the house of God, because ^wthe charge was upon them, and the opening thereof every morning pertained to them.

28 And ^xcertain of them had the charge of the ministering vessels, that they should bring them in and out by tale.⁶

s The word taber-sanctuary erected by Moses, which the temple built after the captivity, more respectably than it did Solomon's magnificent

33 And these are ^dthe singers, chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers were free: for they were employed⁹ in that work 'day and night.'¹

43 And Moza begat Binea; and Rephaiah his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son.

44 And Azel had six sons, whose names are these; Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael,⁹ and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan; these were the sons of Azel.

CHAPTER X.

1 Saul's overthrow and death. 8 The Philistines triumph over Saul. 11 The kindness shown by the men of Jabesh-gilead toward Saul and his sons. 13 Saul's sin, for which the kingdom was translated from him to David.

NOW¹ the ^aPhilistines fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down slain² in mount Gilboa.

2 And the Philistines followed hard after Saul, and after his sons; and the Philistines slew ^bJonathan, and ^cAbinadab, and Malchishua, the sons of Saul.

3 And the battle went sore against Saul, from every minister of God: and if they begin with God they may hope to prosper in their undertakings. Happy is it for the church when every one knows and waits on his proper work, and when the meanest offices and services are reckoned truly honourable. Better be door-keepers in the house of God than dwell in palaces of wickedness. It is pleasant to be always rejoicing in and praising God, who is continually doing us good, and loading us with his benefits; for it is a blessed and the archers hit him, and he was wounded of the archers.

4 Then said Saul to his armour-bearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith, lest these uncircumcised come and abuse me. But his armour-bearer would not; for he was sore afraid.³ So Saul took a sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when his armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise on the sword,⁴ and died.

6 So Saul died, and his three sons, and all his house died together.⁵

7 And when all the men of Israel that were in the valley saw that they fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, then they forsook their cities, and fled; and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, that they found Saul and his sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And when they had stripped him, they took his head, and his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to carry tidings unto their idols, and to the people.

10 And they put his armour in the house of their gods, and fastened his head in the temple of Dagon.⁶

11 ¶ And when all Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul,

12 They arose, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and buried their bones under the oak in Jabesh, and fasted seven days.⁷

13 ¶ So Saul died for his transgression which he committed against the LORD, even against the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to inquire of it;

14 And inquired not of the LORD:⁹ therefore he slew him, and turned the kingdom unto David the son of Jesse.

Israel, and thou shalt be ruler over my people Israel.

3 Therefore came all the elders of Israel to the king to Hebron; and David made a covenant with them in Hebron before the LORD: and they anointed David king over Israel, according to the word of the LORD by Samuel.

4 ¶ And David and all Israel went to Jerusalem, which is Jebus; where the Jebusites were, the inhabitants of the land.³

5 And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David, Thou shalt not come hither. Nevertheless David took the castle of Zion, which is the city of David.

6 And David said, Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be chief and captain. So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first up, and was chief.

7 And David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called it the city of David.

8 And he built the city round about, even from Millo round about: and Joab repaired the rest of the city.⁷

9 So David waxed greater and greater: for the LORD of hosts was with him.

10 ¶ These also are the chief of the mighty men whom David had, who strengthened themselves with him in his kingdom, and with all Israel, to make him king, according to the word of the LORD concerning Israel.

11 And this is the number of the mighty men whom David had; Jashobeam, an Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lifted up his spear against three hundred slain by him at one time.

12 And after him was Eleazar the son of Dodo, the Ahohite, who was one of the three mighty.

13 He was with David at Pas-dammim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley;² and the people fled from before the Philistines.

14 And they set themselves in the midst of that parcel, and delivered it, and slew the Philistines; and the LORD saved them by a great deliverance.⁴

15 Now three of the thirty captains went down to the rock to David, into the cave of Adullam; and the host of the Philistines encamped in the valley of Rephaim.⁶

16 And David was then in the hold, and the Philistines' garrison was then at Bethlehem.

17 And David longed, and said, Oh that token that we shall praise him without ceasing in the temple above.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 12. The narrative of the defeat of Israel at Gilboa, and of the death of Saul and Jonathan, is almost verbatim the same as that in 1 Sa. xxxi. It is introduced here simply as a preface to the history of David's reign in Jerusalem. The anointing of David in Hebron, and his coronation and reign of seven years there, are dismissed in a very few words. The main object of the historian evidently is to narrate the achievements of David and his band of heroic followers, commencing with the siege and capture of Jerusalem. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Behold how God stains the pride of human glory! He is sovereign, but righteous and terrible, in all his judgments! The hands of sinners often make the snares with which themselves are caught. And disobedience to God, and intimacy with the devil, most certainly bring to ruin persons, families, and nations.

CHAPTER XI. REFLECTIONS.—Here let me observe, that God's counsels will be fulfilled whatever one would give me drink of the water of the well of Beth-lehem, that is at the gate!

18 And the three brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but David would not drink of it, but poured it out to the Lord.

19 And said, My God forbid, it me, that I should do this thing: shall I drink the blood of these men that have put their lives in jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it: therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mightiest.

20 And Abishai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his spear against three hundred, he slew them, and had a name among the three.

21 Of the three, he was more honourable than the two, for he was their captain; howbeit he attained not to the first three.

22 Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, who had done many acts; he slew two lion-like men of Moab: also he went down and slew a lion in a pit in a snowy day.

23 And he slew an Egyptian, a man of great stature, five cubits high; and in the Egyptian's hand was a spear like a weaver's beam; and he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him with his own spear.

24 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had a name among the three mightiest.

25 Behold, he was honourable among the thirty, and attained not to the first three: and David set him over his guard.

26 Also the valiant men of the armies were, Asahel the brother of Joab, Elhanan the son of Dodo of Beth-lehem.

 e The might here ascribed to Abishai and Jashobeam, ver. 11, seems so much beyond the ordinary power of man, that while infidels have found them occasion for question, expositors have sought, by various means, to bring them within the limits of historical probability. The difficulty, however, seems most easily removed by observing, that in ver. 11, the words by him, and in ver. 20, the word them, is supplied; and that the acts ascribed to these worthies is not the actual destruction of the hundreds by their own hands, but their personal boldness in 'lifting up the spear against them, and boldly it may be, defending some pass against them, till assistance arrived.—C.

1 The writer here goes back to the times which preceded the death of Saul, and records some particulars not mentioned in the books of Samuel respecting David's advancement to the throne. Several considerable persons resorted to him at Ziklag; and either joined his small troop or rendered him of assistance when it became necessary. Some of these were Benjamites, and related to Saul, who were either induced through a firm belief of the word of God by Samuel respecting him, or by indignation at the base treatment which David met with from Saul to the disgrace of their family and tribe, or because they perceived that the Lord was departed from Saul, and was with David of a truth. The hand of God was, however, very conspicuous in raising him up friends from this tribe, whence he might have expected the most determined opposition.—C.

But the term is used in a more extensive sense for those who had fled to foreign countries to escape being slain; thus it is here applied to David. Ziklag is described as a town in the country, and was probably an unwall town; and it is certain he did not confine himself to it, but was continually making excursions from thence.—C.]

CHAPTER XII.

1 The companies that came to David at Ziklag. 23 The armies that came to him at Hebron.

NOW these are they that came to David to Ziklag, while he yet kept himself close because of Saul the son of Kish: and they were among the mighty men, helpers of the war.

2 They were armed with bows, and could use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones, and shooting arrows out of a bow, even of Saul's brethren of Benjamin.

3 The chief was Ahiezer, then Joash, the sons of Shemaah the Gibeathite; and Jeziel and Pelet, the sons of Azmaveth; and Berachah, and Jehu the Antothite,

4 And Ismaiah the Gibeonite, a mighty man among the thirty, and over the thirty; and Jeremiah, and Jahaziel, and Johanan, and Jozabad the Gederathite,

5 Eluzai, and Jerimoth, and Bealiah, and Shemariah, and Shephatiah the Haruphite, 6 Elkanah, and Jesiah, and Azareel, and Joezer, and Jashobeam, the Korhites,

7 And Joelah and Zebadiah, the sons of Jeroham of Gedor.

difficulties lie in the way; that pride goeth before destruction; and that men, after long wearying themselves in vain, are sometimes made to understand the things which belong to their peace and return to their own mercy. There is a real contract between kings and their subjects which both parties ought religiously to observe. Hopes of preferment strongly induce carnal men to their duty; and the strength and prosperity of kings depend, under God, chiefly upon their servants. But the providential or spiritual presence of God with men is the true cause of their strength and fortitude; and the way to be great and famous is to do remarkable services to our God, our king, and our country. Great men ought never to be prodigal of the lives of their subjects; but if their rashness hath brought others into danger, they ought bitterly to repent of it and to study more self-denial; and if we have anything super-excellent, the Lord ought to be honoured with it. But

8 And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David,⁵ into ⁶the hold to the wilderness, men of might, and men of war⁶ fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler,⁷ whose faces were like the faces of lions, and were as swift as the roes⁸ upon the mountains;⁹

9 Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Eliab the third,

10 Mishmanna the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth,

11 Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh,

12 Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth,

13 Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh.

14 These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host: "one of the least was over an hundred, and the greatest over a thousand."¹

15 These are they that went over Jordan in the first month, when it "had overflown"² all his banks; and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west.

16 And there came of the children of Benjamin and Judah "to the hold unto David."³

17 And David went out to meet them,⁴ and answered and said unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, mine heart shall be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no "wrong in mine hands, the God of our fathers look thereon, and rebuke it."

18 Then "the spirit came upon "Amasai, who was chief of the captains, and he said, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

19 And there fell some of Manasseh to David, when he came with the Philistines against Saul to battle; but they helped them not: for "the lords of the Philistines, upon advisement, sent him away, saying, He will fall to his master Saul,⁵ to the jeopardy of our heads."⁶

20 As he "went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manasseh, Adnah, and Jozabad, and Jedaiel, and Michael, and Jozabad, and Elihu, and Zithai, captains of the thousands that were of Manasseh.

21 And they helped David "against the band" of the rovers,⁸ for they were all "mighty men of valour, and were captains in the host."

9 The Gadites were a semi-nomad habits, the position and physical characteristics of their allotted territory, had great influence in moulding the character of the people, and training them to war. Gilead was mountainous—it was a land of roving shepherds, moving camps, and wild adventure. The Gadites were evidently attached to both Saul and David. Some of their warriors followed the fortunes of the latter in the darkest epochs of his eventful history.—P.

were not these chiefs typical of Jesus Christ's apostles, faithful ministers and followers, who by faith do marvellous exploits, wrestle with principalities and powers, and are more than conquerors through him that loved them!

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 33. Fifty thousand which could keep rank. A rare accomplishment in eastern warfare, which is rather a succession of duels, in which each man pursues his own plan, than a combined movement in which one spirit wields the energies of the whole mass. The Septuagint and Vulgate, adopting a different reading of the Hebrew, render it to assist, but we can see no good reason to prefer this reading. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—The Lord can easily bow the hearts of men, and sometimes he uses the wicked to accomplish his purposes. And when we are in the way to Jesus and our duty, no high-swelled Jordans of difficulty ought to hinder or discourage us. Swiftly ought we to flee from evil, and boldly to maintain the cause of truth. Such as have once been endangered by false friends had need to be cautious. And with great prudence, and the kindest affection, should great men receive and entertain those who come to their help in a time of distress. With prudent earnestness ought we to join those whom the Lord plainly favours, helps, and protects; and much more to join with Jesus Christ, in whom his soul delights, and who exalts all his servants to high and eternal honours. How often God raises up help for his people in the very moments in which they most need it! And hopeful is the state of a kingdom when kings ascend their throne to the

"Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, expert in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could keep rank; they were not of double heart." Tiberias has been the scene of many battles. It is perfectly in keeping, therefore, with the character of this town, both in ancient and modern times, that we should have Zebulun represented as a country from which went forth to battle those who were expert in war. In the days of Herod Antipas and Agrippa, this town was not upon good terms with the city of Jerusalem. The inhabitants of Tiberias surrendered voluntarily to Vespasian, so that their city was spared. The city was sacked by the Caliph Omar in the 7th century, and subsequently by Saladin in the 13th, when it was much injured. Through battles and earthquakes, its palaces, churches, synagogues, institutions of learning, baths and theatres, have passed into complete desolation.

ments of war for the battle, an hundred and twenty thousand.

38 All these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel were of one heart to make David king.

39 And there they were with David three days, "eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

40 Moreover, they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar, and Zebulun, and Naphtali, brought bread⁵ on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen,⁶ and meat, meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly: for there was joy⁷ in Israel.⁷

CHAPTER XIII.

1 David fetcheth the ark with great solemnity from Kirjath-jearim. 2 Uzza being smitten, the ark is left at the house of Obed-edom.

AND David consulted with the captains of thousands and hundreds, and with every leader.

2 And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, let us send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are left in all the land of Israel, and with them also to the priests and Levites which are in their cities and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us:

3 And let us bring again the ark of our God to us: for we inquired not at it in the days of Saul.¹

4 And all the congregation said that they would do so: for the thing was right in the eyes of all the people.

5 So David gathered all Israel together, from Shihor of Egypt, even unto the entering of Hemath,² to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim.

6 And David went up, and all Israel, to Baalah,³ that is, to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the LORD, that dwelleth between the cherubims, whose name is called on it.

7 And they carried the ark³ of God in a new cart out of the house of Abinadab: and Uzza and Ahio drove the cart.

8 And David and all Israel played before God with all their might, and with singing, and with harps, and with psalteries, and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

9 ¶ And when they came unto the thrashing-

10 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzza, and he smote him,⁵ because he put his hand to the ark: and there he died before God.

11 And David was displeased,⁵ because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza: wherefore that place is called Perez-uzza⁶ to this day.

12 And David was afraid of God that day, saying, How shall I bring the ark of God home to me?

13 So David brought⁷ not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.⁸

14 And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom in his house three months. And the LORD blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Hiram sendeth timber and builders to David. 2 The prosperity of David's kingdom. 3 His two signal victories over the Philistines.

NOW Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and timber of cedars, with masons and carpenters, to build him an house.¹

2 ¶ And David perceived that the LORD had confirmed him king over Israel; for his kingdom was lifted up on high, because of his people Israel.

3 ¶ And David took more wives at Jerusalem: and David begat more sons and daughters.

4 Now these are the names of his children which he had in Jerusalem; Shammua,² and Shobab, Nathan, and Solomon,³

5 And Ibhar, and Elishua, and Elpalet,

6 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

7 And Elishama, and Beeliada, and Eliphalet.

8 ¶ And when the Philistines heard⁴ that David was anointed king over all Israel, all the Philistines went up to seek David: and David heard of it, and went out against them.

9 And the Philistines came and spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim.⁵

10 And David inquired of God, saying, Shall I go up against the Philistines? and wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD said unto him, Go up; for I will deliver them into thine hand.

11 So they came up to Baal-perazim; and David smote them there. Then David said, God hath broken in upon mine enemies by mine hand, like the breaking forth of waters:

therefore they called the name of that place Baal-perazim.^m

12 And when they had left their gods there, David gave a commandment, and they were burnt with fire.⁶

13 And the Philistines yet again spread themselves abroad in the valley.

14 Therefore David inquired again of God: and God said unto him, Go not up after them; turn away from them, and come upon them over against the mulberry-trees.

15 And it shall be, when thou shalt hear a sound of going in the tops of the mulberry-trees, that then thou shalt go out to battle: for God is gone forth before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines.

16 David therefore did as God commanded him: and they smote the host of the Philistines from Gibeon even to Gazer.⁷

17 And the fame of David went out into all lands; and the LORD brought the fear of him upon all nations.⁸

CHAPTER XV.

¹ David, having prepared a place for the ark, ordereth the priests and Levites to bring it from Obed-edom. ²⁵ He performeth the solemnity thereof with great joy. ²⁹ Michai despiseth him.

AND David made him houses¹ in the city of David,² and prepared a place for the ark of God, and pitched for it a tent.

2 Then David said, None ought to carry the ark of God³ but the Levites:⁴ for them hath the LORD chosen to carry the ark of God, and to minister unto him for ever.

3 And David gathered all Israel together to Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the LORD unto his place, which he had prepared for it.

4 And David assembled the children of Aaron, and the Levites:

5 Of the sons of Kohath; Uriel the chief, and his brethren an hundred and twenty.

12 And said unto them, Ye are the chief of the fathers of the Levites: sanctify yourselves,⁷ both ye and your brethren, that ye may bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel unto the place that I have prepared for it.

13 For because ye did it not at the first, the LORD our God made a breach upon us, for that we sought him not after the due order.

14 So the priests and the Levites sanctified themselves to bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel.

15 And the children of the Levites bare the ark of God upon their shoulders, with the staves thereon, as Moses commanded, according to the word of the LORD.

16 And David spake to the chief of the Levites to appoint their brethren to be the singers with instruments of music, psalteries, and harps, and cymbals, sounding, by lifting up the voice with joy.

17 So the Levites appointed Heman the son of Joel; and of his brethren, Asaph the son of Berechiah; and of the sons of Merari their brethren, Ethan the son of Kushiiah;

18 And with them their brethren of the second degree, Zechariah, Ben, and Jaaziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, Eliab, and Benaiah, and Maaseiah, and Mattithiah, and Eliphele, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, the porters.

before God's ark is especially criminal and dangerous. With all our joys we had need to join trembling. But how profitable may the ark, the Christ, the gospel of God, be to some, while it is the savour of death unto others.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 8. The Philistines went up to seek David. Why did they wait so long during David's weakness and contests with the family of Saul? Hitherto as the head of a weak, divided, and self-wasted kingdom, they did not fear him. They perhaps had politically fomented the national strife, or encouraged the weaker against the stronger party, in hopes of the ruin of both by mutual wounds; but now that all parties have united in favour of David, the Philistines are roused to a sense of danger, and assemble to crush him before he could be supposed able to concentrate his forces. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—No man hath such sufficiency of his own as not to need the help of his neighbours. Let me therefore be thankful for their assistance: but let my sufficiency be of God. It is pleasant for the godly to discern God's hand even in their earthly settlements. And all advancements ought to be considered as intended for usefulness—for the glory of God and

THE ARMENIAN CHURCH AND CONVENT, JERUSALEM—WHERE DAVID MADE HIS HOUSE IN JERUSALEM. [1. CHRON., xv:1.]—"And David made him houses in the city of David, and prepared a place for the ark of God, and pitched for it a tent." We pass through the gate called Zion's Gate in the south wall on the summit of the ridge of Zion. At this place we are on the height held by the Jebusites until David took it by storm. It was the highest point within the limits of the city.

It was here, or in this immediate neighborhood, where this Armenian church and convent now stand that David built his house and the household of his families, and here was the place for the ark of the Lord before the temple was built. The Armenian convent is one of the richest and largest in the city. There are some tamarisk trees in front of it said to have been planted by Herod. Within the convent is the church of St. James. the place where, according to tradition, St. James was beheaded.

26 And it came to pass, when God helped⁶ the^a Levites that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, that they offered ^bseven bullocks and seven rams.

27 And David was clothed with ^aa robe of fine linen, and all the Levites that bare the ark, and the singers, and Chenaniah the master of the song⁷ with the singers: David also had upon him an ephod of linen.⁸

28 Thus all Israel ^abrought up the ark of the covenant of the LORD with shouting, and with sound of the cornet,⁹ and with trumpets, and with cymbals, making a noise with psalteries and harps.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, as ^athe ark of the covenant of the LORD came to the city of David, that Michal the daughter of Saul, looking out at a window, ^jsaw king David dancing and playing: and she despised him in her heart.

SO they^a brought the ark of God, and set it in the midst of the tent that David had pitched for it:¹ and they offered burnt-sacrifices and peace-offerings before God.

2 And when David had made an end of offering the burnt-offerings and the peace-offerings, ^bhe blessed the people in the name of the LORD.

3 And he ^ddealt to every one of Israel, both man and woman, to every one a loaf of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine.

4 ¶ And he appointed certain of the Levites to minister ^abefore the ark of the LORD, and to record, and to thank and praise the ^aLORD God of Israel:

5 Asaph^j the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mattithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obededom; and Jeiel with psalteries ^aand with harps; but Asaph made a sound with cymbals:

It would seem that the order of service established by David, and placed by him under the charge of Asaph, was now for the first time observed. The psalm was now first composed, but seems afterwards to have been slightly modified, no doubt to adapt it to a somewhat different ritual.—P.

good of mankind. Rarely do even good men prosper in worldly things without waxing secure and too indulgent to the flesh. Little else indeed must be expected in this world to the church of Christ or to the souls of his people. But if we acknowledge the Lord in all our ways, he will direct our paths and make us more than conquerors. Carefully must we attend to the directions of his word, or even motions of his Spirit and providence: and depending on his conduct and strength, we may gird up our loins, gird on our armour, resist the devil, and make him to flee from us. If God deliver my corruptions into my hand, let me, all inflamed with holy zeal, burn them up, and mark the strongest detestation of idolatry, and every monument of it. And let Jesus have all the glory: let his name only be exalted, and his glory fill the whole earth.

CHAPTER XV. [Ver. 27. In the parallel passage in 2 Sa. 6. 14, instead of the words 'And David was clothed with a robe of fine linen,' we find, 'And David danced with all his might.' In the Hebrew there is such a close similarity in letters and sound between the two statements that some commentators think the text in Chronicles is a corruption, especially as in the last clause it is said, 'David had upon him an ephod of linen,' and in ver. 29 reference is made to Michal having seen David dancing. As there is no MS. authority for the alleged corruption I feel bound to reject it. P.]

Ver. 29. [The history of Michal was eventful, and may account satisfactorily for this outburst of temper. We are told that at first she loved David, 1 Sa. 18. 20; and when married she proved the depth of her affection by risking her life for her husband, 19. 12. But David was forced to flee from Saul's court, and Michal was married to another. David also married Abigail

1 Nathan, first approving the purpose of David to build God an house, 3 afterward by the word of God forbiddeth it. 11 He promiseth him blessings and benefits in his seed. 16 David's prayer and thanksgiving.

NOW it^a came to pass, as David sat in his house, that David said to Nathan the prophet, Lo, I dwell ^bin an house of cedars, but the ark of the covenant of the LORD remaineth under curtains.

2 Then Nathan said unto David, ^cDo all that is in thine heart; for God is with thee.

3 [†] And ^dit came to pass the same night, that the word of God came to Nathan, saying,

4 Go and tell David my servant, Thus saith the LORD, ^eThou shalt not build me an house to dwell in:

5 For I have not dwelt in an house since the day that I brought up Israel¹ unto this day; but have gone² from tent ^fto tent, and from one tabernacle to another.

6 Wheresoever I have walked with all Israel, spake I a word to any of the judges ^gof Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people, saying, Why have ye not built me an house of cedars?

7 Now therefore thus shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ^hI took thee from the sheep-cote, even from following³ the sheep,⁴ that thou shouldst be ruler over my people Israel;

8 And I ⁱhave been with thee whithersoever thou hast walked, and have cut off all thine enemies from before thee, and have made thee a name like the name of the great men that are in the earth:

9 Also ^jI will ordain a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, and they shall dwell in their place, and shall be moved no more; neither shall the children of wickedness waste them ^kany more, as at the beginning,

10 And since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel: moreover, I will subdue all thine enemies. Furthermore, I tell thee, that the LORD ^lwill build thee an house.

and Ahinoam. Years passed. Saul is dead, and those who had been his followers desired to make terms with David, who made it a first condition of peace that Michal should be restored to him. Her new husband loved her, and the attachment appears to have been mutual; still she was torn from him and given up to David, 2 Sa. 3. 12, sq. On being brought back she doubtless saw that her old place in David's affections was occupied by others. She was grieved and provoked; and she gave expression to her feelings of hatred and contempt on seeing what she thought acts on David's part beneath the dignity of royalty. She seems also to have spoken disrespectfully of his other wives, for which David rebukes her in these words: 'And of the maid-servants which thou hast spoken of, of them shall I be had in honour,' 2 Sa. 6. 22. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Good works must also be well done: and all our sufferings for our mistakes should teach and stir us up to be more regular. The greatest reformers, being men, have some faults. But it is a mercy when we see our errors and amend them. Even such as know the word of God better than others may, on particular occasions, forget the directions which they are peculiarly called to remember. But readiness to correct former mistakes is an evidence of true wisdom and goodness. Such as are above others in dignity ought to go before them in duty. Many who are very remiss in their duty, if they were but faithfully told of it, would reform and do better. Whatever gifts God bestows upon us should be employed in his service: and in all religious work we should derive our help from heaven and thank God for it. If we escape his judgments while we are serving him, we owe it to his favour, not to our own exactness: and to him we owe the praise of all that is good in our work. God delights in the prosperity of his servants; and we ought to serve him with cheerfulness and joy. But in the very best of times there will be some evil murmurers who think God's service too mean for them.

CHAPTER XVI. REFLECTIONS.—God's ordinances and truths may remain long in obscurity; but their glory will shine forth at last. And the hungry who wait on him will at length be filled with good things. Grateful praises is a most acceptable sacrifice to God. All our rejoicings ought to express thankfulness to him from whom we receive all our comforts: and all our praises to centre in ascribing glory to him. We ought to show ourselves generous to others, as God is gracious to us. And such as know God should endeavour by their triumph in him, and all other fruits of grace, to bring their neighbours into acquaintance with him. The sovereign choice which God has made of his people, the covenant he has established with them; the wonderful works he has done for them; and the statutes he has given them; as well as his almighty power, goodness, and glory; and his being the Creator and governor of all things, should be matter of our praise. And while we enjoy his favours, we ought to intercede for salvation and every other promised blessing to them that want them. But however solemn our occasional worship of God may be, it must never supersede our daily and ordinary service of him.

CHAPTER XVII. REFLECTIONS.—Every true fearer of God is solicitous to have his glory set forth. And God's ministers especially ought to encourage every good word and work. Gracious desires, even where ineffectual, are highly regarded of God.

11 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons;⁵ and I will establish his kingdom.

12 He shall build me an house, and I will establish his throne for ever.⁶

13 I^a will be his father, and he shall be my son: and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee:

14 But I will settle him in mine house and in my kingdom for ever: and his throne shall be established for evermore.

15 According^r to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

16 ¶ And David the king came and sat before the LORD, and said, Who am I, O LORD God, and what is mine house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?

17 And yet this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God; for thou hast also spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come, and hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree.⁷ O LORD God.

18 What can David speak more to thee for the honour of thy servant?⁸ for thou knowest thy servant.

19 O LORD, for thy servant's sake,⁹ and according to thine own heart, hast thou done all this greatness, in making known all these great things.¹

20 O LORD, there is none like thee, neither is there any God besides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

21 And what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to redeem to be his own people, to make thee a name of greatness and terribleness, by driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou hast redeemed out of Egypt?

22 For thy people Israel didst thou make thine own people for ever; and thou, LORD, becamest their God.

23 Therefore now, LORD, let the thing that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, be established for ever, and do as thou hast said.

24 Let it even be established, that thy name² may be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God of Israel, even a God to Israel: and let the house of David thy servant be established before thee.

25 For thou, O my God, hast told thy servant that thou wilt build him an house: there-

If Zolab were Nilisib, then Berothai might be (as some have supposed) Bir, the Birtha of Beromy, on the east bank of the Euphrates. But as Aram-zolab was certainly on the west of the Euphrates, Berothai must have been in the same direction. Some identify it with Berytus or Beirut, a well-known seaport on the coast of Syro-Phoenicia; but if Berothai was the same as the Beroth of Eze. 47. 10, it seems rather to have been situated between Hamath and Damascus.—C.

fore thy servant hath found in his heart to pray before thee.

26 And now, LORD, thou art God, and hast promised this goodness unto thy servant:

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 David subdueth the Philistines, and maketh the Moabites tributary. 3 He smiteth Hadadzezer and the Syrians. 9 Thou sendest Hadadram with presents to bless David. 11 The presents and the spoil David dedicateth to God. 13 He putteth garrisons in Edom. 14 David's officers.

NOW after this it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, and took Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines.¹

2 And he smote Moab; and the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts.²

3 ¶ And David smote Hadadzezer king of Zobah unto Hamath,³ as he⁴ went⁵ to stablish his dominion by the river Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and seven thousand horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: David also houghed all the chariot-horses,⁶ but reserved of them an hundred chariots.

5 And when the Syrians of Damascus⁷ came to help Hadadzezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then David put garrisons in Syria-damascus; and the Syrians became David's servants, and brought gifts. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadadzezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 Likewise from Tibhath,⁸ and from Chun, cities of Hadadzezer, brought David very much brass, wherewith Solomon made the brazen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

9 ¶ Now when Tou king of Hamath heard how David had smitten all the host of Hadadzezer king of Zobah;

10 He sent Hadoram his son to king David, to inquire of his welfare,⁹ and to congratulate him, because he had fought against Hadadzezer, and smitten him; (for Hadadzezer had war² with Tou;) and with him all manner of vessels of gold, and silver, and brass.

11 Them also king David dedicated unto the LORD, with the silver and the gold that he brought from all these nations; from Edom, and from Moab, and from the children of Ammon, and from the Philistines, and from Amalek.

But outward pomp in his worship and service is little esteemed in his sight. Earnest desires and endeavours to build a house to the Lord are the best methods to raise up our own. Blessings on our children are mercies to ourselves. But in Christ himself, as our ALL and IN ALL, the promises have their complete fulfilment.

With what deep humility we ought to approach unto God! Those are the truly honourable of the earth whom he regards; and it is the glory of the highest monarchs to be his servants. As there is none like him, so there is no happiness like to a sense of his favour. With ravishing wonder, and believing confidence, we may plead his promises. And if we keep his true word of grace, we shall partake of his everlasting glory.

CHAPTER XVIII. REFLECTIONS.—Intimate fellowship with God makes men bold and active; and

DAM AT DUMMAR, DAMASCUS—THE CITY CONQUERED AND GARRISONED BY DAVID. [I. Chron., xviii:5-6.]—"And when the Syrians of Damascus came to help Hadarezer, king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men. Then David put garrisons in Syria-Damascus; and the Syrians became David's servants, and brought gifts. Thus the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went." Damascus, we see by the above Scripture, was once in the kingdom of David. Here we notice that David placed a garrison. Many years after the time of David, we are told by Ezekiel, that Damascus was a merchant of Tyre in the multitude of the wares and in the multitude of the riches which it brought to Tyre. In the time of Ezekiel Tyre was the port of Damascus, but the present port is Beyrout. Alexander the Great was sent by Parmenio to take this city. The above illustration is of a dam across the Abana river at Dummar, which is a village in the suburbs of Damascus.

12 Moreover, Abishai the son of Zeruiah slew of the Edomites in the valley of Salt eighteen thousand.³

13 ¶ And he put 'garrisons in Edom; and all the Edomites became David's servants. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

14 ¶ So David reigned 'over all Israel, and executed judgment and justice among all his people.

15 And 'Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host; and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, recorder;⁴

16 And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and 'Abimelech the son of Abiathar, were the priests; and 'Shavsha was scribe;

17 And 'Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites and the Pelethites; and the sons of David were chief about the king.⁵

CHAPTER XIX.

1 David's messengers, sent to comfort Hanun for his father's death, are disgracefully entreated. 6 The Ammonites, strengthened by the Syrians, are overcome by Joab and Abishai. 16 Shophach, making a new supply of the Syrians, is slain by David.

NOW it came to pass after this, that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon died, and his son reigned in his stead.

2 And David said, I 'will show kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash, because his father showed kindness to me.¹ And David sent messengers to comfort him concerning his father. So the servants of David came into the land of the children of Ammon to Hanun, to comfort him.

3 But the princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanun, 'Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? are not his servants come unto thee for to search, and to overthrow, and to 'spy out the land?

4 Wherefore 'Hanun took David's servants, and shaved them, and cut off their garments in the midst hard by their buttocks, and sent them away.²

5 Then there went certain, and told David how the men were served: and he sent to meet them; (for the men were greatly ashamed;) and the king said, Tarry at 'Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they had made themselves odious 'to David, Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousand talents of silver² to hire them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and out of Syria-maachah,³ and out of Zobah.

7 So they 'hired thirty and two thousand chariots,⁴ and the king of Maachah and his people; who came and pitched before 'Medeba.⁵ And the children of Ammon gathered themselves together from their cities, and came to battle.

8 And when David heard of it, he sent 'Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.

9 And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array before the gate of the 'city: and 'the kings that were come were by themselves in the field.

10 Now when Joab saw that the battle⁶ was set against him before and behind, he chose out of all the choice⁷ of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians.⁸

11 And the rest of the people he delivered unto the hand of 'Abishai his brother, and they set themselves in array against the children of Ammon.

12 And he said, 'If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will help thee.

13 Be⁹ of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly⁹ for our people, and for the cities of our God; and let the LORD do that which is good in his sight.

14 So Joab, and the people that were with him, drew nigh before the Syrians unto the battle; and they fled before him.

15 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, they likewise 'fled before Abishai his brother, and entered into the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem.

16 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers, 'and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond the river;¹ and Shophach, 'the captain of the host of Hadarezer, went before them.

17 And it was told David; and he gathered all Israel, and passed over Jordan, and came upon them, and 'set the battle in array against them. So when David had put the battle in array against the Syrians, they fought with him.

18 But the Syrians 'fled before Israel; and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand men which fought in chariots, and forty thousand however numerous and mighty the enemies of God's people are, they shall be brought down at last. The associated forces of hell and earth in vain oppose his church; she shall stand triumphant over them all in the end. It is not shields of gold, but the shield of faith that will prove an unfailling defence. Nay, so uncertain are worldly things, that men often lose their power and wealth by seeking to establish them. The enemies of God's people frequently hurt themselves by attempting to hurt their neighbours. And sinners, contrary to their own inclinations, lay up wealth for the just, and make preparations for building the temple of God.

But it is prudent to make God's children our friends; and proper to honour God with that in which he remarkably blesses us. They cannot but succeed in their enterprises who take God always along with them. And where he gives great power, men should be careful not to look great, but to do good with it.

CHAPTER XIX.

[Ver. 7. According to the parallel passage in 2 Sa. x. the Ammonites hired from Beth-rehob and Zoba 20,000 infantry, from king Maachah 1000, and from Ish-tob 12,000. The numbers thus agree, for 20,000 + 12,000 = 32,000, to which must be added the 'king of Maachah and his people,' whose numbers are not given here. So far the two accounts are agreed. The apparent discrepancies are as follows:—1. In the places; in Chronicles we have Mesopotamia, Syria-maachah, and Zobah; in Samuel we have Beth-rehob, Zoba, and Ish-tob. The explanation is easy. Mesopotamia, or Aram-naharain as it is in the Hebrew, was a name for a large country consisting of several kingdoms and provinces; it included Ish-tob-Syria-maachah, or Aram-maachah, lay beside Beth-rehob; and as the whole forces of the province were hired, the name Aram-maachah is used by one historian, and footmen,² and killed Shophach the captain of the host.

19 And when the servants of Hadarezer saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they made peace with David, and became his servants: neither would the Syrians help the children of Ammon ^{any more.}

CHAPTER XX.

1 Rabbah is besieged by Joab, spoiled by David, and the people thereof tortured. 4 Three giants are slain by David's servants in three several battles with the Philistines.

AND it came to pass, that after the year was expired,¹ at the time that kings go out to battle,² Joab led forth the power of the army, and wasted the country of the children of Ammon, and came and besieged Rabbah; (but David³ tarried at Jerusalem:) and Joab smote Rabbah, and destroyed it.

2 And David took the crown of their king from off his head,⁴ and found it to weigh⁵ a talent of gold,⁶ and there were precious stones in it; and it was set upon David's head: and he brought also exceeding much spoil out of the city.

3 And he brought out the people that were in it, and cut them with⁷ saws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes:⁸ even so dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon. And David and all the people returned to Jerusalem.⁹

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that there arose² war at Gezer³ with the Philistines; at which time Sibbechai the Hushathite slew Sippai, that was of the children of the giant:⁴ and they were subdued.⁵

5 And there was war again with the Philistines; and Elhanan the son of ⁴Jair slew Lahmi, the brother of Goliath the Gittite, whose spear's staff was like a weaver's beam.⁶

6 And yet again there was war at Gath, where was a man of great stature,⁷ whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each do not profess to be given in chronological order. They occurred at different periods, and are grouped together in this place at the close of the history of David's wars. In the book of Samuel they are inserted at the close of David's whole history.—P.

⁸ Several examples of this kind are on record. The daughters of Calvisius Horatius were called the 'six-fingered.' Pliny (ii. 5. 43) relates that Volcatius had the same formation; and Maupertuis mentions a family near Berlin in which sex-digits seemed to be hereditary.—C.

It is the misfortune of kings and of all great families to be surrounded either by flatterers who lead them astray, or timid time-servers who dare not tell them the truth. CHAPTER XXI.

1 David, tempted by Satan, forceth Joab to number the people. 5 The number of the people being brought, David repenteth of it. 9 David having three plagues propounded by Gad, chooseth the three days' pestilence. 14 After the death of seventy thousand, David by repentance preventeth the destruction of Jerusalem. 18 David, by Gad's direction, purchaseth Ornan's threshing-floor: where, having built an altar, God giveth a sign of his favour by fire, and stayeth the plague. 28 David sacrificeth there, being restrained from Gibeon by fear of the angel.

AND Satan^a stood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel.

2 And David said to Joab, and to the rulers of the people, Go, number Israel from Beer-sheba even to Dan;¹ and bring the number of them to me, that I may know it.

3 And Joab answered, "The LORD make his people an hundred times so many more as they be: but, my lord the king, are they not all my lord's servants? why then doth my lord require this thing? why will he be a cause of trespass to Israel?"

4 Nevertheless^a the king's word² prevailed against Joab: wherefore Joab departed, and went throughout all Israel, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ And Joab gave the sum of the number of the people unto David. And all they of Israel were a thousand thousand and an hundred thousand men that drew sword; and Judah was four hundred threescore and ten thousand men that drew sword.

6 But Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them: for the king's word was abominable to Joab.

7 ¶ And God was displeased with this thing; therefore he smote Israel.

8 And David said unto God, 'I have sinned

Beth-rehob by the other. 2. The mercenaries are said to be infantry in Samuel, and chariots in Chronicles. The discrepancy here resolves itself into the signification of the Hebrew word rekheb, which is here translated 'chariots.' The word has several meanings in Scripture;—it means 'cavalry' in Is. 21. 7; it means 'horses of chariots' in 2 Sa. 8. 4; and it means 'men who had been riding in chariots' in 2 Sa. 10. 18. A probable solution of the difficulty is that these 32,000 were men who fought either in chariots or on foot. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Saints ought to be neighbourly and grateful as far as religion admits. But the kindest actions may be misinterpreted, the most friendly concern be repaid with ingratitude, and the most innocent character may suffer reproach. Wickedness naturally proceeds from the wicked; and they who do ill dread ill; and where whisperers are heard firm friends are separated. They who receive shame and damage in our service ought to be tenderly taken care of and provided for: and the courage of brave men is increased and invigorated by difficulties. But sinners, whom God hath marked for ruin, harden themselves to their own destruction. Vain are the utmost efforts of art and strength against justice and equity; and to little purpose do those rally and reinforce themselves who have God for their enemy. How often those who meddle with strife not belonging to them know not what to do in the end of it; and it is wise if at last they learn to forbear.

CHAPTER XX. [Ver. 3. A careful study of this passage makes it clear that the writer must have been acquainted with the whole narrative as recorded in the book of Samuel; for in ver. 1 he says, 'but David tarried in Jerusalem,' whereas in the succeeding verses the acts of David at the seat of war are mentioned; and in ver. 3 it is said, 'And David returned to Jerusalem.' The author deliberately omits the painful story of Bathsheba. P.]

Ver. 8. [The harmony and consistency of Scripture history are strikingly illustrated by the incidents narrated in this chapter. In the days of Abraham we read of the gigantic race of the Rephaim, who inhabited the country east of the Jordan. At the exodus the spies reported that they saw in the mountains of Palestine 'the giants, the sons of Anak, which came of the giants. And we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight,' Nu. 13. 33. We again read that in the conquest of Canaan by Joshua, 'He cut off the Anakims (sons of Anak) from the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel. . . . There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel, only in Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod there remained,' Jos. 11. 22. Again we find an upland plain among the mountains near Jerusalem called the plain or valley of the giants, 2 Sa. 5. 18. And finally we have in this chapter an account of the overthrow and death of some of the remnants of this strange race who resided in Gath, one of the three cities in which alone, according to Joshua, they existed. Thus in a manner altogether undesigned, the truthfulness and consistency of the sacred narrative are remarkably established. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—We should conceal the faults of the godly with candour if we can do it with faithfulness. Nay, if we cannot say good of persons, we had generally best say nothing of them. But however long the powerful enemies of God and his church stand their ground, they shall be brought down at last, whether outward or inward. Nor need the saints be ever disheartened by their enemies' insolence and pride while they have the Almighty God on their side. Yea, ordinarily those bring to themselves ruin who reproach and defy God and his people.

CHAPTER XXI. REFLECTIONS.—While the saints remain on earth, Satan never lets them alone, greatly, because I have done this thing: but now, I beseech thee, do away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very foolishly.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Gad, David's seer,¹ saying,

10 Go and tell David, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I offer² thee three things: choose³ thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee.

11 So Gad came to David, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Choose thee⁴

12 Either⁵ three years' famine;⁶ or three months to be destroyed before thy foes, while that the sword of thine enemies overtaketh thee; or else three days the sword of the LORD, even the pestilence, in the land, and the angel of the LORD destroying throughout all the coasts of Israel. Now therefore advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me.

13 And David said unto Gad, I am in a great strait: let me fall now into the hand of the LORD; for very great are his mercies: but let me not fall into the hand of man.

14 ¶ So the LORD sent pestilence upon Israel: and there fell of Israel seventy thousand men.

15 And God sent an angel unto Jerusalem to destroy it: and as he was destroying, the LORD beheld, and he repented⁶ him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed, It is enough; stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD stood by the thrashing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite.⁷

16 ¶ And David lifted up his eyes, and saw the angel of the LORD stand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem:⁸ then David and the elders of Israel, who were clothed in sackcloth, fell upon their faces.

17 And David said unto God, Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? even I it is that have sinned and done evil indeed; but as for these sheep, what have they done? Let thine hand, I pray thee, O LORD my God, be on me, and on my father's house; but not on thy people, that they should be plagued.

18 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD commanded Gad to say to David, that David should go up, and set up an altar unto the LORD in the thrashing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

19 And David went up at the saying of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORD.

20 And Ornan⁹ turned back, and saw the angel;¹ and his four sons with him hid themselves. Now Ornan was thrashing wheat.

TOWER OF ANTONIA—THE FIRST STATION IN THE VIA DOLOROSA OVER WHICH CHRIST WALKED FROM THE SANHEDRIM TO CALVARY. [1. Chron., xxii:9-10.]—"Behold, a son shall be borne to thee, who shall be a man of rest; and I will give him rest from all his enemies round about: for his name shall be Solomon and I will give peace and quietness unto Israel in his days. He shall build an house for my name; and he shall be my son, and I will be his father; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel forever." These words were spoken of Solomon the son of David, and Jesus Christ is a direct descendant of David, and the throne of an everlasting kingdom was established not by Solomon but by Christ. The Tower of Antonia is the first station in the Via Dolorosa, the sad and mournful way over which Jesus walked from the Sanhedrim to Calvary. This tower is also called Pilate's Judgment Hall. The holy steps that led to the hall, and which were said to be trodden by the feet of Jesus, were removed to Rome and may now be seen in St. John Lateran Church.

Zidonians, and they of Tyre, brought much cedar-wood to David.

5 And David said, 'Solomon my son is young and tender, and the house that is to be builded for the LORD must be exceeding 'magnifical, of fame and of glory throughout all countries: I will therefore now make preparation for it. So David 'prepared abundantly before his death.

6 ¶ Then he called for Solomon his son, and charged him to build an house for the LORD God of Israel.

7 And David said to Solomon, My son, as for me, it 'was in my mind to build an house unto the name of the LORD my God:

8 But the word of the LORD came to me, saying, 'Thou hast shed blood abundantly, and hast made great wars: thou shalt not build an house unto my name, because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth in my sight.³

9 Behold, a son shall be born to thee, who shali be a man of rest; and I will give him rest from all his enemies round about: for his name shall be 'Solomon; and I will 'give peace and quietness unto Israel in his days.

10 He^m shall build an house for my name; and he shall be my son, and I will be his father; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel for ever.

11 Now, my son, 'the LORD be with thee; and prosper thou, and build the house of the LORD thy God, as he hath said of thee.

12 Only the LORD 'give thee wisdom and understanding, and give thee charge concerning Israel, that thou mayest keep the law of the LORD thy God.

13 Then^r shalt thou prosper, if thou takest heed to fulfil the statutes and judgments⁴ which the LORD charged Moses with concerning Israel: 'be strong, and of good courage; dread not, nor be dismayed.

14 Now, behold, in my 'trouble⁶ I have prepared for the house of the LORD an hundred thousand talents of gold, and a thousand thousand⁷ talents⁸ of silver; and of brass and iron without weight: (for it is in abundance:) timber also and stone have I prepared; and thou mayest add thereto.

15 Moreover, there are 'workmen with thee in abundance, hewers and worker. stone and timber, and all manner of cunning men for every manner of work.

16 Of the gold, the silver, and the brass, and the iron, there is no number. 'Arise therefore, and be doing, and the LORD be with thee.

17 ¶ David also commanded all the princes of Israel 'to help Solomon his son, saying,

18 Is not the LORD your God with you? and hath he not given you rest on every side? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand; and the land is subdued before the LORD, and before his people.

19 Now 'set your heart and your soul to seek the LORD your God: arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the LORD God, to bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built 'to the name of the LORD.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 David in his old age maketh Solomon king. 2 The number and distribution of the Levites. 7 The families of the Gershonites. 12 The sons of Kohath. 21 The sons of Merari. 24 The office of the Levites.

SO when David was old and full of days, he made^a Solomon his son king over Israel.¹

2 ¶ And ^bhe gathered together all the princes of Israel, with the priests and the Levites.²

3 Now the Levites were numbered from the age of 'thirty years and upward;³ and their number by their polls, man by man, was thirty and eight thousand.

4 Of which, twenty and four thousand were to set forward⁴ the work of the house of the LORD; and six thousand were officers⁵ and judges:

5 Moreover, 'four thousand were porters; and four thousand praised the LORD with the instruments which 'I made, (said David), to praise therewith.

6 And David divided them into 'courses among the sons of Levi, namely, 'Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

7 ¶ Of the 'Gershonites were, 'Laadan⁶ and Shimei.

8 The sons of Laadan; the chief was Jehiel, and Zetham, and Joel, three.

9 The sons of Shimei; Shelomith, and Haziel, and Haran, three. These were the chief of the fathers of Laadan.⁷

10 And the sons of Shimei were, Jahath, Zina,⁸ and Jeush, and Beriah. These four were the sons of Shimei.

11 And Jahath was the chief, and Zizah the second: but Jeush and Beriah had not many sons;⁹ therefore they were in one reckoning,⁹ according to their father's house.

12 ¶ The sons of Kohath; Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel, four.

13 The sons of Amram; Aaron and Moses: and Aaron was separated, that he should sanctify the most holy things, he and his sons for ever, to burn incense before the LORD, to minister unto him, and to bless in his name for ever.

14 Now concerning Moses the man of God, his sons were named of the tribe of Levi.¹

15 The sons of Moses were, Gershom and Eliezer.

16 Of the sons of Gershom, Shebuel was the chief.

17 And the sons of Eliezer were, Rehabiah the chief.² And Eliezer had none other sons; but the sons of Rehabiah were very many.

18 Of the sons of Izhar; Shelomith the chief.

19 Of the sons of Hebron; Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, and Jekameam the fourth.

20 Of the sons of Uzziel; Micah the first, and Jesiah the second.

21 ¶ The sons of Merari; Mahli and Mushi. The sons of Mahli; Eleazar and Kish.

22 And Eleazar died, and had no sons, but daughters: and their brethren the sons of Kish took them.³

23 The sons of Mushi; Mahli, and Eder, and Jeremoth, three.

24 ¶ These were the sons of Levi after the house of their fathers; even the chief of the fathers, as they were counted by number of names by their polls, that did the work for the service of the house of the LORD, from the age of twenty years and upward.

25 For David said, The LORD God of Israel hath given rest unto his people, that they may dwell in Jerusalem⁴ for ever:

26 And also unto the Levites; they shall no more carry the tabernacle, nor any vessels of it for the service thereof.

27 For, by the last words of David,⁵ the Levites were numbered⁶ from twenty years old and above:⁷

A.M. 2988. B.C. 1016.

7 Why these three sons of Shimei are reckoned among the chief of the fathers of Laadan, does not appear; most probably they were removed, by adoption, from the one family to the other, that in the rotation of course, all the males of Shimei's house should not be called from their home at one time.—C.

9 Heb. did not multiply sons.

28 Or it may be translated, 'in the last records of David.' Probably some document or authentic history is referred to, in which there was a narrative of the concluding acts of David's life, and a report of his instructions and commands.—C.

29 Heb. numbers.

30 The Mosaic census (Nu. 4.3), as well as that by David (ver. 3), was from 30 years and upwards.

31 The change to 20 years was evidently in reference to the 'rest' (ver. 25) that David had given in fixing the temporary tabernacle in a permanent site, and preparing for the building of an immovable temple. The Levites being therefore delivered from their burdens, the younger members were adequate to the now lighter work; and the service of the Lord being now complicated, greater numbers were requisite for its due performance.—C.

11 Expositors generally interpret this phrase on the supposition that the standard weights and measures were kept in the sanctuary.

12 Accordingly we read of the 'shickel' of the sanctuary.

13 But whether the sanctuary standard was universal, or only local and peculiar, does not distinctly appear.

14 One lesson, however, is beautifully inculcated by the ordinance—the

4 To avoid all confusion, now that they were much increased, David distributed the

5 priests, as he had done the Levites, into several courses, which no doubt was a

6 divine direction as well as the other. He appointed sixteen courses of the sons of 7 Eleazar, under as many heads of their families, and half as many of the posterity

11 The adoption of the lot was not with the superabundant view of avoiding any appearance of partiality, it was a

12 divine ordinance, by which an appeal was made to God for deciding what was 13 unknown or doubtful, or above human wisdom. By this

14 ordinance the whole land of Canaan had been distributed, so that this use of it

15 was in conformity with the general law of appeal to God, Pr. 16.33.—C.

16 ch. 9.29.

17 Grotius, Dathe, &c., render this 'chiefs of the judges.'

18 The heads of the two families of Eleazar and Ithamar were the administrators of religion and the dispensers of justice.

19 For though the high-priesthood had been at first settled in the line of Eleazar, and in the person of Phineas, Nu. 25.12, that prerogative had been transferred

20 before the time of Eli to the race of Ithamar, and after him it seems to have been shared

21 equally by the descendants of both. Hence David, to prevent jealousy between the families, makes this distribution 22 by lot.—C.

28 Because their office was to wait on the sons of Aaron, for the service of the house of the LORD, in the courts, and in the chambers, and in the purifying of all holy things, and the work of the service of the house of God;

29 Both for the show-bread, and for the fine flour for meat-offering, and for the unleavened cakes, and for that which is baked in the pan, and for that which is fried, and for all manner of measure and size;⁹

30 And to stand every morning to thank and praise the LORD, and likewise at even;

31 And to offer all burnt-sacrifices unto the LORD in the sabbaths, in the new-moons, and on the set feasts, by number, according to the order commanded unto them, continually before the LORD:

32 And that they should keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the holy place, and the charge of the sons of Aaron their brethren, in the service of the house of the LORD.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 The divisions of the sons of Aaron by lot into four and twenty orders. 20 The Kohathites, 27 and the Merarites divided by lot.

NOW these are the divisions of the sons of Aaron. The sons of Aaron; Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

2 But Nadab and Abihu died before their father, and had no children: therefore Eleazar and Ithamar executed the priest's office.

3 And David distributed them, both Zadok of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service.

4 And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided.¹ Among the sons of Eleazar there were sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar, according to the house of their fathers.

5 Thus were they divided by lot,² one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God,³ were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

6 And Shemaiah the son of Nethaneel the scribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites: one principal household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar.

7 Now the first lot came forth to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah, increases. It is necessary and honourable to enter on God's service as early as possible. Church affairs are likely to prosper when every one knows and attends to his particular work. And in whatever station a person is fixed, it is always his duty to be zealous and diligent in God's service. But what wisdom God manifests in men's stations! While the offspring of Aaron are dignified priests, those of Moses are but ordinary Levites; yet he always proportions men's burdens to their strength. And it is comely when every one in the church cheerfully applies himself to the meanest service to which he is called; and when the officers thereof heartily harmonize in working to one another's hands.

MOREOVER David, and the captains^a of the host,¹ separated to the service of the sons of ^bAsaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun,² who^c should prophesy³ with harps, with psalteries, and with cymbals: and the number of the workmen, according to their service, was:
2 Of the sons of Asaph; Zaccur, and Joseph, and Nethaniah, and ^dAsarelah, the sons of Asaph, under the hands of Asaph, which prophesied ^eaccording to the order of the king.

3 Of Jeduthun: the sons of Jeduthun; Geda-liah, and ^fZeri, and Jeshaiiah, Hashabiah, ^gand Mattithiah, six, under the hands of their father Jeduthun, who prophesied with a harp, to give thanks and to praise the LORD.⁴

4 Of Heman: the sons of Heman; Bukkiah, Mattaniah, ^hUzziel, ⁱShebuel, and Jerimoth, Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, and Ro-mamti-ezer, Joshbekashah, Mallothi, Hothir, and Mahazioth:

5 All these were the sons of Heman the ^kking's seer in the words of God, to lift up the ^lhorn.
And ^mGod gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

6 All these were under the hands of their father for ⁿsong in the house of the LORD, with cymbals, psalteries, and harps, for the service of the house of God, ^oaccording to the king's order to Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman.

7 So the number of them, with their brethren that were instructed in the songs of the LORD, even all that were cunning, was two hundred fourscore and eight.⁶

8 ¶ And they cast lots, ^pward against ward, ference is made between bond or free, old or young;

as has been seen, the course of public worship. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Great cheerfulness ought to be exercised in the worship and service of God; and great attention should be paid to the praising of God, as a leading business of his saints. And it is comely when those in power concur in promoting religion; the latter in perfecting what others before had begun. Of how little account are human distinctions before God! Before him master and scholar, elder and younger, stand on an equal level. And when we find the lot so much

CONCERNING the divisions¹ of the porters: Of^a the Korhites was Meshelemiah^b the son of Kore, of the sons of 'Asaph.

2 And the sons of Meshelemiah were, Zechariah the first-born, Jedaiel the second, Zebadiah the third, Jathniel the fourth,

3 Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, Elioenai the seventh.

4 Moreover, the sons of 'Obed-edom were, Shemaiah the first-born, Jehozabad the second, Joah the third, and Sacar the fourth, and Nethaneel the fifth,

5 Ammiel the sixth, Issachar the seventh, Peulthai the eighth: for God blessed^c him.²

Thus all things were disposed for preserving order, and avoiding all disputes without precedent, 1 Co. 14.40.

1 It is said in ver. 1 that they were separated to this service by David and the captains of the host. But it should be the chiefs of the sacred orders; for it does not mean the military chiefs, but the heads of the priests and Levites, who in Nu. 4.3 are called by the same name. To them naturally belonged the appointment of singers, and not to the generals of the army.—At chap. 23.5 the number of musicians is given as 4000, whereas at ver. 7 of this chapter the number of those 'instructed in the songs of the Lord' is stated at only 288. Perhaps the 4000 (in which the 288 were doubtless included) were divided into such a multitude that each of the larger courses included one of these minor courses, which, as consisting of the most perfect masters, took the lead in the service.—J.

CHAP. XXVI.

1 This chapter concludes the account of the careful organization of the great Levitical body established under the direction of David, and carried into effect after the erection of the temple by Solomon his son. The new distribution appears to have arisen partly out of the great increase in the number of the Levites, which must have rendered it difficult to give to a large proportion of them a share in their proper duties; and still more on account of the temple which was about to be erected, and the more extensive and varied duties connected with which rendered a modified arrangement necessary.—J.

CHAPTER XXVI. REFLECTIONS.—Great

order ought to take place in Christ's church; and great care with respect to the admission or dismissal of members, or approaches to and returns from solemn work. What distinguished blessings attend those who, like Obed-edom, are careful of God's ark and interests in a day of distress! It is proper to bestow on works of piety and charity what God bestows upon us in extraordinary favours; and to preserve carefully whatever is dedicated to the Lord. While our life continues there is always something to be done for God. And the nearer our end approaches, the greater ought to be our industry in doing good. They bid fair to be a happy nation who are taught to fear God and honour the king. And those parts of nations and churches

26 Which Shelomith and his brethren were over all the treasures of the dedicated things, which^a David the king, and the chief fathers, the captains over thousands and hundreds, and the captains of the host, had dedicated.

27 Out^a of the spoils won in battles did they dedicate^b to maintain the house of the LORD.

28 And all that^c Samuel the seer, and Saul the son of Kish, and Abner the son of Ner, and Joab the son of Zeruiah, had dedicated; and whosoever had dedicated any thing, it was under the hand of Shelomith, and of his brethren.¹

29 ¶ Of the^d Izharites, Chenaniah and his sons were for^e the outward business² over Israel, for officers and judges.

30 And of the^f Hebronites, Hashabiah and his brethren, men of valour, a thousand and seven hundred, were^g officers³ among them of Israel on this side Jordan westward, in all the business of the LORD,⁴ and in the service of the king.

31 Among the Hebronites was^h Jerijah the chief, even among the Hebronites, according to the generations of his fathers. In theⁱ fortieth year of the reign of David they were sought for, and there were found among them mighty men of valour at^j Jazer of Gilead.

32 And his brethren, men of valour, were two thousand and seven hundred chief fathers, whom king David made rulers over^k the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, for every matter^l pertaining to God, and affairs⁵ of the king.

DERVISH BEGGARS—SUCH AS STAND AND BEG IN THE HOLY CITY WHERE SOLOMON LIVED AND REIGNED. [I. Chron., xxviii:9.]—"And thou, Solomon, my son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind: for the Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever." We give a view of Dervish beggars such as are found today in Jerusalem, and they serve to illustrate what comes to people when they violate the laws of God. The most wretched and inhuman looking creatures we have ever seen are found among the beggars of Palestine. They are diseased, degraded, and as miserable as humanity with the dregs of generations of sin can make them. The degradation of this wretched class is perhaps due in some respect to the tyrannical, remorseless and outrageous Turkish civilization under which they live.

22 Of Dan, Azareel the son of Jeroham. These were the princes of the tribes of Israel.⁶

23 ¶ But David took not the number of them from ^atwenty years old and under; because the LORD had said he would increase Israel like to the stars of the heavens.

24 Joab the son of Zeruiah began to number, but he finished not, because ^bthere fell wrath for it against Israel; neither was the number put in the account of the chronicles of king David.

25 ¶ And over the king's treasures was Azmaveth the son of Adiel: and over the storehouses in the fields,⁷ in the cities, and in the villages, and in the castles, was Jehonathan the son of Uziah.⁸

26 And over them that did the work of the field, for tillage of the ground, was Ezri the son of Chelub:

27 And over the vineyards was Shimei the Ramathite: over the increase of the vineyards,⁹ for the wine-cellars, was Zabdi the Shiphmite:

28 And over the olive-trees and the sycamore-trees¹ that were in the low plains² was Baal-hanan the Gederite: and over the cellars of oil was Joash:

29 And over the herds that fed in ^cSharon³ was Shitrai the Sharonite: and over the herds that were in the valleys was Shaphat the son of Adlai:

30 Over ^dthe camels also was Obil the Ishmaelite: and over the asses was Jehdeiah the Meronothite:

31 And over the flocks was Jaziz the Hagerite. All these were the rulers of the substance which was king David's.

32 Also Jonathan, David's ^euncle, was a counsellor, a wise man, and a scribe:⁴ and Jehiel the son⁵ of Hachmoni was with the king's sons:

33 And ^fAhithophel was the king's counsellor: and Hushai the Archite was the king's companion:

34 And after Ahithophel was Jehoiada the son of ^gBenaiah, and Abiathar: and the general of the king's army was ^hJoab.

CHAPTER XXVIII. [Ver. 19. These words are very remarkable. The Hebrew may be more clearly rendered:—'All this has Jehovah taught me through a writing from his hand given to me as a pattern.' The Lord himself, therefore, had given to David instructions written, and a pattern traced, by his own hand; just as he had done to Moses in regard to the tabernacle. The plan of both temple and tabernacle was divine. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—It is honourable to be removed and exalted to the church eternal, while we are earnestly exerting ourselves to leave all things well in the church below. Public settlements of religion and kingdoms ought to be conducted with the utmost prudence, that (if possible) all concerned may be satisfied. Rulers in the church and state should deal with those under them in the most affectionate and engaging manner. Respectful kindness has a powerful tendency to secure their cheerful service. And even when the settlement is divine, and cannot be altered, care ought to be taken to convince every one of its divinity. God puts his honourable work into what hands he pleases. But a solid knowledge of God, holy awe of him as the searcher of hearts, rewarder of piety, and punisher of apostasy, and a knowledge of our divine call, are necessary to excite us to his service. Everything in God's church and worship ought to be framed exactly according to his inspired model, without the smallest intermixture of the inventions of men: and in executing designs for his honour, we should be benevolent and cheerful. God's owning our fathers in his work, and especially the promises of his presence with us, should make us to renounce every unbelieving fear, and every degree of 11 ¶ Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasures thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy-seat

12 And the pattern of all that he had by the Spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasures of the house of God, and of the treasures of the dedicated things:

13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

14 He gave of gold by weight for things of gold, for all instruments of all manner of service; silver also for all instruments of silver by weight, for all instruments of every kind of service:

15 Even the weight for the candlesticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candlestick and for the lamps thereof; and for the candlesticks of silver by weight, both for the candlestick, and also for the lamps thereof, according to the use of every candlestick.

17 Also pure gold for the flesh-hooks, and the bowls, and the cups; and for the golden basons he gave gold by weight for every bason; and likewise silver by weight for every bason of silver:

18 And for the altar of incense refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of the chariot of the cherubims, that spread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD.

19 All this, said David, the LORD made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern.

20 ¶ And David said to Solomon his son, Be strong, and of good courage, and do it: fear not, nor be dismayed: for the LORD God, even my God, will be with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the LORD.

21 And, behold, the courses of the priests and the Levites, even they shall be with thee for all the service of the house of God: and there shall be with thee, for all manner of work-

Clarke.—The temple must be a sacred thing, and a type of Christ. There must be in it not only convenience but significance; it must not be left to man's art or invention to contrive it; but it must be framed by divine institution. Christ the true temple, the church the gospel temple, and heaven the everlasting temple, all are framed according to the divine counsels, and the plan laid in the divine wisdom, ordained before the world, for God's glory and our good.—Henry.

5 In the original the word 'cherubim' is in apposition to 'chariot,' and not in the status constructus, as our translators appear to have supposed. In fact the form of the words shows at once to any scholar that there can be no genitive here. Consequently they should be translated: 'And for the pattern of the chariot—the cherubim, gold.' The cherubim constituted the chariot of Jehovah, as is stated in Ps. 18. 10, and as is indicated in Eze. 10. 14.—P.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 David, by his example and entreaty, 6 causeth the princes and people to offer willingly. 10 David's thanksgiving and prayer. 20 The people, having blessed God, and sacrificed, make Solomon king the second time. 26 David's reign and death.

FURTHERMORE, David the king said unto all the congregation, Solomon my son, whom alone God hath chosen, is yet young and tender, and the work is great: for the palace is not for man, but for the LORD God.

2 Now, I have prepared with all my might for the house of my God, the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of brass, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood; onyx-stones, and stones to be set, glistening stones, and of divers colours, and all manner of precious stones, and marble stones in abundance.

3 Moreover, because I have set my affection to the house of my God, I have of mine own proper good, of gold and silver, which I have given to the house of my God, over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house,

4 Even three thousand talents of gold, of the gold of Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses withal.

5 The gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the LORD?

6 ¶ Then the chief of the fathers, and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with the rulers over the king's work, offered willingly,

7 And gave for the service of the house of God, of gold, five thousand talents and ten thousand drams, and of silver ten thousand talents, and of brass eighteen thousand talents, and one hundred thousand talents of iron.

8 And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the LORD, by the hand of Jehiel the Gershonite.

9 Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly, because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the LORD: and David the king also rejoiced with great joy.

10 ¶ Wherefore David blessed the LORD before all the congregation: and David said, insolence. And when princes, priests, and people heartily concur in God's work, the spiritual building rises gloriously.

CHAPTER XXIX. [Ver. 5. In addition to all he had raised by commerce, public taxes, levies on nations conquered, and other means, David had given a magnificent donation from his private fortune. Having set such a noble example, he asked voluntary contributions from the princes and people of Israel. In this respect he followed the example of Moses. It was a wise policy. The people would naturally feel more interest in a building to which they had contributed. They would look upon it as their own. They would regard with pride its grandeur. Their love and devotion to God would thus be increased; while at the same time loyalty to the throne and constitution would be deepened. P.]

Ver. 13. [What a noble sentiment is embodied in this expression of thanks to God! It recognizes him alone as the source of national and individual prosperity. All the wealth of a nation comes from him, and ought therefore to be dedicated to him. Generosity as well as richer has its source in God. He gives the power to get

TOMB OF DAVID. [I Chronicles, xxix:28.]—"And he died in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honor: and Solomon his son reigned in his stead," David, we are told, together with his successors, was buried in his own city on Zion, and the site now known as David's Tomb stands on the south brow of the hill outside of the modern walls. Jews, Christians, and Moslems have for many centuries united in looking upon this site as genuine, and it is said to be often common to see

Jews standing close to the building steadily and reverently contemplating the place. Josephus tells us that Hyrcanus, when besieged by Antiochus Pius, opened David's Sepulcher and took out 3,000 talents. There have been many stories current in different ages about the fabulous wealth buried in this tomb. On one occasion it is said a man was miraculously struck down while attempting to remove some of these treasures.

Blessedⁱ be thou, LORD God of Israel our father, for ever and ever.

11 Thine,^k O LORD, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine: thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art exalted as head above all.

12 Both riches and honour come of thee, and^m thou reignest over all; and in thine hand is power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all.

13 Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

14 But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee.

15 For we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: our days on the earth are as a shadow,³ and there is none abiding.⁴

16 O LORD our God, all this store, that we have prepared to build thee an house for thine holy name, cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own.

17 I know also, my God, that thou triest the^t heart, and hast pleasure in uprightness. As for me, in the uprightness of mine heart I have willingly offered all these things: and now have I seen with joy thy people, which are present here, to offer willingly unto thee.

18 O LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and prepare their heart⁵ unto thee:

19 And give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart, to keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy statutes, and to do all these things, and to build the palace, for the which I have made provision.

wealth; and he gives the grace and wisdom rightly to use it. David sees and devoutly acknowledges all this. P.]

Ver. 22. [Abiathar had been priest during the reign of David. The cause of his disgrace, and Zadok's elevation, may be gathered from a number of incidental remarks in the history of David as narrated in Samuel and Kings. Abiathar was son of Ahimelech, who was slain by Saul because he had given David food and arms at Nob, 1 Sa. 22. 20. He fled to David, carrying with him the ephod, and he became David's constant companion. After the death of Saul, and David's accession to the throne, Abiathar was made high-priest, but he had Zadok as colleague. The former was descended from Ithamar, the youngest son of Aaron, 1 Ch. 24. 3, and also from the family of Eli, on which a curse had been pronounced, 1 Sa. 2. 36; the latter was descended from Eleazar, the eldest son of Aaron. It would seem that Abiathar gradually became dissatisfied with the growing influence of his colleague, and his loyalty to the house of David waxed cold. At length, when Adonijah aspired to the throne, he conferred with Abiathar. He must have had good reason to anticipate success in that quarter; and the event showed that he was not mistaken in his man. Zadok, on the contrary, was true to David. Thus it was that Abiathar, by envy, folly, and disloyalty, brought about his own disgrace, and at the same time a fulfilment of the prophetic curse pronounced on the guilty house of Eli. P.]

Ver. 29. [It detracts nothing from the integrity and completeness of divine revelation even though we admit that these books have perished. God has by his providence preserved all that is necessary for the salvation of his church. The Bible was never intended to be merely a history. The facts of history which it contains were not intended merely for the gratification of man's curiosity. They have a higher object. The books of Samuel, Nathan, and Gad, which are here mentioned, may have been mere biographies of David, with no claim to inspiration. The mention of them here does not prove their inspiration; it merely proves that they were full and trustworthy records of national history. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Young beginners ought to be strongly encouraged in the Lord's way. What we do for God should correspond with the excellences of his nature and his kindness to us, and should be done with all our might; for that only is acceptable to God which is done from hearty affection to him. He loves a cheerful giver: and when our heart is right our hand will be open. But it is not enough that we do our own duty; we must also stir up others to theirs; and to draw them to that which is good, we must show them an example. Such as set their affection upon God's service will think no pains or cost too much to bestow upon it: and what is bestowed in this manner usually brings its own reward in present comfort. It is a pleasure to saints to see God's work carried on with vigour, and to behold a mutual emulation in good works. It is a pleasure for them to die in the comfortable prospect of the church's prosperity: and that they leave behind them such as will zealously endeavour the maintenance of religion in its purity and power. But how delightful is it when dying saints have their mouths opened in prayer, praise, and thanksgiving! And how amazing the infinite excellences and unbounded kindness of God! How unquestionable his right to our most exalted praise! Whatever gifts or grace men have, they have it all from him. And the more we do for him, we are the more indebted to him for employing and enabling us, and ought to walk the more humbly with him. And though our good works ought never to encourage our pride, yet should they be the matter of our praise. If we would retain good impressions on our spirit, we must commit the keeping of them to God. A heart sincerely fixed upon him is the greatest blessing we can here enjoy: and a holy rejoicing should enliven every act of our fellowship with him; particularly our feasting by faith on the sacrifice of his Son. For great is the honour God gives to those whom he calls to his work, while they serve him faithfully therein. But how short a step there is between a throne and a grave! The brightest stars that appear in the church must quickly set in death, and leave their room to others. Let therefore the divinely anointed, the now dying Jesus, be all my joy and consolation.

THE SECOND BOOK OF CHRONICLES.

This book greatly coincides with the First and Second Book of Kings, and contains a history of about 480 years, till the return from Babylon: only there we had the history of Israel and Judah mixed together; in this we have scarcely anything but the history of David's descendants, much of which we had not before. In general the good kings were successful, and the wicked severely punished, as Moses had predicted, Le. xxvi.; De. xxviii.-xxxii.; iv. 25-30. Here we have the peaceable reign of Solomon, ch. i.-ix.; the blemished reign of Rehoboam, x.-xii.; the short but busy reign of Abijah, xiii.; the long and happy reign of Asa, xiv.-xvii.; the pious and prosperous reign of Jehoshaphat, xviii.-xx.; the infamous reigns of Jehoram and Ahaziah, xxi. xxii.; the unsteady reigns of Joash and Amaziah, xxiii.-xxv.; the long, prosperous, but ill-concluded reign of Uzziah, xxvi.; the regular reign of Jotham, xxvii.; the idolatrous, profane, and miserable reign of Ahaz, xxviii.; the reforming and glorious reign of Hezekiah, xxix.-xxxii.; the deforming and wicked reigns of Manasseh and Amon, xxxiii.; the pious and reforming reign of Josiah, xxxiv. xxxv.; and the reigns of Jehoahaz, Jehoikim, Jehoiahin, and Zedekiah, destructive to the nation, xxxvi.

David my father be established: for thou ^{phast}made me king over a people like the dust⁶ of the earth in multitude.

¹⁰ Give^a me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may go out and come in before this people: for who can judge this thy people, *that is so great?*⁷

¹¹ And God said to Solomon, Because this ^{was} in thine heart, and thou hast not asked riches, wealth,⁸ or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, that thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king:

¹² Wisdom and knowledge is ^{granted}unto thee; and I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour, such as ^{none}of the kings have had that have been before thee, neither shall there any after thee have the like.

¹³ ¶ Then Solomon came from ^{his}journey to the high place that was at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned ^{over}Israel.

¹⁶ And^a Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 3. Gibeon was one of the royal cities of the Hivites, and was the scene of Joshua's great victory and miracle. It would seem that the tabernacle was brought to Gibeon in the early part of the rule of Samuel, probably because it was central, and close to Mizpeh, one of the national gathering-places. The city stood on a low rocky hill, in the centre of an upland plain, 6 miles north-west of Jerusalem, in the territory of Benjamin. No spot in central Palestine was better adapted for a great national gathering. The removal of the tabernacle from Shiloh, which was in Ephraim, may have tended to increase the discontent that already existed in that powerful tribe. P.]

Ver. 13. [The sense of this passage and the scope of the context, especially ver. 3, appear to require the first clause of this verse to be rendered thus:—'Then Solomon came from the high-place at Gibeon to Jerusalem.' The words 'from his journey' have no equivalent in the Hebrew, and serve to obscure rather than elucidate the meaning. Literally the Hebrew means 'to the high-place;' but this must be inaccurate, for Solomon was there, and came to Jerusalem. Both the Septuagint and Vulgate read from. A mistake in 17 And they fetched up, and brought forth out of Egypt, a chariot for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty;² and so brought they out horses for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, by their means.³

CHAPTER II.

1, 17 Solomon's labourers for the building of the temple. 3 His embassy to Hiram for skilful artificers and timber. 11 Hiram sendeth him a friendly answer.

AND Solomon determined¹ to build an house for^a the name of the LORD, and an house for^b his kingdom.

2 And Solomon told out threescore and ten thousand men to bear burdens, and fourscore thousand to hew in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred to oversee them.²

3 ¶ And Solomon sent to Hiram³ the king of Tyre, saying, As thou didst deal with David my father, and didst send him cedars to build him an house to dwell therein, even so deal with me.

4 Behold, I build an house to the name of the LORD my God, to dedicate it to him, and to burn before him sweet incense,⁴ and for the continual show-bread, and for the burnt-offerings morning and evening, on the sabbaths, and on the new-moons, and on the solemn feasts of the LORD our God. This is an ordinance for ever to Israel.

5 And the house which I build is great: for great is our God above all gods.⁵

6 But⁶ who is able⁶ to build him an house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? who am I then, that I should build him an house, save only to burn sacrifice before him?

7 Send me now therefore a man cunning to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in iron, and in purple, and in crimson, and in blue, and that can skill to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah and in Jerusalem, whom David my father did provide.

8 Send⁸ me also cedar-trees, fir-trees, and algum-trees,⁷ out of Lebanon: (for I know that thy servants can skill to cut timber in Lebanon:)⁸

A.M. 2989. B.C. 1015.

2 Some expositors consider the word translated the 'linen yarn' to be a price. Bochart thinks it signifies the gold or cost. The sum paid for a chariot-horse, amounting to about £22, nor would seem, however, to indicate the price rather than any ad valorem export duty.

REFLECTIONS.—The more God does for us, the more we ought to do for him, in order to testify our affection and gratitude. A reign, or an undertaking, begun with the solemn service of God, and with earnest prayer for his direction and assistance, is likely to turn out happily. And great is the influence of a good magistrate's example. It is not outward appearances, but inward desires, that most certainly characterize persons. And if we have faith, we shall count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, and for skill to serve him in our station. And as the eminency of our predecessors or stations render remarkable qualifications necessary, so the infinite mercy of our God, and his promise, encourage us to seek such things. God readily gives his people exceedingly above what they ask or think: and the most disinterested prayers turn out most to our advantage: while those who eagerly pursue the things of this world are apt to lose them, or to have them turned into a curse. And he that increaseth horses, chariots, or trade, often spreads snares and temptations for souls.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 13. The construction is here difficult, and expositors are not agreed as to the meaning. The Hebrew may be translated literally as follows:—'And now I have sent a skilled man, endued with understanding, Hiram my father.' There can be no doubt that the artificer's name was Hiram. The Hebrew prefix which is translated 'of' is only a sign of the accusative. But then the difficulty arises, why is the expression 'my father' added? Some reply that the Hebrew word so translated is part of the man's name, Hiram-Abi; others say the king calls the artist my father, because of his great skill. Both the Septuagint and Vulgate read 'Hiram my father.' Taking this verse in connection with ch. 4. 16, I conclude that the artist's full name was Hiram-Abi. P.]

Ver. 17, 18. [Ver. 17, 18 explain 1 Ch. 22. 2. The strangers resident in Palestine were collected to perform the work to which they were originally devoted. They had been permitted to reside within the bounds of the land of Israel only on condition of becoming slaves or helots to the Israelites. Their labour was now turned to good account. The magnitude of the undertaking required them all. The mere erection of a temple would have been a small thing; but the site selected was such that a vast artificial platform had to be constructed by building walls round the shelving sides of Mount Moriah, in some places to the enormous height of 200 feet, and then filling up the interior. The platform was 1000 feet square. The stones for the building were of enormous size—some of them thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers to set the people a work.

3 And² under it was the similitude of oxen, which did compass it round about: ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen were cast when it was cast.

4 It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

REFLECTIONS.—We should always prefer the honour of God, and the welfare of his church, to our own accommodations. It is very desirable to make our fathers' creditable friends our own: and if we have the knowledge of the true God, we should labour to make others acquainted with it. Revelation will recommend itself, on trial, to every wise man. But whatever we do for God is in itself unworthy of his regard. And we ought to avoid giving others any ground to misapprehend his greatness and glory; yea, should bring all that we can to admire and adore him, and use their help in promoting his honour. And let us now rejoice that the Gentiles are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—Every circumstance in the worship of God must be ordered according to his appointment: and if God meet with us in a place or ordinance, let us hope that he will do it again if it be for his glory and our good. Meanwhile let me consider Jesus, who came in the promised time and spot, as the great temple of our fellowship with God. The dignity, glory, fullness, and usefulness of his person, particularly in his exalted state, infinitely transcend this astonishing structure of Solomon: and angels, ministers, and saints shall always admire his glory. With respect to the temple of his church, of his saints, and of heaven, he is the foundation, the wall, the door, the pillars, the ark, the table, the altars, the light, the sea, the laver, yea, the ALL in ALL.

CHAPTER IV. [Ver. 3. Oxen. A comparison of the parallel passages certainly suggests the idea that the readings in both were originally identical, in which case there can be no doubt the true reading was that in 1 Ki. 7.24. The Hebrew words for 'knops' and 'oxen' are so nearly alike that a transcriber might easily mistake them. But if the text of Chronicles is here corrupt, the corruption must have taken place at a very early period, for all the ancient versions agree with the present text. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—What a mercy is it that Jesus, his church, and heavenly state, are suited to his people's condition! As the great atonement, and as the fountain which cleanses from all sin, he is openly exhibited brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies; and it received and held three thousand baths.¹

6 ¶ He made also ten lavers, and put five on the right hand and five on the left, to wash in them: such things as they offered for the burnt-offering they washed in them;² but the sea³ was for the priests to wash in.

7 And he made ten candlesticks of gold, according to their form,⁴ and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 He made also ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left: and he made an hundred basons of gold.

9 ¶ Furthermore he made the court of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

10 And he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 ¶ And Hiram made the pots, and the shovels, and the basons. And Hiram finished the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God;

12 To wit, the two pillars, and the pommels,⁴ and the chapters which were on the top of the two pillars, and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the chapters which were on the top of the pillars;

13 And four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths; two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two pommels of the chapters which were upon the pillars.

14 He made also bases, and lavers made he upon the bases;

15 One sea, and twelve oxen under it.

16 The pots also, and the shovels, and the flesh-hooks, and all their instruments, did Hiram his father⁵ make to king Solomon, for the house of the LORD, of bright brass.⁶

17 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the clay ground between Succoth and Zeredathah.⁷

18 Thus Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance: for the weight of the brass could not be found out.

19 ¶ And Solomon made all the vessels that were for the house of God, the golden altar also, and the tables whereon the showbread was set;

20 Moreover, the candlesticks with their lamps, that they should burn after the manner before the oracle, of pure gold; before us, and accessible to us, in the ordinances of the gospel. By him, as such, we have access to dwell in God's house, enjoy his light, feed on his fulness, and live by his intercession, through which our services are accepted. Yea, under the gospel we have more than a tenfold exhibition of Christ, in his cleansing virtue, his illuminating and soul-nourishing influence. He can make all tempers, gifts, and graces useful in his church—brass as well as gold. And great is their honour who lay out their eminent gifts in the service of Christ.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 10. It has been objected that this passage does not accord with Ex. 16. 33 and 21 And the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, made he of gold, and that perfect gold;⁸

22 And the snuffers, and the basons, and the spoons, and the censers, of pure gold: and the entry⁹ of the house, the inner doors thereof for the most holy place, and the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold.

CHAPTER V.

1 The dedicated treasures. 2 The solemn induction of the ark into the most holy place. 11 God being praised, giveth a visible sign of his favour.

THUS all the work that Solomon made for the house of the LORD was finished:¹ and Solomon brought in all the things that David his father had dedicated; and the silver, and the gold, and all the instruments, put he among the treasures of the house of God.

2 ¶ Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel,² unto Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the city of David, which is Zion.³

3 Wherefore all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto the king in the feast which was in the seventh month.⁴

4 And all the elders of Israel came; and the Levites took up the ark.

5 And they brought up the ark, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, these did the priests and the Levites bring up.⁵

6 Also king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen, which could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

7 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, to the oracle of the house, into the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims:

8 For the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above.

9 And they drew out the staves of the ark, that the ends of the staves were seen from the ark before the oracle; but they were not seen without. And there it is unto this day.⁶

10 There was nothing in the ark save the two tables which Moses put therein at Horeb, when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place; (for all the priests that were present were sanctified, and did not then wait by course;

He. 9. 4. It will be observed, however, that in Ex. 16. 33 it is not said the 'pot of manna' was to be placed in the ark, but only 'before the Lord.' It is probable, however, that while the Israelites were wandering through the wilderness, and while the ark remained without a settled place in Palestine, the pot of manna and rod of Aaron may have been placed within it for security; but upon being located permanently in ¹ There were ten times as many lavers, candlesticks, and tables of showbread in the temple as in the tabernacle.

12 Also^a the Levites which were the singers, all of them of Asaph, of Heman, of Jeduthun, with their sons and their brethren, being arrayed in white linen, having cymbals, and psalteries, and harps, stood at the east end of the altar, and with them an hundred and twenty priests sounding with trumpets;)

13 It came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the LORD, and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of music, and praised the LORD, saying, 'For he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever; that then the house was filled with a cloud,¹ even the house of the LORD;²

14 So^a that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Solomon, having blessed the people, blesseth God. 12 Solomon's prayer at the consecration of the temple, upon the brazen scaffold.

THEN said^a Solomon, The LORD hath said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.¹

2 But I have built an house of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for ever.

3 And the king turned his face, and blessed the whole congregation of Israel: (and all the congregation of Israel stood:)

4 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, who hath with his hands fulfilled that which he spake with his mouth to my father David, saying,

5 Since^a the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel to build an house in, that my name might be there; neither chose I any man to be a ruler over my people Israel:²

6 But I have chosen Jerusalem, that my name might be there; and have chosen David to be over my people Israel.

7 Now it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

8 But the LORD said to David my father, Forasmuch as it was in thine heart to build an house for my name, thou didst well in that it was in thine heart:

9 Notwithstanding thou shalt not build the house; but thy son which shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house for my name.

10 The LORD therefore hath performed his word that he hath spoken: for 'I am risen up in the room of David my father, and am set on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built the house for the name of the LORD God of Israel:

11 And^a in it have I put the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD,³ that he made with the children of Israel.

12 ¶ And he stood before the altar of the LORD, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands,⁴

13 (For Solomon had made a brazen scaffold, of five cubits long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had set it in the midst of the court; and upon it he stood, and kneeled down upon his knees before all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven.)

14 And said, O LORD God of Israel, there is no God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; which keepest covenant, and showest mercy unto thy servants that walk before thee with all their hearts:

15 Thou which hast kept with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him; and spakest with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

16 Now therefore, O LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, 'There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit upon the throne of Israel; yet so that thy children take heed to their way, to walk in my law, as thou hast walked before me.

17 Now^a then, O LORD God of Israel, let thy word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto thy servant David.

18 (But will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? Behold, heaven and the heaven of heavens⁵ cannot contain thee; how much less this house which I have built!)

19 Have respect therefore to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee:

20 That thine eyes may be open upon this

Jerusalem the rod and the manna were put in their proper positions 'before the Lord.' Hence it is truly said in this chapter, 'There was nothing in the ark save the two tables which Moses put therein at Horeb.' The emphatic manner in which this statement is made leaves the impression on the mind that at some previous period there had been other things in it. Paul, in the epistle to the Hebrews, speaks of the time when the manna and rod were in the ark. P.]

Ver. 14. [It is worthy of note that as at the dedication of the tabernacle in the wilderness, 'a cloud covered the tent of the congregation; and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle; and Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation because the cloud abode thereon;' so now, on the dedication of the temple, 'the house was filled with a cloud, so that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud; for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—If we would inherit our godly parents' blessings we must religiously pursue their intentions. Dedicated things must never be alienated from the Lord's service. The most regularly framed and furnished churches are but desolate if they want the presence of Jesus Christ, the ark of God's strength, and the glory of his Father in him. But his faithful people, according to his promise, shall have him with them always unto the end of the world. And when God accepts us in Christ, and himself in him, we ought exceedingly to rejoice in and thank him, as then we shall taste joys unspeakable and full of glory. When everything else is put out of God's room, and we become hearty and unanimous in our prayers and praises, we may expect astonishing discoveries of his glory in our second, our great temple, CHRIST, in whom dwell eth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily!

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—How honourable is it when we perform great enterprises, not from pride, but in prosecution of our parents' gracious purposes, and to fulfil the promise, obey the command, and honour the name of the Lord! And while we house day and night, upon the place whereof thou hast said that thou wouldest put thy name there; to hearken unto the prayer which thy servant prayeth toward this place.

21 Hearken therefore unto the supplications of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, which they shall make toward this place: hear thou from thy dwelling-place, even from heaven; and when thou hearest, "forgive."

22 ¶ If a man sin against his neighbour, and an oath be laid upon him to make him swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house;

23 Then hear thou from heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, by requiring the wicked, by recompensing his way upon his own head; and by justifying the righteous, by giving him according to his righteousness.

24 ¶ And if thy people Israel be put to the worse before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee; and shall return and confess thy name, and pray, and make supplication before thee in this house;

25 Then hear thou from the heavens, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest to them and to their fathers.

26 ¶ When the heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; yet if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou dost afflict them;

27 Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, when thou hast taught them the good way wherein they should walk; and send rain upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance.

28 ¶ If there be dearth in the land, if there be pestilence, if there be blasting, or mildew, locusts, or caterpillars; if their enemies besiege them in the cities of their land; whatsoever sore or whatsoever sickness there be:

29 Then what prayer or what supplication soever shall be made of any man, or of all thy people Israel, when every one shall know his own sore, and his own grief, and shall spread forth his hands in this house:

PALMYRA ROAD, LEADING TO TADMOR—BUILT BY KING SOLOMON. [II. CHRONICLES, viii:4.]—"And he built Tadmor (Palmyra) in the wilderness, and all the store cities, which he built in Hamath." Palmyra in Old Testament times was called Tadmor. This city Solomon rebuilt 1000 B. C. in the wilderness east of Gilead between Damascus and the Euphrates. About 333 B. C. its name was changed to Palmyra. In A. D. 130 it submitted to Hadrian. In 260 Odenathus defeated Sapor King of Persia, and in 266 Zenobia the wife of Sapor took the title of Queen of the East. Between 272 and 273 Aurelian besieged and took it. Its ruins covered several miles. There was a Temple of the Sun here, 90 columns of which still remain. Above we have a view of the road that passes Palmyra immediately after it leaves Damascus.

2 That the cities which Hiram had restored to Solomon,¹ Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.

3 And Solomon went to Hamath-zobah, and prevailed against it.

4 And he built ⁴Tadmor² in the wilderness, and all the store-cities which he built in Hamath.

5 Also he built Beth-horon the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars;

6 And Baalath, and all the store-cities that Solomon had, and all the chariot-cities, and the cities of the horsemen, and all that Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion.

7 ¶ As for all the people that were left of the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel,

8 But of their children, who were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel consumed not, them did Solomon make to pay tribute until this day.³

9 But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work; but they were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen.

10 And these were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even ^mtwo hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people.

11 ¶ And Solomon brought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of the city of David unto the house that he had built for her: for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are holy,⁴ whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.⁵

12 ¶ Then Solomon offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD on the altar of the LORD, which he had built before the porch, 13 Even after a certain rate every day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the sabbaths, and on the new-moons, and on the solemn feasts, three times in the year, even in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles.

14 ¶ And he appointed, according to the CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 4. There can be little doubt that the city here mentioned is identical with the far-famed Palmyra of classic history, and the Tadmor of the modern Arabs. The position of the city bears some resemblance to that of Damascus. It lies along the base of a white limestone ridge, through which a deep glen cuts opposite the ruins. A sulphureous fountain bursts from a cliff, runs eastward, watering gardens and orchards of palms and pomegranates, and disappears in a salt marsh. On the undulating ground along the left or northern bank of this streamlet lie the ruins of Tadmor. On the east and south a desert plain, not of sand however, as is usually stated, extends to the horizon. Solomon was a commercial monarch. A secure route for the caravans that imported to his little kingdom the treasures of India, Persia, and Mesopotamia was of great importance; he therefore built Tadmor in the wilderness. Its situation, about midway between the Euphrates and Syria, and its copious fountain, made it a fit spot for the establishment of a commercial depot and resting place. It was during the splendid period of Roman rule in the East that most of the temples and palaces which now adorn Palmyra were built. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—In the most profound peace we had need to prepare for war, spiritual or temporal. It is an honour for kings to manifest the utmost regard to their subjects. How certainly, however slowly, Noah's curse of servitude fixes at last upon the descendants of Canaan! They become slaves to the offspring of Shem through the influence of the Lord his God. It is necessary to set bounds to our desires after created things, as they are apt to become inordinate and insatiable. It is no less necessary to keep up proper distinctions between things sacred and common. And we shall find difficulty therein if we ally ourselves in marriage, or in any other way, with the ungodly. What an excellent foundation, for even external prosperity, is a prudent and active zeal for, and constant attendance on, the worship of God! But, alas! how great the folly that, while men will risk and do so much for earthly treasures, so little is done to obtain the riches which endure for ever!

CHAPTER IX. REFLECTIONS.—God honours such as honour him. They who know the value of divine wisdom and truth will grudge no pains to report⁷ which I heard in mine own land of thine acts,⁸ and of thy wisdom:

6 Howbeit I ^{believed} not their words until I came, and mine eyes had seen it; and, behold, the one half of the greatness of thy wisdom was not told me: for thou ^{exceedest} the fame that I heard.

7 Happy¹ are thy men, and happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom.

8 Blessed^m be the LORD thy God,¹ which delighted in thee to set thee on ^{his} throne, to be king for the LORD thy God;² because thy God loved Israel, to establish them for ever, therefore made he thee king over them, to do judgment and justice.

9 And ^{she} gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices great abundance, and precious stones: neither was there any such spice as the queen of Sheba gave king Solomon.

10 And the servants also of Hiram, and the servants of Solomon, which brought gold from Ophir,³ brought ^{algum-trees} and precious stones.

11 And the king made of the algum-trees ^{terraces} to the house of the LORD, and to the king's palace, and harps and psalteries for singers: and there were none such seen before in the land of Judah.

12 And^r king Solomon gave to the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, besides that which she had brought unto the king.⁵ So she turned, and went away to her own land, she and her servants.

13 ¶ Now the ^{weight} of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred and threescore and six talents of gold;

14 Besides that which chapmen and merchants brought: and all the ^{kings} of Arabia, and governors⁶ of the country, brought gold and silver to Solomon.⁷

15 ¶ And^u king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred *shekels*⁸ of beaten gold went to one target.

16 And three hundred shields made he of beaten gold: three hundred *shekels*⁹ of gold went to one shield: and the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

17 ¶ Moreover, ^{the} king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.

18 And there were six steps to the throne, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne, and stays¹ on each side of the sitting-place, and two lions standing by the stays.

CHAPTER X.

1 The Israelites, assembled at Shechem to crown Rehoboam, by Jeroboam make a suit of relaxation unto him. 6 Rehoboam, refusing the old men's counsel, by the advice of young men answereth them roughly. 16 Ten tribes revolting kill Hadoram, and make Rehoboam to flee.

AND Rehoboam^a went to Shechem:¹ for to Shechem were all Israel come to make him king.

2 And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat (who was in Egypt, ^{whither} he had fled from the presence of Solomon the king) heard it, that Jeroboam returned out of Egypt.

3 And they sent and called him. So Jeroboam and all Israel² came and spake to Rehoboam, saying,

4 Thy father made our yoke grievous: now therefore ease thou somewhat the grievous servitude of thy father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will serve thee.

5 And he said unto them, Come again unto me after three days. And the people departed.

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam took counsel with the old men that had stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, saying, What counsel give ye me to return answer to this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, If thou be kind to this people, and please them, and speak good words to them, they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he forsook the counsel which the old men gave him, and took counsel with the young men that were brought up with him, that stood before him.

9 And he said unto them, What advice give ye that we may return answer to this people, which have spoken to me, saying, Ease somewhat the yoke that thy father did put upon us?

10 And the young men that were brought up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou answer the people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it somewhat lighter for us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 For whereas my father put a heavy yoke upon you, I will put more to your yoke: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, Come again to me on the third day.

13 And the king answered them roughly: and king Rehoboam forsook the counsel of the old men.

14 And answered them after the advice of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 So the king hearkened not unto the people: for the cause was of God, that the LORD might perform his word, which he spake

It would be well suited to beget friendships, which, when sincere and honest, none require more than kings. 2. It would excite to emulation in study and all requisite accomplishments. 3. It would lead to the knowledge of the characters of those who might be future ministers and associates in government. The whole may be well combined in the one expressive modern phrase, school-fellowship, associates upon whom, under character, and success or disaster, invariably depends. — C.

He had neglected the advice of his father's counsellors, and the Ephraimites had rejected their allegiance on account of their burdens and taxes; and to aggravate him, he sends Hadoram, or Adoniram, who was over the tribute; of course, the most obnoxious man he could send. — Bootliroyd.

4 A few soft words, and a removal of a part of the oppressive taxes (for they said, "Ease thou somewhat of the grievous servitude"), would have secured this people to the state, and prevented the shedding of a sea of human blood, which was the consequence of the separation of this kingdom. Rehoboam was a fool; and through his folly lost his kingdom. He is not the only example on record: the Stewards lost the realm of England much in the same way; and, by a different mode of treatment, the house of Brunswick continues to fill the British throne. May the thread of its fortune, woven by the hand of God, never be broken! and may the current of its power gladden to the latest posterity. — Clarke.

16 ¶ And when all Israel saw that the king would not hearken unto them, the people answered the king, saying, What portion have we in David? and we have none inheritance in the son of Jesse: every man to your tents, O Israel: and now, David, see to thine own house. So all Israel went to their tents.

17 But as for the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent Hadoram that was over the tribute; and the children of Israel stoned him with stones, that he died: but king Rehoboam made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

19 And Israel rebelled against the house of David unto this day.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Rehoboam raising an army to subdue Israel, is forbidden by the prophet Shemaiah. 5 He strengtheneth his kingdom with forts and provision. 13 The priests and Levites, and such as feared God, forsaken by Jeroboam, strengthen the kingdom of Judah. 18 The wives and children of Rehoboam.

AND when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he gathered of the house of Judah and Benjamin an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against Israel, that he might bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam.

2 But the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah the man of God, saying,

3 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon king of Judah, and to all Israel in Judah and Benjamin, saying,

4 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren: return every man to his house; for this thing is done of me. And they obeyed the words of the LORD, and returned from going against Jeroboam.

graces of God to others; especially if made instrumental for our good. Great souls are ever generous; and ought to be so, according to their stations and ability. But not the most engaging things on earth ought long to detain us from that home in which God calls us to act for his glory. What a transient blaze is all the glory and wealth of earth! Ere it be long Solomon's family shall be poor and condemned. Yet God seems, as it were, unwilling to remember those sins against Solomon or any of his people, of which they have sincerely repented. What a sudden gloom death spreads over the brightest honours on earth! But rejoice, my soul, that Jesus has wisdom, has wealth, has glory, and fame, which neither death nor eternity can ever sully or consume! Of him it may truly be said, the half has not been told us. Happy are they that wait around this exalted King of Israel—chosen through the love of the eternal Father—and placed to do justice and judgment, and to establish his people in eternal glory.

CHAPTER X. REFLECTIONS.—The best of rulers cannot give every one content. Men are readier to complain of the expense of government than to acknowledge the benefit which they receive from it; and turbulent and ungrateful spirits will find fault where they can scarcely find the shadow of a reason. Young heads are ordinarily too hot to be wise counsellors: and many ruin their own interests by trampling on and provoking their inferiors. Moderate counsels are generally the most safe and prudent. Soft answers disarm men's passions when harsh ones render them furious: and when the affairs of church or state are in a ferment rough proceedings do but make them worse and worse. Most men need no more to ruin them than to be given up to their own pride and passion. But O the wisdom and power of God, who can fulfill his counsels by men's folly and fury! Very uncertain are all earthly enjoyments: nor can the wisest secure them to his next heir. God often visits the iniquity of the fathers upon the children: but amidst all the heat of his anger he never breaks his promise.

CHAPTER XI. [Ver. 14. Jeroboam established an idolatrous worship in his kingdom. The Levites, it appears, would not conduct his services. They preferred banishment to servitude under such a master. The kingdom of Judah was thus materially strengthened. In addition to the powerful tribes of Judah and Benjamin, it had the Levites, and also the great bulk of Simeon and Dan. In compactness and natural strength of territory, in unity and courage, in devotion 11 And he fortified the strong holds, and put captains in them, and store of victual, and of oil and wine.

12 And in every several city he put shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong, having Judah and Benjamin on his side.

13 ¶ And the priests and the Levites that were in all Israel resorted to him out of all their coasts.

14 (For the Levites left ^qtheir suburbs and their possession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem: for ^rJeroboam and his sons had cast them off from executing the priest's office unto the LORD:

15 And he ^sordained him priests for the high places, and for the devils,⁵ and for the calves which he had made.)

16 And ^tafter them, out of all the tribes of Israel, such as set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel came to Jerusalem, to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their fathers.

17 So they strengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong, three years: for ^uthree years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.⁶

18 ¶ And Rehoboam took him Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David to wife, and Abihail the daughter of ^vEliab⁷ the son of Jesse;

19 Which bare him children; Jeush, and Shamariah, and Zaham.

20 And after her he took ^wMaachah the daughter of Absalom; which bare him Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Shelomith.

21 And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and his concubines: (for he took ^xeighteen wives, and threescore concubines, and begat twenty and eight sons and threescore daughters.)

22 And Rehoboam made Abijah the son of Maachah the chief, *to be ruler among his brethren: for he thought to make him king.*⁸ to God and purity of worship, the kingdom of Judah far surpassed that of Israel. ^P]

Ver. 20. [Maachah was also the name of Absalom's mother, who was daughter of Talmi, king of Geshur. The name indicates that the Geshurites and Maachathites were closely related and originally of the same stock. In ch. 13. 2 there is a statement which at first sight seems to be at variance with this verse. Here it is said that Abijah was son of Maachah, daughter of Absalom, and the fact is corroborated by the parallel passage in 1 Ki. 15. 2; but in 2 Ch. it is said of Abijah that 'his mother's name was Michaiah, the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah.' The solution of the difficulty appears to be this:—Absalom's daughter

Maachah was married to Uriel, and their daughter, also called Maachah, became the mother of Abijah. Her father, however, being a comparatively obscure person, his name is omitted in the ordinary history, and she is called the daughter of Absalom, who was her grandfather. ^P]

REFLECTIONS.—How often is war too rashly undertaken! But it is in vain to withstand the purposes of God. And it is honourable to drop our darling attempts when he requires it. It is more prudent to make the best we can of what we have, and to take all lawful pains to secure it, than to fight for more. When nations are forsaking God, his faithful ministers are often singularly distressed: and yet none are more use-

He is punished by Shishak's invasion.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Rehoboam, forsaking the Lord, is punished by Shishak's invasion. 5 He and the princes repenting at the preaching of Shemaiah, are delivered from destruction, but not from spoil. 13 The reign and death of Rehoboam.

AND it came to pass, ^awhen Rehoboam had established the kingdom, and had strengthened himself, he forsook the law of the LORD, and all Israel with him.

2 And it came to pass, ^bthat, in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, ^cShishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, because they had transgressed against the LORD,¹

3 With ^dtwelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt; the ^eLubims,² the Sukkiims,³ and the Ethiopians.⁴

4 And he took ^fthe fenced cities which per-tained to Judah, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then came ^gShemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and ^hto the princes of Judah, that were gathered together to Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, ⁱYe have forsaken me, and therefore have I also left you in the hand of Shishak.

6 Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king ^jhumbled themselves; and they said, The LORD is righteous.

7 And when the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; therefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them some⁵ deliverance; and my wrath⁶ shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak.

8 Nevertheless they shall be his servants; that they may know ^kmy service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries.⁷

9 So Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, and took away ^lthe treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he took all: he carried away also the shields of gold which Solomon had ^mmade.

10 Instead of which ⁿking Rehoboam made shields of brass, and committed them to the hands of the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house.⁸

11 And when the king entered into the house of the LORD, the guard came and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard-chamber.

ful for strengthening a kingdom that deals kindly with them. It is proper that those who fear God should leave their country when his ministers and worship are expelled from it. No secular advantage ought to carry or keep us where we must make shipwreck of faith and a good conscience. That is really best for us which is best for our souls. And in all our choices religion should take the lead of outward advantages. If for God's sake we forsake our worldly all, we shall one day find ourselves great gainers. Such as suffer for righteousness' sake ought to be received by us with open arms. And never should we cleave more closely to Christ's faithful ministers than when they are persecuted. Seasons of persecution especially distinguish

TOMB OF KAIT BEY—A MODERN PHARAOH OF EGYPT. [II. Chronicles, xii:9.]—"So Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, and took away the treasures of the house of the Lord." The tomb of Kait Bey marks the resting place of one of the modern Pharaohs of Egypt. He was the successor in the respect that he was one of the last of the independent Mameluke Sultans of Egypt. He was in the line of succession from Shishak, who was the king of Egypt in the time of Rehoboam. This tomb is about eighty feet long and seventy feet wide. It has some fine mosaics, and is thought to be the finest piece of architecture in Cairo. The door has a bronze covering about forty-five feet in height. Kait Bey was Sultan of Egypt from 1468 to 1496. As a general and a diplomatist he successfully maintained his position against the Porte. He was compelled, finally, however, to abdicate in favor of his son, Mohammed, a boy of fourteen.

12 And when he humbled himself, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, that he would not destroy him altogether: and also in Judah things went well.

13 ¶ So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned: for Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel to put his name there: and his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

14 And he did evil, because he prepared not his heart to seek the LORD.

15 Now the acts of Rehoboam, first and last, are they not written in the book¹ of Shemaiah the prophet, and of Iddo the seer, concerning genealogies? And there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually.

16 And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David: and Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XIII.

NOW in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam began Abijah to reign over Judah.

2 He reigned three years in Jerusalem. (his mother's name also was Michaiiah,³ the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah:) and there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

3 And Abijah set the battle in array,⁴ with an army of valiant men of war, even four hundred thousand chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him with eight hundred thousand chosen men, being mighty men of valour.⁵

4 ¶ And Abijah stood up upon mount Zemaraim,⁶ which is in mount Ephraim, and said, Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel;

7 Three circumstances will account for Jeroboam's listening to this lengthened and accusatory address. 1. His conscience may have felt it, and deprived him of power to silence it by any noise in his army. 2. He may have been afraid to prevent his army from hearing the young king. 3. And, being so most probable, he may have been only listening in appearance to prevent Abijah's attention from the ambushment. 13. he was secretly laying against him.

David for ever, even to him and to his sons by a covenant of salt?⁷

6 Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath rebelled against his lord.

7 And there are gathered unto him vain men, the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was young⁸ and tender-hearted, and could not withstand them.

8 And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which Jeroboam made you for gods.

9 Have ye not cast out the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites,⁹ and have made ye priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams,¹ the same may be a priest of them that are no gods.

10 But as for us, the LORD is our God, and we have not forsaken him; and the priests, which minister unto the LORD, are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business:

11 And they burn unto the LORD, every morning and every evening, burnt-sacrifices and sweet incense: the show-bread also set they in order upon the pure table; and the candlestick of gold, with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening: for we keep the charge of the LORD our God; but ye have forsaken him.

12 And, behold, God himself is with us for our captain, and his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, fight ye not against the LORD God of your fathers; for ye shall not prosper.²

13 ¶ But Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind them: so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them.

14 And when Judah looked back, behold, the precious from the vile. Nothing so strengthens a nation as when all ranks concur to walk in the way of the Lord. But, alas! how often do princes weaken their kingdoms by their indulgence of sinful lust and following of long-rooted customs! And happy is it if those who begin foolishly would but end wisely in the right disposal of their children or their property!

CHAPTER XII. [Ver. 2. Shishak has been satisfactorily identified with Sesouchis, the first king of the Diospolitan dynasty. The name is found on Egyptian monuments in the form Sheshouk. In the temple of Karnak there is a large bas-relief portrait of the monarch presenting to the gods the chiefs of vanquished nations, among whom is one with the peculiar Jewish physiognomy, and the attached inscription has been rendered by Champollion 'King of Judaea.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—They who in adversity appear faithful for God often forsake him in their prosperity. Nay, earthly prosperity is a common occasion of ruin to the soul. Human supports and fenced cities prove but refuges of lies when God withdraws or becomes our destroyer. And to punish men's sins, he often turns their old friends, or even relations, into inveterate enemies. God's word comes to men with peculiar advantage when awakening providences concur with it: and stupid and self-conceited sinners must have the plainest providences explained to them before they understand them. They whom the Lord hath left ought to blame themselves as the guilty cause, and to humble themselves under his mighty hand: for it is vain to project means of defence if we continue unhumbled for our sins. The greatest kings and princes must either be humbled or ruined: and we are never humbled aright till we justify God in our sufferings. But how God's bowels yearn towards repenting prodigals! How forward he is to meet them with merciful deliverances who humble themselves before him! Whenever we have hearts humbled under troubles they have done their work, and shall either be removed or have their nature altered into tokens of kindness. And it is a great mercy to a sinful people if God but grant a partial deliverance. It is well if the guilt be removed, though we should smart in the flesh for it. They who reckon God a hard master, and his service burdensome, will find the change. It is far more honourable and safe to endure the utmost hardships in obeying God than to risk the punishments of disobedience. But how easily God can restrain the fury of the most outrageous conquerors by his invisible arm, and set limits to their ravages! and happy is it when, in evil times, he preserves a remnant for himself. Judgments which make us learn righteousness are mercies in disguise. But if our heart be not engaged in the service of God all is naught. They who never had their heart fixed to him, and never made real religion their principal business, are easily drawn to anything evil. Though God's judgments may force men to their prayers, nothing but almighty grace can convert them to himself. And, alas! how many in his church do but cumber the ground while they live, and in a moment go down to their grave!

CHAPTER XIII. REFLECTIONS.—What multitudes do wicked princes render subservient to their lusts! Before men proceed to the extremities of war, every peaceable method of accommodation ought to be tried; as, at least, all the death on the one side is murder, and often so on both. Many can talk finely of God and his service who have no heart-love to them or any correspondent practice. What an advantage in war is it to have a righteous cause and a powerful and gracious God on our side; and when we evidence it by not forsaking him, but by cleaving to his ministers and ordinances! But dangerous is their case who have ambition that cannot be satisfied, and who are emboldened by mere success! Prosperous iniquity is but a short-lived joy. They who have God their the battle was before and behind: and they cried unto the LORD, and the priests sounded with the trumpets.

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah; and God delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down slain of Israel five hundred thousand chosen men.³

18 Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, because they relied upon the LORD God of their fathers.

19 And Abijah pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him, Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Ephraim with the towns thereof.

20 Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah: and the LORD struck him, and he died.⁴

21 ¶ But Abijah waxed mighty, and married fourteen wives,⁵ and begat twenty and two sons, and sixteen daughters.

22 And the rest of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his sayings, are written in the story⁶ of the prophet Iddo.

2 And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the LORD his God.¹

3 For he took away the altars of the strange gods, and the high places, and brake down the images,² and cut down the groves,³

4 And commanded Judah to seek the LORD God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandment.

5 Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the images:⁴ and the kingdom was quiet before him.⁵

6 ¶ And he built fenced cities in Judah: for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because the LORD had given him rest.

7 Therefore he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; because we have sought the LORD our God, we have sought him, and he hath given us rest on every side: so they built and prospered.

8 ¶ And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and four-score thousand: all these were mighty men of valour.⁶

9 ¶ And there came out against them Zerah the Ethiopian, with an host of a thousand thousand,⁷ and three hundred chariots; and came unto Mareshah.

10 Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of Zephathah at Mareshah.

11 And Asa cried unto the LORD his God, and said, LORD, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for we rest on thee, and in thy name we go against this multitude. O LORD, thou art our God; let not man prevail against thee.

12 So the LORD smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled.⁸

13 And Asa, and the people that were with him, pursued them unto Gerar:⁹ and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were destroyed before the LORD, and before his host: and they carried away very much spoil.

14 And they smote all the cities round about Gerar;¹ for the fear of the LORD came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for there was exceeding much spoil in them.

15 They smote also the tents of cattle, and carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XV

1 Asa with Judah and many of Israel, moved by the prophecy of Azariah the son of Oded, make a solemn covenant with God. 16 He putteth down Maachah his mother for her idolatry. 18 He bringeth dedicated things into the house of God, and enjoyeth a long peace.

AND the Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded:

2 And he went out to meet¹ Asa, and said unto him, Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin; The LORD is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.

3 Now for a long season² Israel hath been without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law:

4 But when they in their trouble did turn unto the LORD God of Israel, and sought him, he was found of them.

5 And in those times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but great vexations were upon all the inhabitants of the countries.

6 And nation was destroyed³ c⁴ nation, and city of city: for God did vex them with all adversity.

7 Be ye strong therefore, and let not your hands be weak: for your work shall be rewarded.

8 ¶ And when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of Oded the prophet, he took courage, and put away the abominable idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of the cities which he had taken from mount Ephraim, and renewed the altar of the LORD that was before the porch of the LORD.

9 And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: (for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when they saw that the LORD his God was with him:)

10 So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa.

11 And they offered unto the LORD the same time, of the spoil which they had brought, seven hundred oxen, and seven thousand sheep.

12 And they entered into a covenant to seek the LORD God of their fathers with all their heart, and with all their soul;

p The 'strangers'

here mentioned were Israelites belonging to tribes not included in the kingdom of Judah. It is singular to find some even out of Ephraim, the great tribe, coming to

Jerusalem. It is evident that many in the northern kingdom were dissatisfied and shocked at the idolatry

there practised, and now when they saw the true worship of God re-established under Asa, they embraced the precious opportunity of journeying to Jerusalem to join in it. It is not to be inferred from the mention of

'strangers' out of Simeon, that the tribe and territory of Simeon were not included in the southern kingdom. They formed part of Judah;

but it seems that some of the Simeon-ites had left their homes and settled in the northern kingdom. They are here called 'strangers'—

COFFEE GARDEN, ABANA RIVER. [II. Chronicles, xvi:2.]—"Then Asa brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the Lord and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-hadad, king of Syria, that dwelt at Damascus." One of the things that will strike any traveler at Damascus is the great number of coffee gardens, which are found in different portions of the city. These gardens upon some one of their sides usually front the Abana river. The natives gather here to smoke the nargileh pipe or cigarette and to drink black coffee. These gardens are filled with large trees and adorned by beautiful flowering shrubs. Rose bushes grow in all of them, and roses are taken from these gardens with which to make the famous attar of roses. During the night, when the gardens are illuminated, they look as if they might be scenes of the Arabian Nights. The great charm of Damascus is its abundant supply of water.

5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it, that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work cease.

6 Then Asa the king took all Judah; and they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was a building; and he built therewith Geba and Mizpah.

7 ¶ And at that time Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah, and said unto him, 'Because thou hast relied on the king of Syria, and not relied on the LORD thy God, therefore is the host of the king of Syria escaped' out of thine hand.

8 Were not the Ethiopians and the Lubims a huge host, with very many chariots and horsemen? yet, because thou didst rely on the LORD, he delivered them into thine hand.

9 For the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him. Herein thou hast done foolishly: therefore from henceforth thou shalt have wars.

10 Then Asa was wroth with the seer, and put him in a prison-house; for he was in a rage with him because of this thing. And Asa oppressed some of the people the same time.

11 ¶ And, behold, the acts of Asa, first and last, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

12 And Asa, in the thirty and ninth year of his reign, was diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great; yet in his disease he sought not to the LORD, but to the physicians.

13 ¶ And Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the one and fortieth year of his reign.

14 And they buried him in his own sepulchres, which he had made for himself in the city of David, and laid him in the bed which was filled with sweet odours, and divers kinds of spices prepared by the apothecaries' art: and they made a very great burning for him.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Jehoshaphat, succeeding Asa, reigneth well, and prospereth. 7 He sendeth Levites with his princes to teach Judah. 10 His enemies being terrified by God, some of them bring him presents and tribute. 12 His greatness, captains, and armies.

AND Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead, and strengthened himself against Israel.

That the first ways of Asa were religious, is recorded (ch. 14. 2), and may not David have been one of his names, generally dropped for the name of Asa, or the name of Jehoshaphat, a name probably derived from his following physicians to the neglect of God, ch. 10. 12? 3 And the LORD was with Jehoshaphat, because he walked in the first ways of his father David, and sought not unto Baalim;

4 But sought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not after the doings of Israel:

5 Therefore the LORD established the kingdom in his hand: and all Judah brought to Jehoshaphat presents; and he had riches and honour in abundance.

6 And his heart was lifted up in the ways of the LORD: moreover, he took away the high places and groves out of Judah.

7 ¶ Also, in the third year of his reign, he sent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nethaneel, and to Michaiah, to teach in the cities of Judah.

8 And with them he sent Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nethaniah, and Zebadiah, and Asahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Elishama and Jehoram, priests.

9 And they taught in Judah, and had the book of the law of the LORD with them, and went about throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people.

10 ¶ And the fear of the LORD fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah, so that they made no war against Jehoshaphat.

11 Also some of the Philistines brought Jehoshaphat presents, and tribute-silver; and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand and seven hundred rams, and seven thousand and seven hundred he-goats.

12 ¶ And Jehoshaphat waxed great exceedingly; and he built in Judah castles, and cities of store.

13 And he had much business in the cities of Judah; and the men of war, mighty men of valour, were in Jerusalem.

14 And these are the numbers of them, according to the house of their fathers: Of Judah, the captains of thousands, Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of valour three hundred thousand.

can there be on an arm of flesh! What enticement is there, or even hiring of men, to perjury, and to murdering of God's people, by the plunder of his temple! But opposition to God's people, or murdering of them, though it should be by the hand of heathens, brings along with it the most fearful ruin. And often, particularly in carnal expedients to extricate themselves, even good men act against their experience, their knowledge, and their interest, all at once: often in pride they hate, and in passion they persecute, their faithful reprovers; and, even in distress, overlook God, and depend on means carnal or devilish. O what need we have to consider our ways, to keep our heart with all diligence, and to pray for peculiar grace to keep us to the end! All our departures from God spring from our evil heart of unbelief: and the very means which we use unlawfully to avert trouble will bring it more heavily upon us. Sinful wisdom will at last appear egregious folly. Passion, and impatience of reproof, will issue in bitter groans. Rewarding of God's messengers with imprisonment will issue in our own confinement on earth or in hell: and if our desperate wickedness of heart be indulged, it will mark us with lasting shame. But notwithstanding all their sad blemishes, the godly die in Christ, and must be had in honour by their survivors.

CHAPTER XVII. REFLECTIONS. — How glorious is it when remarkable piety and prosperity are so connected that they promote one another, and outward wealth and greatness lift up the heart to God! —when kings at the same time promote religion and advance the civil power of the nation! —when the personal piety of princes, and their zeal for reforming others, are equally conspicuous! —and when ministers and magistrates heartily concur in promoting the know-

NOW Jehoshaphat had riches and honour in abundance, and joined affinity with Ahab.¹

2 And² after certain years² he went down to Ahab to Samaria: and Ahab killed sheep and oxen for him in abundance, and for the people that he had with him, and persuaded him to go up with him to Ramoth-gilead.

3 And Ahab king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead? And he answered him, I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war.

4 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, Inquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.

5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of prophets four hundred men,³ and said unto them, Shall we go to Ramoth-Gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go⁴ up; for God⁴ will deliver it into the king's hand.

6 ¶ But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might inquire of him?

7 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet one man, by whom we may inquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he never prophesieth good unto me, but always evil: the same is Micaiah the son of Imla. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

21 And he said, I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: go out, and do even so.

ledge and fear of God! Religion is a reasonable service; and in promoting reformation we must begin with instruction in the truths of God as laid down in his word. No dictates of men, but the lively oracles of God, must be produced as the ground of what we inculcate. What a powerful protection to nations is the terror of God impressed on their neighbours and enemies! No armed hosts are comparable to it. To what prodigious numbers had the Hebrews increased, had not their sin prevented it! and marvellous was the providence of God in maintaining such multitudes in so small a country as the lots of Judah and Benjamin!

CHAPTER XVIII. REFLECTIONS. — Marriages founded on pride and worldly-mindedness bring dreadful miseries along with them: and the strongest expressions of friendship from wicked men are to be suspected as methods of serving themselves. Their feasts as well as their kisses are deceitful: and even the best men are apt to be ensnared by their caresses and flattery. Often, while such men ought, and profess to consult the Lord, they do but really consult the devil and his agents. And they who are once become familiar

A GORA TEMPLE IN ATHENS, GREECE—WHERE MEGACLES WAS THE CHIEF ARCHON, WHEN AHAB AND JEHOSEPHAT REIGNED OVER ISRAEL AND JUDAH. [II. Chron., xviii:1.]—"Now Jehoshaphat had riches and honor in abundance, and joined affinity with Ahab." Jehoshaphat succeeded Asa as king of Judah in 914 B. C. Ahab succeeded Omri as king of Israel in 918 B. C. In B. C. 912 an alliance was made between Jehoshaphat and Ahab. About the same time Megacles was the chief archon of Athens, and it was during this period that the Eupatrids arose in open revolt and besieged the Acropolis in Athens. Illustrating this contemporaneous Greek history we give a picture of the Agora temple in Athens which stands just beneath the Acropolis on the side of the north wall, and is doubtless in the very neighborhood of the revolt led by Cylon. Cylon was of the highest rank and position, and a man of great wealth who suddenly appeared in arms against the Athenian government. It is interesting thus to see what was taking place in Greece at the time Ahab and Jehoshaphat ruled in Judah and in Israel.

CHAPTER XIX.

23 ¶ Then Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah came near, and smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

24 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see on that day when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyself.⁹

25 Then the king of Israel said, Take ye Micaiah, and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

26 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I return in peace.

27 And Micaiah said, If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD spoken by me. And he said, Hearken, all ye people.¹

28 ¶ So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

29 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, I will disguise myself, and will go to the battle; but put thou on thy robes.³ So the king of Israel disguised himself; and they went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, Fight ye not with small or great, save only with the king of Israel.⁴

31 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel; therefore they compassed about him to fight: but Jehoshaphat cried out,⁵ and the LORD helped him; and God moved them to depart from him.

32 For it came to pass, that, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, they turned back again from pursuing him.⁶

33 ¶ And a certain man drew a bow at a venture,⁷ and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness:⁸ therefore he said to his chariot-man, Turn thine hand, that thou mayest carry me out of the host; for I am wounded.⁹

34 And the battle increased that day: howbeit the king of Israel stayed himself up in his chariot against the Syrians until the even: and about the time of the sun going down he died.²

1 Should not this be a warning to those who profess to be Christian, yet waste their treasure and expose the lives of their armies for defence and upholding of antichristian systems? The balance of power, for sake of which this course is followed, is but another name for an idol which politicians worship, to the neglect of the honour and worship of God.—C.

1 Jehoshaphat, on his return, is reproved by Jehu. 4 He visiteth his kingdom. 5 His instructions to the judges, 8 to the priests and Levites.

AND Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem.

2 And Jehu the son of Hanani the seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the LORD? therefore is wrath upon thee from before the LORD.¹

3 Nevertheless there are good things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast prepared thine heart to seek God.

4 ¶ And Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem: and he went out again through the people, from Beer-sheba to mount Ephraim,³ and brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

5 ¶ And he set judges⁴ in the land, throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city;

6 And said to the judges, Take heed what ye do; for ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, who is with you in the judgment.⁵

7 Wherefore now let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take heed and do it: for there is no iniquity with the LORD our God, nor respect of persons, nor taking of gifts.⁶

8 ¶ Moreover, in Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat set of the Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for the judgment of the LORD, and for controversies, when they returned to Jerusalem.

9 And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do in the fear of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

10 And what cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, between blood and blood,⁷ between law and commandment, statutes and judgments,⁸ ye shall even warn them that they trespass not against the LORD, and so wrath come upon you, and upon your brethren: this do, and ye shall not trespass.

11 And, behold, Amariah the chief priest is over you in all matters of the LORD; and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the king's matters: also the Levites shall be officers before you. Deal courageously, and the LORD shall be with the good.

with the wicked, must involve themselves in great guilt and pollution; must often join in a patient hearing of the devil's preachers, and witness the injuries done to those who are faithful to Christ. But unhappy are those princes who are surrounded with flatterers and profane clergy! no plague is more ruinous. Let us therefore always encourage friends and ministers to deal faithfully with us. What astonishing power hath Satan, when God once gives up men to his awful delusions! Great multitudes, particularly of the clergy, he carries before him with great unanimity. But hard is the fate of God's faithful servants under rulers who are apostates from God, to be hated, reviled, buffeted, imprisoned, starved, or the like. Suffering for the truth is the hereditary portion of the honest servants of Christ. Yea, those godly persons who cultivate friendship with the wicked, must not wonder if their lives are sought or endangered by their means, and their flatterers lay snares for their life. But righteous are the judgments of God, and exact his fulfilment of his predictions and threatenings.—Men in vain contrive to escape when they have sinned against God.

CHAPTER XIX. [Ver. 8. Judgment of the Lord, such cases as are specified in Ex. 21. 1; xxii. xxiii. Controversies, that is, for the decision of controversies according to the principles of judgment contained in the law. (See De. 17. 8, 9, 11.) When they returned,

REFLECTIONS.—God often deals better with his people than they deserve; and brings them home in safety, when their apparently less endangered companions are sent into death and damnation? But they must expect, if entering into friendship with the haters of God, that it will expose them to manifold sufferings on earth, though not to hell. It is an honour when sufferings cannot discourage ministers or their children from faithfully reproving the greatest; and it is a great mercy for an offender to meet soon with a faithful reprover: and no less wise to receive sharp reproofs as a singular kindness; and to improve them,

2 Then there came some that told Jehoshaphat, saying, There cometh a great multitude against thee from beyond the sea² on this side Syria; and, behold, they be in Hazazon-tamar, which is En-gedi.

3 And Jehoshaphat feared, and set himself to seek the LORD, and proclaimed a fast throughout all Judah.

4 And Judah gathered themselves together, to ask help of the LORD; even out of all the cities of Judah, they came to seek the LORD.

5 ¶ And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem in the house of the LORD, before the new court,⁴

6 And said, O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou God in heaven? and rulst not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? and in thine hand is there not power and might, so that none is able to withstand thee?

7 Art not thou 'our God, *who*⁵ didst drive out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel. and gavest it to the seed of Abraham thy 'friend 'for ever?

8 And they dwelt therein, and have 'built thee a sanctuary therein for thy name, saying,

9 If, when evil cometh upon us as the sword, judgment,⁶ or pestilence or famine, we stand before this house, and in thy presence, (for thy name is in this house,) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help.

10 And now, behold, the children of Ammon and Moab, and mount Seir,⁸ whom thou wouldst⁷ not let Israel invade when they came out of the land of Egypt, but they turned from them and destroyed them not;

11 Behold I say how they reward us, to come to cast us out of thy possession, which thou hast given us to inherit.⁹

14 ¶ Then^{*} upon Jahaziel the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, "came the Spirit of the LORD in the midst of the congregation;

15 And he said, Hearken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat, Thus saith the LORD unto you, 'Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not yours, but 'God's.¹

22 ¶ And when they began to sing and to praise, the LORD 'set ambushments⁵ against the

What a blessing to a nation is it to have proper courts of judicature everywhere established, and causes decided with the strictest impartiality! And great ability and integrity are necessary to qualify judges in either church or state, as they have to answer to God for all the crimes they connive at or overlook. Yea, it is needful to keep the affairs of church and state duly disengaged the one from the other. And to render judges upright in their administration, they ought to consider God as their pattern, witness, and rewarder; and his glory as the end of their work.

as follows:—⁴ And it came to pass after this, the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them of the Ammonites. The last clause has no meaning, for 'the children of Ammon' would evidently be the same as the 'Ammonites.' In some of the ancient Hebrew MSS. there is a variation in the reading in this word. One has Edomites, which greatly resembles Ammonites, and might easily be mistaken by a copyist. This reading is corroborated by the Targum. I think it highly probable that this was the original reading. The Septuagint has Minaites, who were a people of Arabia Felix. P.]

Here it is said he made 'ships to go to Tarshish; and they made the ships at Ezion-geber.' This gives rise to a geographical difficulty. It is evident from a large number of incidental statements in Scripture that Tarshish was situated in the Mediterranean, Jonah 1. 3; 4. 2; 1s. xxiii. &c. But Ezion-geber was on the Red Sea, which had then no

In danger and distress it is best to begin with solemn fasting and supplication to God for deliverance. The dangers which drive us to him will never ruin us. While we have a merciful God to flee to we never need despair. The cries of the oppressed will enter into the ears of the righteous Judge. And the more entirely 10 So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did ¹Libnah⁸ revolt from under his hand; because ⁹he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers.

15 And thou shalt have great sickness by disease of thy bowels, until thy bowels fall out by reason of the sickness day by day.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Ahaziah succeeding, reigneth wickedly. 5 In his confederacy with Joram the son of Ahab, he is slain by Jehu. 10 Athaliah, destroying all the seed royal, save Joash, whom Jehoshabeath his aunt hid, usurpeth the kingdom.

AND the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah^a his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had slain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

2 Forty^b and two years old^c was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Athaliah, the daughter of Omri.

3 He also walked^d in the ways of the house of Ahab:¹ for his mother was his counsellor to do wickedly.

4 Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD like the house of Ahab: for they were his counsellors, after the death of his father, to his destruction.

5 ¶ He walked also after their counsel, and went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram.

6 And he returned to be healed in Jezreel, because of the wounds which were given^e him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And Azariah^f the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick.

7 And the destruction^g of Ahaziah was of God,⁴ by coming to Joram: for, when he was come, he went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, ⁵whom the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

8 And it came to pass, that, ⁶when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them.

9 And^h he sought Ahaziah: and they caught him, (for he was hidⁱ in Samaria,) and brought him to Jehu:⁶ and when they had slain him, REFLECTIONS.—What monsters are bred in the best of families; or, at least, are made so by unhal- lowed marriages! And none are such plagues to families and kingdoms as ungrateful heirs. Ambition is deaf to the cries of nature or humanity: and those whom duty and interest require to protect us, become our destroyers. But how tormented are the minds of tyrants, and how tottering those thrones which are established in blood! God can take the most un- thought-of methods to threaten or to punish his in- veterate enemies. And torment, misery, and disgrace must surely await them. Dreadful is the situation when tormenting agonies, an awakened conscience, and an opening hell, meet the sinner on his death-bed! But miserable are the happiest tyrants.—When alive they are hated; and when dead they are branded with infamy, and lost in despair!

CHAPTER XXII. REFLECTIONS.—Certain is their ruin who wilfully commit sin, and dread-kindness.—But O, how hard is it to render reformation thoroughly complete; and to wean the best of men from sins which easily beset them, even when they have before smarted for them! But it is kind in God to continue a reproof to us: and it is great gain if our providential losses turn us from the path of evil.

CHAPTER XXI. [Ver. 16. The Arabians here joined with the Philistines were probably the nomad tribes which fed their flocks on the desert of Tih, between Palestine and the mountains of Sinai, and eastward as far as the Arabah. The Ethiopians, or Cush- ites, as it is in the Hebrew, dwelt partly in Africa, south of Egypt, and partly in southern Arabia. The latter are here referred to. P.]

Ver. 17. [Such incursions, for plunder of cattle and goods, and carrying off slaves, are, alas! still common in Africa, and still, by implication, patronized by na- tions called Christian! Lord, what is man! Arise, arise, plead thine own cause! Ps. 74. 22. C.]

we are taken off from every self-dependence in the view of our wants and wretchedness, we are the more sure to find help in the time of need. If faith and hope look upward, the everlasting arms will be underneath us. In our cries to God for deliverance, let us there- fore plead his tender promises to us, the grants he has made us, his ability to protect and deliver us; and the ingratitude, injustice, and violence of our enemies: for readily God bestows his answers of peace to his people: and happy are they who, renouncing their un- believing fears, go forth, assured by faith that it shall be to them as he hath spoken. Unshaken faith is a certain cause of victory: and even songs of praise are excellent weapons in our spiritual warfare. God can easily deliver his people, and employ their strongly confederated enemies to destroy one another: yea, he can turn his people's distress into means of their en- richment, honour, safety, and peace. And it becomes us, in such noted deliverances, to join in solemn thanks- giving, and to set up some lasting memorials of his they buried him;⁷ Because (said they) he is the son of Jehoshaphat, "who sought the LORD with all his heart. So the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom.

10 ¶ But^o when Athaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed-royal of the house of Judah.

11 But Jehoshabeath, the daughter of the king,⁸ took^r Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, and put him and his nurse in a "bed-chamber.⁹ So Jehoshabeath, the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of "Jehoiada the priest, (for she was the sister of Ahaziah,) hid him from Athaliah, so that she slew him not.

12 And he was with them "hid in the house of God six years: and Athaliah reigned over the land.

CHAPTER XXIII.

¹ Jehoiada, having taken measures for his security, maketh Joash king. ¹² Athaliah is slain. ¹⁶ Jehoiada restoreth the worship of God.

AND in^o the seventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jeroham, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into "covenant with him.

2 And they "went about in Judah, and gathered the Levites¹ out of all the cities of Judah, and the chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

3 And all the congregation² made^a a covenant with the king in the house of God: and he said unto them, Behold, the king's son shall reign, as the LORD hath "said of the sons of David.

4 This ^{is} the thing that ye shall do: A third^r part of you entering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites,³ shall be porters of the doors;

5 And a third part shall be at the king's house;⁴ and a third part at the "gate of the foundation:⁵ and all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD.

11 The Levites had their turns or courses in the service of the temple; so that a certain number went out every Sabbath, to make room for another course. Jehoiada, having gained over the centurions and guards, or at least some of them, to his party, and having all the Levites at his command, took occasion at that time when the courses were to be changed, at daybreak, to arm both those that were coming out and those who were coming in; and thus effected the revolution he had so wisely planned.—I.

22 Professor Robinson has an investigation into the probable position of the ancient gates of Jerusalem in his Biblical Researches in Palestine, vol. i. p. 472. The notices respecting most of them, he thinks, are too indefinite to enable us to determine anything more than that some of them probably did not belong to the external city wall. Thus the horse-gate, says he, evidently lay between the temple and the royal palace, and in proof of this he refers to the present passage.—I.

round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and whosoever else cometh into the house, he shall be put to death: but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out.

8 So the Levites, and all Judah, did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men "that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not "the courses.⁷

9 Moreover, Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds spears, and bucklers, and shields, that had been king David's, which were in the house of God.⁸

10 And he set all the people, "every man having his weapon in his hand, from the right side⁹ of the temple¹ to the left side of the temple, along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

11 Then they "brought out the king's son, and put upon him the crown, and "gave him the testimony,² and made him king: and Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and said, "God save the king.

12 ¶ Now, "when Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, she came to the people into the house of the LORD:

13 And she looked, and, behold, the king stood at "his pillar³ at the entering in, and the princes and the trumpets by the king: and all the people of the land rejoiced, "and sounded with trumpets; also the singers with instruments of music, and such as taught to sing praise. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, "Treason, treason!

14 Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth of the ranges;⁴ and "whoso followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, "Slay her not in the house of the LORD.

15 So they laid hands on her; and when she was come to the entering of the horse-gate⁵ by the king's house, they slew "her there.⁶

16 ¶ And Jehoiada "made a covenant between him, and between all the people, and between the king, that they should be the LORD's people.

17 Then all the people went to the house of ful the consequences of unhallowed marriages with the ungodly. Behold how the woman, for whose sake Jehoshaphat had cultivated friendship with Ahab, reduces his glorious kingdom and numerous family, nay, his blessed reformation, to the brink of ruin! She had doubtless advised her husband to murder his brethren and princes, and to hurry himself through scenes of misery into endless woe. Now she counsels her son to do wickedly. Advised by her, he cultivates intimacy with Jehoram her brother, and involves himself and relations in his ruin. Behold the infuriated monster murdering princes, and imbruing her hands in the blood of her innocent, her orphan babes! And to the reproach of Judah, the savage murderer, the vile idolater, is permitted to fill the sacred throne without so much as a shadow of title! But, meanwhile, behold how God, for his promise' sake, preserves in his house a young and helpless descendant of David to wear the crown, and even usher in the Messiah in his time! Vain is every attempt of earth and hell to defeat the word of truth; not one jot or tittle of it shall ever fail.

CHAPTER XXIII. REFLECTIONS. — God will not suffer the fulfilment of his promise to be too long interrupted. And it is a great mercy in critical times to have one of great prudence, piety, fidelity, courage, and influence to be principal director. How astonishing is it to see religion and liberty all at once recovered from the wrecks of ruin. But is there anything too hard for the Lord? How mad for their opposers to rush headlong into immediate destruction! But hopeful is the view when idols are destroyed, idolaters ashamed, the true worship of God regularly established, and his worshippers first giving themselves to the Lord, and afterwards to magistrates and ministers, and to one another, by the will of God!

Baal, and brake it down, and brake his altars and his images in pieces, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars.

18 Also Jehoiada appointed the offices of the house of the LORD by the hand of the priests the Levites, whom David had distributed in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt-offerings of the LORD, as it is written in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, as it was ordained by David.⁷

19 And he set the porters at the gates of the house of the LORD, that none which was unclean in any thing should enter in.⁸

20 And he took the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king⁹ from the house of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom.

21 And all the people of the land rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

CHAPTER XXIV.

¹ Joash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada. ⁴ He giveth order for the repair of the temple. ¹⁵ Jehoiada's death and honourable burial. ¹⁷ Joash, falling to idolatry, slayeth Zechariah the son of Jehoiada. ²³ Joash is spoiled by the Syrians, and slain by Zabad and Jehoazabad. ²⁷ Amaziah succeedeth him.

JOASH was^a seven years old when he began to reign; and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And Joash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all the days of Jehoiada the priest.

3 And Jehoiada took for him¹ two^d wives; and he begat sons and daughters.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Joash was minded to repair the house of the LORD.

5 And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter: howbeit the Levites hastened it not.²

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, Why hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in, out of Judah, and out of Jerusalem, the collection,³ according to the commandment of Moses the servant of the LORD, and of the congregation of Israel, for the tabernacle of witness?

7 For the sons of Athaliah,⁴ that wicked woman, had broken up the house of God; and also all the dedicated things of the house of the LORD did they bestow upon Baalim.

8 And at the king's commandment they made a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the LORD.⁵

9 And they made a proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the LORD the collection that Moses the servant of God laid upon Israel in the wilderness.

10 And all the princes and all the people rejoiced,⁶ and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end.

11 Now it came to pass, that at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance.

12 And the king and Jehoiada gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and hired masons and carpenters to repair the house of the LORD, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the LORD.

13 So the workmen wrought, and the work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God in his state, and strengthened it.⁷

14 And when they had finished it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made vessels for the house of the LORD, even vessels to minister, and to offer withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver: and they offered⁸ burnt-offerings in the house of the LORD continually all the days of Jehoiada.

15 ¶ But Jehoiada waxed old, and was full of days when he died; an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died.⁹

16 And they buried him in the city of David among the kings, because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.²

17 ¶ Now, after the death of Jehoiada came the princes of Judah, and made obeisance to the king:³ then the king hearkened unto them.

TOMBS OF ZECHARIAH AND ST. JAMES. [II. Chron., xxiv:20, 21.]—"And the Spirit of God came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the Lord, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the Lord. He hath also forsaken you. And they conspired against him and stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the Lord." According to the traditions of the Jews, this tomb stands for Zechariah who was stoned in the reign of Joash. It is a cubical, monolithic structure excavated from the natural rock. Christians look upon the tomb as standing for the Zacharias spoken of by our Lord in Saint Matthew, xxiii:35. The tomb of Saint James is for the apostle by that name who was hurled to death in the valley below the tomb. This tomb is also an excavated chamber in the side of the cliff, having in front a porch supported by two columns and two half columns. The porch is eighteen feet wide by nine feet deep, and is approached by a door and staircase on the north side.

18 And they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served groves and idols: and wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and they testified against them: but they would not give ear.

20 And the Spirit of God came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the LORD, he hath also forsaken you.

21 And they conspired against him, and stoned him with stones, at the commandment of the king, in the court of the house of the LORD.

22 Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son: and when he died, he said, The LORD look upon it, and require it.

23 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of the year, that the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of Damascus.

24 For the army of the Syrians came with a small company of men, and the LORD delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers: so they executed judgment against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in great diseases,) his own servants conspired against him for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died: and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him not in the sepulchres of the kings.

26 And these are they that conspired against him, Zabab the son of Shimeath an Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of Shimrith a Moabitess.

27 ¶ Now concerning his sons, and the great-

15 1 What a striking and fearful example is this of divine judgment upon a ruler and people on account of royal and national iniquity! The king neglected the duty which, as king, he owed to God; the people, left without restraint, gave way to idolatrous practices. The whole land thus became corrupt and guilty. Swift judgment followed. The army was overthrown in battle; the country was desolated; the capital was spoiled; and at length the weak and guilty monarch himself was murdered by his own servants.—C.

ness of the burdens laid upon him, and the repairing of the house of God, behold, they are written in the story of the book of the kings: and Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Amaziah beginneth to reign well. 3 He executeth justice on the murderers of his father. 5 Having hired an army of Israelites against the Edomites, at the word of a prophet he loseth an hundred talents, and dismisseth them. 11 He overthroweth the Edomites. 10, 13 The Israelites, discontented with their dismission, spoil as they return home. 14 Amaziah, proud of his victory, scorneth the gods of Edom, and despiseth the admonitions of the prophet. 17 He provoketh Joash to his overthrow. 25 His reign. 27 He is slain by a conspiracy at Lachish.

AMAZIAH was^a twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, but not with a perfect heart.

3 ¶ Now it came to pass, when the kingdom was established to him,² that he slew his servants that had killed the king his father:

4 But he slew not their children, but did as it is written in the law in the book of Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

5 ¶ Moreover, Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers, throughout all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbered them from twenty years old and above, and found them three hundred thousand³ choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield.

6 He hired also an hundred thousand mighty men of valour out of Israel for an hundred talents⁴ of silver.⁵

7 But there came a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee: for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim.

8 But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong for the battle;⁶ God shall make thee fall before the enemy: for God hath power to help, and to cast down.

9 And Amaziah said to the man of God, when it is fashionable, who are glad of an opportunity to throw off the restraint. What an unspeakable loss to a church or nation is the death of a pious or faithful counsellor! and what a plague are complaisant and wicked flatterers! But in times of great degeneracy, God never wants some faithful witnesses, that they who hate to be reformed may be left without excuse: and great zeal for God is then needful, to oppose the torrent of ungodliness, and to render ministers duly faithful to souls: for ingratitude, injustice, and barbarity generally attend hatred of reproof and worshipping of idols. And God's prophets, if faithful, are sure to be marked with suffering or death: but quickly shall God resent the injuries done to them. Quickly, and in manifold forms, his judgment shall overtake the obstinate transgressors: and when he forsakes men they become an easy prey to every invader. Often he gives men blood to drink who have imbrued their hands in the blood of his saints: while his justice pursues them into everlasting woe. And scarcely doth anything more fearfully spread destruction than marriages with wicked women.

CHAPTER XXV. REFLECTIONS. — What multitudes are mere dissemblers in their religious appearance! For some carnal end they apply their tongue and hand to religion, while their heart hates it. But short-lived are the triumphs of murderers, particularly those of sovereigns. And strict equity ought to take place in the punishment of criminals, that the innocent may not be involved with the guilty. How fearfully sin diminishes and weakens nations! And rash undertakings, or alliances in war, make room for bitter repentance. Multitudes profit nothing when God is our enemy; and connection with his enemies but hastens the curse on our enterprises. But the loss of money goes very near the heart of worldlings, while they who trust in God find themselves gainers. How outrageous is the fury and cruel the tender mercies of the wicked. Such as are really unconcerned about piety feel their pride hurt when treated as profane and wicked: and the proud, when balked of their expected honours and booty, are greatly enraged. The conquests made by nations are often really to their own hurt: and those whom we imitated in wickedness become the instruments of our punishment. But base is the cruelty, and sottish the folly, to dash idolaters to pieces, and preserve, nay, worship, the idols which could not protect their votaries from such barbarous severity. Wicked men heartily hate a faithful reproof: and much sooner will they part with large sums of money than with the most useless and despicable idol! But near and certain is their destruction whom God has left off to reprove, and in whom pride swells to the brim. They that would not hearken to God's servants will soon hearken to their own wicked counsellors and raging lusts, which hasten their temporal, nay, eternal destruction. And however wicked the instruments may be, the judgments are always righteous. They who go forth hastily to strive will

But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army⁷ of Israel? And the man of God answered, The LORD is able^m to give thee much more than this.

10 Then Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go home⁸ again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled⁹ against Judah, and they returned home in great anger.

11 ¶ And Amaziah strengthened himself,¹ and led forth his people, and went to the valley of Salt, and smote of the children of Seir ten thousand.²

12 And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock, that they all were broken in pieces.³

13 ¶ But the soldiers of the army⁴ which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria even unto Beth-horon, and smote three thousand of them,⁵ and took much spoil.⁶

14 ¶ Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burnt incense unto them.

15 Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbear; why shouldst thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbore, and said, I know that God hath determined⁷ to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

17 ¶ Then Amaziah king of Judah took advice,⁸ and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us see one another in the face.⁹

18 And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.¹

5 And he sought God in the days of Zechariah, who had understanding in the visions of God: and as long as he sought the LORD, God made him to prosper.³

6 And he went forth and warred against the Philistines, and brake down the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities about Ashdod, and among the Philistines.

7 And God helped him against the Philistines, and against the Arabians that dwell in Gur-baal, and the Mehunims.

8 And the Ammonites gave gifts to Uzziah: and his name spread abroad even to the entering in of Egypt; for he strengthened himself exceedingly.

9 ¶ Moreover, Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the corner-gate, and at the valley-gate, and at the turning of the wall, and fortified them.

10 Also he built towers in the desert,⁵ and digged⁶ many wells: for he had much cattle, both in the low country and in the plains;⁸ husbandmen also, and vine-dressers in the mountains, and in Carmel:⁷ for he loved husbandry.⁸

11 ¶ Moreover, Uzziah had an host of fighting men, that went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account, by the hand of Jeiel the scribe, and Maaseiah the ruler, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains.

12 The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valour were two thousand and six hundred.

13 And under their hand was an army, three hundred thousand, and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy.

14 And Uzziah prepared for them, throughout all the host, shields, and spears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and slings to cast stones.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by cunning men, to be on the towers, and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal:⁹ and his name spread¹ abroad; for he was marvellously helped, till he was strong.

8 It is curious and instructive to observe how Uzziah's taste for husbandry led to most of his warlike arrangements, for which he seems to have had equal capacity. It is thus that Providence ever counteracts or modifies one propensity by another. His taste for war would have produced a desert; his taste for husbandry modifies his taste for war, produces fortified towns, fruitful fields, and commercial ports.—C.

49 These engines are known by the names of ballistæ for shooting stones, and catalpæ for arrows and javelins, though these names and distinctive uses are frequently confounded. The principles were those of the cross-bow, either of wood or elastic steel, the recoil of twisted ropes tightened by the action of levers; or the sling (not the ordinary sling), which seems to have been a species of gigantic bow, made fast at one end, so that the other being violently drawn downward, and loaded with stones, might, by its sudden recoil, project them against an enemy to a distance proportioned to its length and elastic power.

17 On examining any treatise on medicine the reader must be struck with the frequency with which disease is attributed to mental passions, and not to bodily causes. Fear produces many disorders, not unfrequently death. The same is the case with anger, envy, and the gentler feelings of inordinate affection, and visible causes there may undoubtedly be; but the real cause, and which truth discovers to faith, is the judgment of God either for punishment, ver. 20; or correction, He. 12:6; or prevention of sin, 1 Co. 12:7; or growth in grace, He. 12:11.—C.

16 ¶ But when he was strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction:² for he transgressed against the LORD his God, and went into the temple of the LORD, to burn incense upon the altar of incense.³

17 And Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the LORD, that were valiant men;

18 And they withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the LORD, but to the priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be for thine honour from the LORD God.

19 Then Uzziah was wroth, and had a censer in his hand to burn incense; and, while he was wroth with the priests, the leprosy even rose up in his forehead⁵ before the priests in the house of the LORD, from beside the incense-altar.

20 And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous⁶ in his forehead, and they thrust him out from thence; yea, himself hasted also to go out, because the LORD had smitten him.

21 And Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house, being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the LORD: and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land.

22 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, write.

23 So Uzziah slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they said, He is a leper: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

C.—The real tombs of the kings must have been in the city of David, i.e. on Mount Zion; and could not therefore be those above mentioned. Tradition points out to this day the tomb of David on the summit of Zion, just outside the modern Zion Gate of Jerusalem. A large building, containing a mosque and a Christian church, stands on the spot, but the sepulchres are beneath, hewn in the rock. The fanaticism of the Mohammedans has hitherto prevented a full examination of them. They may contain some important relics. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—A godly, faithful, and prudent instructor is a great advantage to a youthful king: and a noted regard to the laws and worship of God lays an excellent foundation for prosperity: for God honours those that honour him: and as long as we cleave to him, he will be our assistant. And what extensive capacities God gives some men, that they can take care of a multitude of things at once? But how bewitching is pride! it can decoy men to their ruin in a thousand forms. And it is difficult to be prosperous and yet be humble. But seldom do men gratify their pride without bringing themselves to deserved shame. The offices and ordinances of God's church are sacred and appropriate: it is at our highest peril if we interfere with them without his call. And when God's ministers magnify their office, and boldly withstand the sinful attempts of the greatest monarchs, it is honourable and becoming. But how impatient are the proud of faithful reproof or zealous opposition! The most wise and just rebuke exasperates the wilful. And they who will not submit to admonition rush on their own ruin. God marks them with disgraceful punishments, answerable to their crimes. And when we feel his displeasure, it is madness to persist. Humiliation is our only door of escape. And sometimes when sins are pardoned of God, they leave an indelible stain among men.

CHAPTER XXVII. REFLECTIONS.—It is father Uzziah did: howbeit he entered not into the temple of the LORD.¹ And the people did yet corruptly.

3 ¶ He built the high gate of the house of the LORD, and on the wall of 'Ophel² he built much.³

4 Moreover, ⁴he built cities in the mountains of Judah, and in the forests he built castles and towers.

5 ¶ He fought also with the 'king of the Ammonites, and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year an hundred talents of silver,⁴ and ten thousand measures⁵ of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. So much⁶ did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second year and the third.

6 So Jotham became mighty, because ⁷he prepared⁷ his ways before the LORD his God.

7 ¶ Now the 'rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways,⁸ lo, they are written in the book of the Kings of Israel and Judah.

8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

9 ¶ And ⁹Jotham slept with his fathers; and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Ahaz reigning very wickedly is greatly afflicted by the Syrians. 8 Judah being captivated by the Israelites is sent home by the counsel of Oded the prophet. 16 Ahaz sending for aid to Assyria is not helped thereby. 22 In his 'reign he becometh still more idolatrous. 26 He dying, Hezekiah succeedeth him.

AHAZ was ¹twenty years old¹ when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD, like David his father:²

2 For he ²walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also molten images for Baalim.

3 Moreover he ³burnt incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom, and burnt his children in the fire,³ after the abominations of the heathen whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

4 He ⁴sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

happy when children imitate their parents' goodness, and carefully avoid their faults. But hard is the task to bring an obdurate people off from their corrupt customs. And often magistrates and ministers, who are tender and circumspect in their own lives, have not courage and zeal enough for doing what they might in the reformation of others. A fixed steadfastness in the truth is the most necessary, and at the same time the most excellent, mean for the resistance of evil and performance of good. What reward hath godliness?—it hath the promises of this life and that which is to come. But, alas! the best magistrates and ministers are often quickly removed, and that in order to make way for monsters to fill their place.

CHAPTER XXVIII. [Ver. 21. We read in the parallel passage, 2 Ki. 10, 9, that the King of Assyria hearkened unto⁹ Ahaz. How is that statement reconciled with this verse? In this way: the assistance rendered to Ahaz was of no real service, though he hearkened to him in so far as Syria was concerned. The king of Assyria did not aid him against the Philistines, did not recover for him the captured cities of Judah, did not defend him from the invasions of the Edomites; while, at the same time, the treasures of the kingdom were exhausted by the bribes to the rapacious eastern monarch. ?]

REFLECTIONS.—How amazing is the strength of men's inward corruption, that can so trample upon a pure education and pattern! But fearful are the punishments which remain in store for such enormous transgressors: and miserable are the nations who have such monsters of impiety for their sovereigns. God makes the nations around concur to punish the apostasy

5 Wherefore the LORD ⁵'his God⁴ delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to Damascus:⁵ and he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

6 For ⁶Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah an hundred and twenty thousand in one day,⁶ which were all valiant men;⁷ because⁷ they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was next to the king.⁸

8 ¶ And the children of Israel ⁸'carried away captive of their brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and ⁹'he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, ¹⁰'because the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that reacheth 'up unto heaven.

10 And now ye purpose to keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for ¹¹'bondmen and bond-women unto you: but are there not ¹²'with you, even with you, sins against the LORD your God?

11 Now hear me therefore, and ¹³'deliver the captives⁹ again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: ¹⁴'for the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you.

12 Then certain of the ¹⁵'heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, ¹⁶'stood up against them that came from the war,

13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the LORD already, ye intend ¹⁷'to add more to our sins and to our trespass; for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.¹

of his professing people. Often the very persons or nations whom we have made our pattern in wickedness, are made the instruments of our punishment. And dreadfully are the mightiest numbered to the slaughter when the Lord fighteth against them. But how tender his compassion towards his offending people, even while he smites them! He observes and is provoked with those who inhumanly murder or abuse them, especially if they be brethren, or act from principles of hatred or revenge. And he constantly seeks by his word and spirit to render their most outrageous enemies kind and generous to them. They who are made sensible of their own sins will sympathize with their brethren's sufferings. It is better to take warning late than never: and the victory of self-denial is more glorious than the necks of vanquished enemies. It is the greatest honour to the mighty to be merciful. But

COFFEE GARDEN, DUMMAR, DAMASCUS—TO WHOSE GODS AHAZ, THE KING OF JUDAH, SACRIFICED, AND BROUGHT RUIN TO HIS HOME AND PEOPLE. [II. Chronicles, xxviii:23.]—"For he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him." Ahaz was the son of Jothan and the twelfth king of Judah. He reigned sixteen years, from B. C. 726 to B. C. 742. He introduced new sanctuaries and strange altars in Jerusalem, and burned incense in the temple courts to the heavenly bodies. He erected a new altar after the pattern of one

he had seen in Damascus. He is said to have introduced the sun dial, which is about the only useful thing he contributed to his time. We give a picture above of a coffee garden in one of the suburbs of Damascus. This city was, perhaps, in the days of Ahaz, very much what it is to-day. It owes its existence to the Abana river, and has always been noted for its beautiful gardens filled with flowering shrubs. Damascus has always been a wicked city. People here have lived for pleasure, and the gods of Damascus to which Ahaz sacrificed were the ruin of him and of his people.

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which were expressed by name rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil clothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and gave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, the city of palm-trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.¹

16 ¶ At that time did king Ahaz send unto the kings of Assyria to help him.

17 For again the Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away captives.²

18 The Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken Beth-shemesh, and Ajalon, and Gederoth, and Shchocho with the villages thereof, and Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof; and they dwelt there.

19 For the LORD brought Judah low, because of Ahaz king of Israel; for he made Judah naked,³ and transgressed sore against the LORD.

20 And Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria came unto him, and distressed him, but strengthened him not.⁴

21 For Ahaz took away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

22 ¶ And in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: this is that king Ahaz.

23 For he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him;⁵ and he said, Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that they may help me: but they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.⁶

24 And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and shut up the doors of the house of the LORD, and he made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places to burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

26 ¶ Now the rest of his acts, and of all his ways, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the Kings of Judah and Israel.

27 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jerusalem; but they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel;⁸ and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 Hezekiah's good reign. 3 He restoreth religion. 5 He exhorteth the Levites to cleanse the house of God. 12 They sanctify themselves, and cleanse the house of God. 20 Hezekiah offereth solemn sacrifices, wherein the Levites were more forward than the priests.

HEZEKIAH began^a to reign when he was five and twenty years old;¹ and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Abijah, the daughter of Zechariah.²

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father had done.

3 ¶ He, in the first year of his reign,³ in the first month, opened the doors of the house of the LORD, and repaired them.⁴

4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the east street,

5 And said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites; Sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place.⁵

6 For your fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and have forsaken him; and have turned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and turned their backs.⁶

7 Also they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense nor offered burnt-offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

8 Wherefore the wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to trouble, to astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes.

9 For, lo, your fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons, and our daughters, and our wives, are in captivity for this.⁷

10 Now it is in mine heart to make a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.

11 My sons,⁸ be not now negligent: for the LORD hath chosen you to stand before him, when God lays aside one instrument of correction, he often takes another in his hand; and turns the helps which we sinfully secure into ruinous plagues. When we forsake God, we must needs be disappointed in every other confidence. And desperately hardened must men be when both mercies and judgments render them worse and worse. Happy is that nation where their tyrannical monsters of wickedness are quickly cut off by death, to make way for better princes.

CHAPTER XXIX. REFLECTIONS. — What strange alterations the change of a sovereign may produce in a nation! And great is the mercy when God gives good men power after they have long been unwilling spectators of wickedness. It is highly honourable when those in high stations give to the Lord the first beginnings of their power and influence. And when God gives opportunity, with earnestness, humble grief, and holy zeal, should men reform their neglects and turn to the Lord. Corrupters of religion often leave the church and ordinances of God in the greatest confusion. And it is necessary to ponder the punishments of former sins in order to render us hearty and active in our reformation. And much may be done in a short time if all concerned be diligent. Honourable are those ministers whom God stirs up to be leaders in the work of reformation, to provoke their brethren to jealousy: and glorious is the sight when they cheerfully work to one another's hands in reforming the church; —when kings, princes, priests, and people vie with one another in improving Jesus Christ as the great propitiation for sins, and in serious repentance of former sins, and returning to the observance of all God's ordinances, grudging neither cost nor care! They will then find their work much more easy than they expected. But, alas! that priests, who ought to be to serve him, and that ye should minister unto him, and burn⁹ incense.¹

12 ¶ Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the ²Kohathites: and of the sons of Merari; Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Jehalelel: and of the Gershonites; Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah:

13 And of the sons of ³Elizaphan; Shimri, and Jeiel: and ⁴of the sons of Asaph; Zechariah, and Mattaniah:

14 And of the sons of Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: and of the sons of Jeduthun; Shemaiah, and Uzziel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, ⁵by the words of the LORD, to cleanse the house of the LORD.

16 And the priests went into the ⁶inner part of the house of the LORD, to cleanse ⁷it, and brought out all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took ⁸it, to carry ⁹it out abroad ¹⁰into the brook Kidron.

17 Now they began on the first ¹¹day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to the ¹²porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.¹³

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and the ¹⁴altar of burnt-offering, with all the vessels thereof, and the show-bread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover, ¹⁵all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away¹⁶ in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they ¹⁷are before the altar of the LORD.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king ¹⁸rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD.

21 And they brought ¹⁹seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for a sin-offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah:²⁰ and he commanded the priests, the sons of Aaron, to offer ²¹them on the altar of the LORD.

22 So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and ²²sprinkled ²³it on aders, are often the most unqualified and careless; and need so repeatedly to be stirred up to that which is peculiarly their work! But they who love God's altar will delight to support the service; and past neglects will quicken them to more abundant diligence.

CHAPTER XXX. [Ver. 1. It appears to me from the scope of the passage, that Ephraim and Manasse are here mentioned not in their individual capacity, but as the representatives of the whole northern kingdom, just as Judah was the representative of the southern kingdom. Instead of addressing letters to each separate tribe, Hezekiah wrote to the chiefs of the two kingdoms. But in addition to this formal invitation, his messengers were instructed to go through all the cities of the land, and to address urgent verbal invitations to the whole people. 7.]

REFLECTIONS.—God's ordinances ought not to be neglected on account of a mere circumstance. It is best to engage people to duty when they are in a proper temper. And we ought to stir up all whom we can to the worship and service of God, and that by the most engaging motives; representing to them the mercies and judgments of God, and his promises and threatenings

33 And the ²consecrated things were six hundred oxen, and three thousand sheep.

34 But the ¹priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt-offerings: wherefore their ²brethren the Levites did help them,⁶ till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves: for the Levites were more upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.

35 And also the burnt-offerings were in abundance, with the ¹fat of the peace-offerings, and the ²drink-offerings for every burnt-offering. So the service of the house of the LORD was set in order.

36 And Hezekiah ¹rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people: for the thing was done suddenly.⁷

CHAPTER XXX.

¹ Hezekiah proclaimeth a solemn passover on the second month for Judah and Israel. ¹³ The assembly, having destroyed the altars of idolatry in Jerusalem, keep the feast fourteen days. ²⁷ The priests and Levites bless the people.

AND Hezekiah sent to all ¹Israel and Judah, and wrote letters also to ²Ephraim and Manasseh,¹ that they should come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, to ³keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

2 For the king had ⁴taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover ⁵in the second month.²

3 For they could not keep it at ⁶that time, because the priests ⁷had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing pleased the king³ and all the congregation.

5 So they established a decree to make proclamation ⁸throughout all Israel, from Beersheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done ⁹it of a long time in such sort as it was written.

6 So the posts⁴ went with the letters from⁵ the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you that are escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.⁶

7 And be not ye like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the LORD God of their fathers, who therefore gave them up to desolation,⁷ as ye see.

8 Now be ye not stiff-necked,¹ as your fathers were, but ²yield yourselves unto the LORD, and enter into his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever; and serve the LORD your God,

Three reasons seem to have produced this special notice of the invitation to Ephraim, of which Manasseh was a dependency, as Benjamin was of Judah. (1) After Judah Ephraim was the greatest tribe. (2) It seems to have been the most hopelessly addicted to idolatry, and therefore its omission might have been expected. Ho. 4, 17; 13, 1. (3) The king, by his pious and energetic letter, seeks to avail himself of the efforts of Hosea for the reformation and salvation of his country. This special invitation to Ephraim seems to have arisen from the partial reformation produced by the preaching of Hosea, ch. 13, 12; 14, 8, in which Manasseh, a dependency of Ephraim, as Benjamin was of Judah, had most probably participated. See Ps. 80, 2.—C.

that the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you.

9 For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.

10 So the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh even unto Zebulun: but they ¹laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.

11 Nevertheless ²divers of Asher, and Manasseh, and of Zebulun, humbled ³themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

12 Also in Judah the ⁴hand of God was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king and of the princes, by the word of the LORD.¹

13 ²And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread ³in the second month, a very great congregation.

14 And they arose, and took away the ⁴altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the ⁵priests and the Levites were ashamed,² and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt-offerings into the house of the LORD.

16 And they stood in their place³ after their manner, ⁴according to the law of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites.

17 For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified: therefore ⁵the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD.⁴

18 For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, ⁶had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written: but Hezekiah ⁷prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one

19 That ⁸prepareth his heart to seek God, the LORD God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the ⁹'purification of the sanctuary.'⁵

20 And the LORD hearkened to Hezekiah, and ¹⁰healed the people.

21 And the children of Israel that were present⁶ at Jerusalem kept ¹¹the feast of unleavened bread seven days ¹²with great gladness:

hinder the people in the service of God! But pleasant is the work when the worshippers of God have such delight in his service that they grudge neither cost nor time for it, and can hardly bear its conclusion. And God in mercy will provide his people with useful ministers, when many, who ought to be such, are scandalously negligent. He is a God of infinite grace; ready to accept our sincere confessions of our sins; hear our prayers, and forgive our transgressions. 13 and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with loud instruments⁷ unto the LORD.

22 And Hezekiah spake 'comfortably unto all the Levites that taught the 'good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace-offerings, and making⁸ confession to the LORD God of their fathers.

23 And the whole assembly took counsel to^m keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness.⁸

24 For Hezekiah king of Judah 'did give to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and ten thousand sheep: and 'a great number of priests sanctified themselves.

25 And all the congregation of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the strangers^p that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced.⁹

26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem: for since the 'time of Solomon, the son of David king of Israel, *there was not the like in Jerusalem.*¹

27 ¶ Then the 'priests the Levites arose and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to 'his holy dwelling-place, even unto heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The people's zeal in destroying idolatry. 2 Hezekiah ordereth the courses of the priests and Levites, and provideth for their work and maintenance. 3 The people's forwardness in bringing in first-fruits and tithes. 11 Hezekiah appointeth officers to dispose of those offerings. 20 The sincerity of Hezekiah.

NOW when all this was finished, all Israel that were present¹ went out to the cities of Judah, and brake the images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasseh, until they had utterly destroyed² them all.³ Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

2 ¶ And Hezekiah appointed the courses of the priests, and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests and Levites for burnt-offerings and for peace-offerings, to minister, and to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the LORD.⁴

3 He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt-offerings, to wit, for the morning and evening burnt-offerings, and the burnt-offerings for the sabbaths, and for the new-moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the law of the LORD.⁵

4 Moreover he commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give 'the portion of the priests and the Levites, that 'they might be encouraged in the law of the LORD.⁶

5 ¶ And as soon as the commandment came abroad,⁷ the children of Israel 'brought in abundance⁸ the first-fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey,⁹ and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought them in abundantly.

6 And concerning the children of Israel and Judah, that dwelt in the cities of Judah, they also brought in the tithe of oxen and sheep, and the 'tithe of holy things, which were consecrated unto the LORD their God, and laid them^h by heaps.

7 In the 'thirdⁱ month they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh² month.³

8 And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they 'blessed the LORD, and his people Israel.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

10 And^l Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him, and said, 'Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty:⁴ for the LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.⁵

11 ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare chambers⁶ in the house of the LORD; and they prepared them, 12 And brought in the offerings, and the tithes, and the dedicated things, faithfully: 'over which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next.

13 And Jehiel, and Azaziah, and Nahath, and Asahel, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Ismachiah, and Mahath, and Benaiah, were overseers, under the hand⁷ of Cononiah, and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and Azariah the ruler of the house of God.

14 And Kore the son of Innah the Levite, 'the porter toward the east, was over the free-will-offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the LORD, and the 'most holy things.

15 And next him⁸ were Eden, and Miniamin, and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in the 'cities of the priests, in their set office,⁹ to give to their brethren by courses, as well to the great as to the small;

16 Besides their genealogy of males, from three years old and upward,¹ even unto every one that entereth into the house of the LORD, we are but sincerely desirous to honour him he will, through the blood of his Son, readily pardon our manifold infirmities. Yea, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; who presents our persons and our services, and renders all acceptable in his sight.

CHAPTER XXXI. REFLECTIONS.—It is comfortable to go home from solemn work with the blessing of God upon us, and our heart inflamed with his daily portion² for their service in their charges, according to their courses;³

17 Both to the genealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites from twenty years old and upward, in their charges by their courses;

18 And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their set office they sanctified themselves in holiness.⁴

19 Also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were in the fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were expressed by name, to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.

20 ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and wrought that which was good, and right, and truth, before the LORD his God.

21 And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart,⁵ and prospered.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Sennacherib invading Judah, Hezekiah fortifieth himself, and encourageth the people. 9 Against the blasphemies of Sennacherib, by message and letters, Hezekiah and Isaiah pray. 21 An angel destroyeth the host of the Assyrians, to the glory of Hezekiah. 24 Hezekiah praying in his sickness, God giveth him a sign of recovery. 25 He waxing proud is humbled by God. 27 His riches and works. 31 His error in relation to the Babylonish ambassadors. 32 He dying, Manasseh succeedeth him.

AFTER these things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities,¹ and thought to win them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city; and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land,³ saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?

5 Also he strengthened himself, and built up all the wall that was broken, and raised it up to the towers, and another wall without, and repaired Millo in the city of David, and made darts and shields in abundance.

holy zeal against everything sinful. And well bestowed is that labour or expense which we lay out in abolishing idolatry or restoring the true worship of God. How comely is it when great men, by their generous present, encourage others to bestow their respective dues upon the service and servants of God! The gospel ministry might be easily and comfortably maintained did every one concerned minister according to his ability. And with great care ought sacred revenues to be preserved and managed, that none of Jesus' servants, or their families, may lack what is necessary:

for it is scandalous that some should riot in luxury, while their brethren, more laborious and faithful, should be almost starved for want. But with great confidence may we expect that God will honour and succeed our religious endeavours when we engage in them with our whole heart.

6 And he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him in the street of the gate of the city, and spake comfortably to them,⁴ saying,

7 Be strong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him: for there be more with us than with him.⁵

8 With him is an arm of flesh; but with us is the LORD our God to help us, and to fight our battles. And the people rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

9 ¶ After this did Sennacherib king of Assyria send his servants⁷ to Jerusalem,⁸ (but he himself laid siege against Lachish, and all his power⁹ with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying,

10 Thus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide in the siege in Jerusalem?²

11 Doth not Hezekiah persuade you to give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, The LORD our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

12 Hath not the same Hezekiah taken away³ his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall worship before one altar, and burn incense upon it?

13 Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand?

14 Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that your God⁴ should be able to deliver you out of mine hand?

15 Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers; how much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

16 And his servants spake yet more against the LORD God, and against his servant Hezekiah.⁶

17 He wrote also letters to rail on the tain called Gihon somewhere on the west of the city, whose waters originally flowed down the valley of Hinnom, 'through the midst of the land.' Nehemiah, 2. 13, speaks of the Dragon Wall in the same direction, and this may have been another name for Gihon, or for one of a group of fountains. Hezekiah seems to have covered the fountains by constructing subterranean chambers similar to those at the pools of Solomon, and then to have conducted the waters by hidden canals into the city. The work was evidently of great magnitude. Perhaps the Pool of Hezekiah, which LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

18 Then they cried with a loud voice, in the Jews' speech, unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, to affright them, and to trouble them; that they might take the city.

19 And they spake against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, which were the work of the hands of man.⁷

20 ¶ And for this cause Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven.⁸

21 And the LORD sent an angel,⁹ which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria: so he returned with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god,¹ they that came forth of his own bowels slew him² there with the sword.

22 Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other,³ and guided them on every side.

23 And many brought gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, and presents⁴ to Hezekiah king of Judah: so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations⁵ from thenceforth.

24 ¶ In those days Hezekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he spake unto him, and he gave him a sign.

25 But Hezekiah rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him; for his heart was lifted up: therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem.⁶

26 Notwithstanding Hezekiah humbled himself for the pride⁷ of his heart, (both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem,) so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them in the days of Hezekiah.

27 ¶ And Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honour: and he made himself treasures for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of pleasant jewels;⁸

28 Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks.⁹

29 Moreover he provided him cities, and possessions of flocks and herds in abundance; for God had given him substance very much.

still exists, may have been excavated at that period to receive the water from the fountains. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Never are Satan and his agents more ready to harass the people of God than when they are employed in the work of reformation: and thus God justly punishes his people for their hypocrisy and indifference in his service. Proud men hope to carry all to their mind if their first attempts are successful. But when war or danger is threatened, we must prepare for it by every proper mean, remembering, after all, to rest chiefly on the powerful protection and assistance of God. Strong faith in him will help us above the fear of man. If our adversaries discover their enmity to God and our souls by boasting and blasphemy, let us give ourselves to mourning and prayer: so shall the issue be terrible to them, and 30 This same Hezekiah also stopped the upper water-course of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David.⁹ And Hezekiah prospered in all his works.

31 ¶ Howbeit in the business of the ambassadors¹ of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to inquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart.

32 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his goodness,⁴ behold, they are written in the vision of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, and in the book of the Kings of Judah and Israel.

33 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chiefest⁵ of the sepulchres of the sons of David: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem did him honour at his death: and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 Manasseh's wicked reign. 3 He setteth up idolatry, and would not be admonished. 11 He is carried captive to Babylon. 12 Upon his prayer to God he is released, and putteth down idolatry. 18 His reign wickedly is slain by his servants. 25 The murderers being slain, Josiah succeedeth him.

MANASSEH was^a twelve years old when he began to reign; and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem:

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

3 For he built again the high places which Hezekiah his father had broken down, and he reared up altars for Baalim, and made groves, and worshipped all the host of heaven,² and served them.

4 Also he built altars in the house of the LORD, whereof the LORD had said, In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And he caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom: also he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar spirit,³ and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a carved image⁴ (the idol which he had made) in the house of God, of which God had said to David, and to Solomon his

f 'Made groves'—this will appear a strange statement to the thoughtful reader. The real meaning of the Hebrew is, 'he made images of Ashtaroth,' which many of the Israelites had adopted as their tutelary deity. Baal represented the sun, Ashtaroth the moon, and all the host of heaven the stars.—C.

g The splendour of sun, moon, and stars, especially in a bright eastern sky, together with their acknowledged influence on the seasons of the year, soon suggested to a people who 'did not like to retain God in their knowledge,' that these heavenly bodies were proper objects of their worship.—C.

POOLOF HEZEKIAH—BUILT BY THE KING OF JUDAH. [II. Chronicles, xxxii:30.]—"This same Hezekiah also stopped the upper watercourse of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works." The same pool is referred to also in II. Kings, xx:20, where it says: "And the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how he made a pool, and a conduit, and brought water into the city, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?" This pool is 240 feet long by 144 feet wide, and is rather shallow. At the bottom is natural rock, which is leveled and covered with cement, and it is furnished with water by a small aqueduct from Birket Mamila. Dr. Thomson says the water which fills the pool is still brought by an underground conduit from what is supposed to be the upper Gihon.

son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

The prayer attributed to him in the Apocrypha is, by universal consent, admitted to be spurious. Is then a portion of Holy Scripture lost? No, nor does this and similar texts necessarily lead to such a conclusion. The words, are written, are supplied by the translators, and the Hebrew might as 1 He carried on his reformation with a steady hand; rimo did not prevent him from going far enough, and zeal did not lead him beyond due bounds. He walked in the golden mean, and his moderation was known to all men. He looked not to the right hand or the left, but inward, forward, and upward. Reader, let the conduct of this pious youth be thy example through life.—P.

2 No line of age can be prescribed to the spirit and grace of God. The call to the vineyard may be not only in the eleventh hour of a nation, but of an individual, not of 6. Lu. 23. 43. Still, early conversions are the most common and the most hopeful. A young king, surrounded by all the fascinations of a court, yet fixing his heart on heaven; beset by flatterers, yet listening only to the word of truth, the Spirit of God, and his own conscience; tempted by the example of paternal idolatry, yet steadily determined upon a godly reformation—such was Josiah—such is the beauty of early piety.—C.

3 Or, sun images.

the LORD God of Israel, behold, they are written in the book of the Kings of Israel;

19 His prayer also, and how God was entreated of him, and all his sins, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, before he was humbled, behold, they are written among the sayings of the seers.¹

20 ¶ So Manasseh ^{slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house:}² and Amon his son reigned in his stead.³

21 ¶ Amon ^{was} two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned two years in Jerusalem.

22 But he ^{did that which was} evil in the sight of the LORD, as did Manasseh his father: for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images which Manasseh his father had made, and ^{served} them;

23 And ^{humbled} not himself before the LORD, as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but Amon ^{trespassed} more and more.

24 And ^{his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.}

25 ¶ But the people of the land ^{slew} all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.⁵

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 Josiah's good reign. 3 He destroyeth idolatry. 8 He provideth for the repairs of the temple. 14 Hilkiah having found the book of the law, Josiah sendeth to Huldah to inquire of the Lord. 23 Huldah prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem, but respite thereof in Josiah's time. 29 Josiah, causing it to be read in a solemn assembly, reneweth the covenant with God.

JOSIAH was eight years old when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years.

2 And he did ^{that which was} right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his father, and declined ^{neither} to the right hand nor to the left.¹

3 ¶ For in the eighth year of his ²reign, while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father: and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

4 And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the images³ that were on high above them he cut down; and the ⁴groves, our duty, are exactly marked in the registers of heaven. But with what a dreadful career and unremitting obstinacy do some men post to eternal ruin! They greedily copy their parents' wickedness, but never their repentance.

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 7. Josiah was the most thorough and successful reformer of Old Testament history. His piety and zeal were, under God, mainly owing to the wise and holy men who had charge of his early training. Never had there been in the Jewish court such a noble band of high-minded and God-fearing men. Shaphan, the scribe, was chief. He had charge of the finances, and trained the young prince in political economy. Hilkiah, the high-priest, grace hath enabled remarkably to honour him. And noted piety and activity for God are the true way to be happy and prosperous in life, and to die revered and justly lamented.

CHAPTER XXXIII. REFLECTIONS.—What a grief it would be to many godly parents to return from death and behold the abominations of their children! Nations and churches readily relapse into their wonted abominations, from which they had been reformed with infinite pains. They become inhuman, unnatural, and infatuated when God gives them over to their own hearts' lusts. They turn from and provoke God, their best friend, and depend on Satan, their worst enemy. How quickly Hezekiah's boasted treasures are carried to Babylon, and his son to attend them! But O the mercy of God, in giving repeated warnings to the most vile and obstinate sinners; or in afflicting them, in order to awaken them! He can convert and forgive the greatest monsters of wickedness. But bitter are the griefs, and visible the fruits, of real repentance, particularly when the subjects were once remarkably wicked. What care to restore the persons whom they have seduced! Though God cast their sin behind his back, they never forget it themselves, nor think themselves worthy of ordinary honours, whether in life or in death. And it may be useful for us to remember that our sins, with their aggravating circumstances, as well as our returns to and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, and strowed it upon the graves of them that had sacrificed unto them.⁵

5 And he burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And so did he in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon even unto Naphtali with their mattocks round about.⁷

7 And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven images into powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

8 ¶ Now, in the eighteenth year of his reign,⁸ when he had purged the land, and the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God.

9 And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and they returned to Jerusalem.⁹

10 And they put it in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and amend the house;

11 Even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and to floor the houses which the kings of Judah had destroyed.²

12 And the men did the work faithfully: and the overseers of them were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward; and other of the Levites, all that could skill of instruments of music.³

13 Also they were over the bearers of burdens, and were overseers of all that wrought the work in any manner of service: and of the Levites there were scribes, and officers, and porters.

14 And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, Hilkiah the priest found a book of the law of the LORD given by Moses.⁵

15 And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.

The flat roofs would suffer for want of repairs more speedily than those of angular form; and the destruction of the floors, independently of depredation, would soon follow from the free access of the rain.—A. 16 And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed to thy servants, they do it.

17 And they have gathered together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. And Shaphan read it before the king.

19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the law, that he rent his clothes.⁹

20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying,

21 Go, inquire of the LORD for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.

22 And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum, the son of Tikvath, the son of 'Hasrah, keeper of the wardrobe;¹ (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the college;² and they spake to her to that effect.

Josiah's reign was an exact counterpart to that of Manasseh. The latter tolerated and established every form of worship except the true: Josiah established the true religion, and proscribed all others.

He uprooted idolatry in the whole land. He was as thorough an iconoclast as John Knox.

He shattered all images to pieces; he overthrew all altars; he desecrated all idol sanctuaries, and he summarily punished all idolatrous priests and people.

He did not stop here. He was more than a mere destroyer of false systems. He was a reformer. He rebuilt the temple, re-established the national religion, reorganized the priesthood, and adopted all possible means for the instruction of the whole body of the people in the law of the Lord.—P.

trous times, removed it for safety, the pious and zealous Josiah would scarcely have been unnoticed. The conclusion therefore is, that it had been removed by Josiah, during the cleansing and repairs of the temple, and was now restored to its appointed place.—C.

² This interference of David and Solomon in the regulation of divine worship, does not sanction either kings or ecclesiastics to model God's service after their own imaginations. David and Solomon were both prophets of the Lord, and in that character, and not in virtue of their office as kings, did they enact these pious and orderly forms which Josiah is now restoring.—C.

²⁴ The writing of David king of Israel, and according to the writing of Solomon⁴ his son;

5 And stand in the holy place, according to the divisions of the families of the fathers⁵ of your brethren the people,⁶ and after the division of the families of the Levites;

6 So kill the passover, and ^asanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

7 And Josiah ^bgave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover-offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand,⁷ and three thousand bullocks: these were of the king's substance.

8 And ^chis princes gave⁸ willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: ^dHilkiah, and Zechariah, and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests, for the passover-offerings, two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen.

9 Conaniah also, and Shemaiah and Nathaneel, his brethren, and Hashabiah, and Jeiel, and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, ^egave unto the Levites, for passover-offerings, five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.

10 So the service was prepared, and the priests ^fstood in their place, and the Levites in their courses, according to the king's commandment.

11 And they killed the passover,⁹ and the priests ^gsprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites ^hflayed them.

12 And they ⁱremoved the ¹burnt-offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the ²families of the people, to offer unto the LORD, as it is written in the book of Moses: and so did they with the oxen.

13 And they ^jroasted the passover with fire, according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings sod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and ^kdivided them speedily among all the people.

14 And afterward they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: because the priests the sons of Aaron ^lwere busied in offering of burnt-offerings and the fat² until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron.

15 And the singers, the sons of Asaph, ^mwere in their place,³ according to the ⁿcommandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer;⁴ and the porters ^owaited his nation; trembles at the words of the God of Israel; and under the apprehensions of his denou'ed wrath humbles himself; and labours to have all his subjects taught divine truths, fixed in them, and preserved from wickedness. And it is pleasant, after great prevailing impiety, to behold kings, ministers, and people harmoniously and heartily zealous for the instituted purity of God's worship, and solemnly devoting themselves, upon a new-covenant footing, to his service.

CHAPTER XXXV. REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how often neither ministers nor people show due forwardness in observing the solemn ordinances of God! Yet much might be done for the excitement of others by one in high station, who so loves him that he grudges no expense nor labour in his service. And magistrates, by their example and zealous exertions, might effectually instigate and encourage even ministers to do their duty; yea, where many difficulties are in the way. No one ought to become a hypocrite for the sake of carnal advantage; but certainly such as appear sincere ought to meet with peculiar encouragement. Care should be taken, by all concerned, that none be deprived of God's ordinances on account of their poverty; and that none, by public service, injure his own soul's edification. But great labour and pains are necessary in reducing all ranks and things to due order in the observation of God's ordinances after they at every gate; they might not depart from their service;⁵ for their brethren the Levites prepared for them.

16 So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt-offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Josiah.

17 And the children of Israel, *that were present*⁶ kept^t the passover at that time, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days.

18 And there "was no passover like to that" kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

19 In⁷ the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

20 ¶ After⁸ all this, when Josiah had prepared the temple,⁸ Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Carchemish by Euphrates: and Josiah went out against him.⁹

21 But he sent ambassadors to him, saying, What² have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against "the house wherewith I have war; for God" commanded me to make haste: forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not.

22 Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, but "disguised himself, that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from "the mouth of God," and came to fight in the valley of "Megiddo."

23 And the archers shot at king Josiah; and the king said to his servants, Have me away; for I am sore "wounded."

24 His servants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in the second chariot that he had; and they brought him to Jerusalem, and he *"died, and was buried in one of the sepulchres"*² of his fathers: and *"all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah."*³

1 Josiah cannot be accused of rashly entering upon an unjust war; for Necho was marching an army through Palestine without leave, and about to attack the king of Babylon, from whom he must have held the northern parts of his kingdom, ch. 34. 6. close to the spot consecrated in national history by the great victory of Barak. It would seem that there was on the battle-field an ancient sanctuary of the two Syrian gods Hadad and Rimmon, and that the city of Megiddo was not far distant. We have no details of the battle. One melancholy event absorbs the attention of the sacred writer. Josiah disguised himself, as kings were then accustomed to do when entering battle. The Egyptian archers fired upon and mortally wounded him. He was put into another chariot, and driven rapidly off towards Jerusalem. But all was in vain. The good monarch died; and all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for him.—P.

1 Immediately after the battle of Megiddo Pharaoh-Necho came up and his march against the king of Assyria. The Jews were thus left for a time to themselves, and they placed Jehoahaz on the throne. His reign was very short, but it was very wicked. Instead of imitating the noble example of his father, he gave way to the follies and vices of the worst of his predecessors, 2 Ki. 23. 32. Necho returned in three months from his victorious campaign. Encamped for a time at Riblah, on the northern border of Canaan, he gave orders to depose Jehoahaz, probably because he had not himself nominated him; and then he placed Eliakim, another son of Josiah, on the vacant throne. The change of name to Jehoikim was the badge of a tributary prince; it became the vassal of Necho.—P.

have been long neglected. The very best of men rarely leave the world without some visible blemish. How affecting it is to see this great man die in an unjust war, after he had received from God fair warning of his danger! But God in his sovereign wisdom often makes his people's sinful rashness the mean of their own happiness and of their survivors' misery. Many lament the loss of their mercies who never rightly improved them in the enjoyment; and grieve for the misery which they see coming on their nation, who will not take the proper methods of repentance to prevent it.

CHAPTER XXXVI. [Ver. 6. It was in the third year of Jehoikim's reign that Nebuchadnezzar took Jerusalem, Da. 1. 1, and put fetters on the king. At first it was the intention of the conqueror to take Jehoikim to Babylon, but for some reason he changed his purpose, and restored the crown to him. Many Jews of high rank were at that time taken captive, and among them was the prophet Daniel, Da. 1. 1-7. A large proportion of the treasures and sacred vessels of the temple were also taken and placed in the great temple of Babylon. Jehoikim became tributary to Nebuchadnezzar for three years. He then, taking advantage of some troubles in Assyria, ventured to rebel; Judea was invaded, Jerusalem captured, Jehoikim slain, and his son Jehoachin placed on the throne. P.]

Ver. 17. [The details of the terrible sufferings to which the people of Jerusalem were exposed during the long siege, which is only just referred to in this passage, may be learned by a careful study of the prophecies of Jeremiah and the history of Josephus. The siege lasted two years. It has been ever since regarded as the darkest period of Jewish history; and is still commemorated by a fast. Famine and pestilence committed frightful ravages in the city. Jeremiah was in prison, but received a daily supply of bread by order of the king, Je. 37. 21; 38. 9. The children died of hunger in the streets. Parents devoured the flesh of their own children, Eze. 5. 10. At length the enemy effected an entrance; Zedekiah with the royal family escaped in the night, fled through the wilderness, but were captured at Jericho. The king's fate was a cruel one. Jerusalem and its temple were completely destroyed. The captivity dates from the third year of Jehoikim, B.C. 607, nineteen years previous to the final siege and destruction of Jerusalem. P.]

Necho was one of the Pharaohs of Egypt. This view of the Hall of the Royal Mummies, Gizeh Museum, is given because it contains the remains of many of the Egyptian kings. This hall is one of the large rooms in the Palace of Gizeh, a building which is said to have been erected at a cost of nearly twenty-five million dollars. It was built as a harem for the great Egyptian Pasha who assisted DeLesseps in opening the Suez canal, and who brought such a load of debt upon Egypt that he was deposed by the Sultan and taken to Constantinople. This building was confiscated by the government and is now used to house the valuable collection of Egyptian antiquities which make up the marvelous contents of the museum.

against their return, even when they have provoked him to cast them out of it. In his providence he exactly adheres to his word. Nor will he, in his pardoning goodness, contend for ever, even where his honour requires him to contend long.

GENERAL VIEW OF ACROPOLIS AND THEATER, SARDIS—BURNED BY CYRUS, KING OF PERSIA, WHEN CROESUS WAS KING OF LYDIA. [Ezra, i:1.]—"Now in the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia, that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing." The proclamation of Cyrus referred to above had reference to building the Lord's house at Jerusalem. This is the Cyrus that captured Sardis, the capital of the kingdom of Lydia. Croesus was king at the time. Cyrus condemned him to be burned alive. When bound to the stake Croesus was heard to utter the name of Solon. Whereupon Cyrus inquired the reason. The unfortunate monarch replied by repeating a conversation which had taken place between himself and the Grecian sage on the instability of human happiness, which so affected Cyrus that he liberated Croesus, and ever after retained him as one of his most intimate friends.

THE BOOK OF EZRA

Was probably written by himself. It contains a history of eighty years; and exhibits the divine fulfilment of all those predictions of Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Micah, or others, which respected the deliverance from Babylon. It particularly informs us, (1) Upon what encouragement, and what numbers returned, i. ii. (2) How the temple was rebuilt and dedicated, notwithstanding repeated stops from their heathen neighbours, iii. -vi. (3) How Ezra, as Artaxerxes' deputy, came to Jerusalem, mourned over, and dissolved the marriages with heathen women, vii. -x. [The book of Ezra may be divided into two sections:—(1) Ch. i. -vi., containing an account of the return of the exiles from Babylon under the leadership of Zerubbabel and Joshua, with the erection of the temple and the re-establishment of the Jewish worship. (2) Ch. vii. -x., detailing the journey of a second caravan of exiles under the leadership of Ezra himself. P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 The proclamation of Cyrus for the building of the temple. 5 The people provide for their return. 7 Cyrus restoreth the vessels of the temple to Sheshbazzar.

NOW, in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia,¹ (that the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled,) the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth;² and he hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah;

3 Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up³ to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel, (he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem.

4 And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, besides the free-will offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit God had raised,⁴ to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem.

6 And all they that were about them strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, besides all that was willingly offered.

7 ¶ Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the LORD, which Nebu-

1 Cyrus, the son of a king of Persia by a daughter of the king of Media, united these two kingdoms, and conquered Babylon. He was born 600 years before Christ, and reigned 30 years. His name and conquests were prophetically announced by Isaiah 200 years before his birth, and Josephus (Antiq. i. li. c. 2.) attributes his partiality for the Jews to his reading the prophecies under the instruction of Daniel. —C.

chadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods;

8 Even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath the treasurer, and numbered them unto Sheshbazzar, the prince of Judah.

9 And this is the number of them: thirty chargers of gold, a thousand chargers of silver, nine and twenty knives,

10 Thirty basons of gold, silver basons of a second sort four hundred and ten, and other vessels a thousand.

11 All the vessels of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred.⁵ All these did Sheshbazzar bring up with them of the captivity, that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem.

NOW these are the children of the province¹ that went up out of the captivity, of those which had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon, and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, every one unto his city;

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 7. We read in 2 Ki. 24. 13 that when in the reign of Jehoiachin Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem, 'he carried out all the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house, and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the Lord;' yet Ezra says in this place that Cyrus returned the vessels. There is no contradiction. Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem twice, once in the reign of Jehoiachin, and once in the reign of Jehoiachin. On the former occasion he took the golden vessels of the temple and placed them in the temple of his god at Babylon, 2 Ch. 36. 7; Da. 1. 2. These vessels Cyrus delivered up again to the Jews when returning from exile. On the second capture of Jerusalem Nebuchadnezzar appears to have stripped the gold plating from the larger vessels and furniture of the temple—from the altar of incense, the table of show-bread, the ark of the covenant, &c., he cut it in pieces and carried it away. REFLECTIONS.—Behold how God rules over the kingdoms of the earth, and always seeks to turn the hearts of princes and others for the good of his church! God is here exactly fulfilling the predictions of his word concerning the name of the deliverer; and the occasion, time, and manner of the deliverance. It is honourable for princes and men in authority to begin the exercise of their power in the service of God, as an acknowledgment of his bounty to them; and to overlook secular interests and customs of countries in order to put honour on Christ and his people. But in every good word and work the Lord must work in us to will and to do of his good pleasure. And he can procure from such as know him not the greatest kindness to his interests and people. What care he took to preserve the furniture of his temple, and maintain the princely dignity of Judah, even in Babylon! But much greater is his care of whatever pertains to Jesus and his people. And it is honourable when princes and ministers are peculiarly forward to rebuild God's temple and reform his church.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the honour God puts upon those who prefer his glory and the interests of his church to their own ease! And great are the privileges which those obtain who are enrolled in the Lamb's book of life, and go up with Christ from their captivity to sin, Satan, and the world! What care God took to keep clear the genealogies of his ancient people, till his Son was thereby manifested to spring of Judah and David! It is reasonable that those be excluded from office in the church who undervalue that honour, and want proper tokens of their spiritual birth. And there is need always to consult God himself in everything relating to his worship and service. To what a small and poor company had sin reduced the once numerous and wealthy tribes of Judah and Benjamin, at least such of them as were willing to appear for their

God! And yet it is pleasing to see them in their poverty so willingly contributing to build a temple for God. And what is spent in God's work shall be returned with interest.

But was not this release and return of the Jews typical of the gathering of the nations to Christ, and of the church's deliverance from Antichrist, and the saints' release from death at the last day? Awakened and encouraged by the joyful sound of the gospel trumpet, what multitudes, in the apostolic and after ages, did, with mourning for sin, with hallelujahs of praise, and with the most cordial affection, join themselves to Christ and his church, to be built up a spiritual temple and meet habitation for God! With almighty power Jesus did, and still does, go forth conquering and to conquer, and to overthrow our spiritual enemies who hold us in slavery; making us free indeed, and willing to do whatever tends to his honour. In due time the instruments of God's wrath shall destroy the mystical Babylon, and restore the souls of men to the ancient 7 In 2 Ch. 8, 9 it is related that Solomon made servants, not of Israel, but of the remnants of the nations that had not been expelled. These, if converted to the faith, it was lawful to incorporate into the Jewish nation, and these servants of Solomon are most probably their descendants.—C.

8 The reason of this exclusion being placed from this, that such of the Jews as believed their prophets expected a return into their native land after a period of seventy years, and reversed their genealogies as the title on which they might resume their property.—Grotius, Je. 32. 14.

9 Not spiritually, but genealogically polluted. This exclusion presents the two emblematic lessons. 1. The necessity of proving our spiritual descent by being born again, Jn. 3. 3, 5. 2. The duty of excluding or removing from the ministry of the gospel all who cannot afford scriptural evidence that they are themselves the subjects of that holy conversion which they enforce upon others.—C.

1 Castel supposes this title to be of Persian origin, and that it signifies captivity.—C.

2 These separate numbers being added, give only 29,818; the numbers in Nehemiah 31,089; yet both agree in giving one grand total, 42,360. To reconcile these varying accounts, it is necessary to observe, 1. That as many priests failed in establishing their genealogy, (ver. 62), we may unquestionably infer, that many of the people were in the same predicament. 2. The number of these attainted priests is not given, so we may justly conclude of the unregistered people. 3. The persons enumerated obtain their hereditary estates in virtue of their genealogy. 4. The persons who cannot trace their descent, fail in establishing a right to any particular estate, but are not therefore excluded from the other rights of citizenship, but may settle as derivative tenants, or purchase for years, according to the jubilee law, or obtain new settlements in the unclaimed lands. Now these being added to the others, make up the sum of the whole congregation.—C.

5 When Ezra recounts 424 not mentioned in Nehemiah, and Nehemiah 1795 not mentioned in Ezra, these accounts may be easily reconciled, by supposing the two varying enumerations to relate to different periods of proof of genealogy and enrolment as citizens, the third to the period when the registry was completed.—C.

3 From what is known of eastern caravans or caravans, we may infer for the necessary guard of cavalry the mules for the richer class to ride, the camels for carrying food, camp furniture, &c., and the asses would be nearly all required for conveyance of the children. It is obvious the greater number of adults, both men and women, would be on foot. The whole presents a striking continuation of the statistics introduced by Moses at the commandment of God, Nu. 13. 2, 17-20; and while it exhibits the deep poverty of the returning remnant, it beautifully illustrates the power of grace to open the heart, and to teach every man to contribute to the cause of God, after his ability. See ver. 69. 2 Co. 8. 2, 3, 1 Pe. 4. 11. 2 Ex. 25. 2; 35. 5. 1 Ch. 29. 5, 9. 2 Co. 8. 3. 129. 7, 13. 129. 3. 1 Ch. 21. 18. 4 The Hebrew word here translated 'drams' denotes the Persian daric, a gold coin admitted to be the earliest known specimen of coined money. Its distinguishing mark was a crowned archer, his garb is the same which is seen on the sculptures at Persepolis. Specimens which have been weighed were found to be 15 grs. heavier than a Greek drachme, and their intrinsic value may therefore be reckoned at 250.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—Let us learn to prefer the business of religion to our most pressing temporal affairs; and in the worship of God do what we can when we cannot do what we would. And let leaders in church and state be peculiarly active and zealous. Never should the fear of men hinder us from, but hasten us to, fellowship with God. The more enemies we have, the more need have we that God should befriend us. If we have been long secluded from the public or solemn ordinances of God, more readily should we improve opportunities when put into our hands; and by no means neglect the daily sacrifices of the closet and family. If God bring us out of the furnace of affliction our hearts should burn with love to him; and never should we grudge to spare from ourselves that we may have wherewith to honour him or to relieve his poor saints; always taking care to dispose of it to the best advantage. If a good work is to be done, let us set about it with all our might and without delay, be the difficulties ever so great. Never should we despise the day of small things, but encourage ourselves in the everlasting power and mercy of God; praising him for the beginnings of his returning mercy; assured that they will issue in perfection at last. And while we are in this world, where shouts of joy can scarcely be discerned from the groans of weeping, let us rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep.

JAFFA, FROM HOTEL WINDOW—TO JAFFA WAS BROUGHT CEDAR TREES FROM LEBANON FOR THE REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE IN JERUSALEM, UNDER ZERUBABEL. [Ezra. iii:7.]—"They gave money also unto the masons, and to the carpenters; and meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar trees from Lebanon to the sea of Joppa, according to the grant that they had of Cyrus, king of Persia." When Solomon originally built the temple, he had the assistance of Hiram, king of Tyre, who sent cedar from Lebanon by way of Joppa (Jaffa) to Jerusalem. So we find that when Zerubabel undertook the rebuilding of the temple, he had a grant from Cyrus, king of Persia, to bring cedar trees from Lebanon by way of Joppa to Jerusalem. We give an illustration of Jaffa from the hotel window. This city has a remarkable history. At different times it has been pagan, Jew, Moslem, Arab, Mameluke, and Christian. There are beautiful gardens about this old city filled with towering palms, and orange and lemon trees.

oil,⁴ unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar-trees from Lebanon to the sea of Joppa,⁵ according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

8 ¶ Now, in the second year⁶ of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began ^mZerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the LORD.

9 Then stood ^jJeshua, with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of Judah,⁷ together,⁸ to set forward the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, they set the priests in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites, the sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the LORD, after the ordinance of David king of Israel.

11 And they sang together by course, in praising and giving thanks unto the LORD; because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid.

12 But many of the priests and Levites, and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house,⁹ when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes, wept with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy:

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people: for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

5 The Phenicians of Tyre and Sidon had rendered important service to Solomon in the building and decoration of the first temple; and here we find them again aiding in the erection of the second. They were accustomed to the felling of timber in Lebanon for the supply of their dock-yards; they were also skilful mariners, and could thus convey timber from the ports of Phœnicia at the base of Lebanon to Joppa the port of Jerusalem.—P.

It is sometimes said that they were a mixed race, composed in part of the remnant of the ten tribes left in the kingdom of Israel after the first captivity, and in part of the new colonists introduced from Assyria. But for this opinion there is no historic evidence. In their letter to the king of Persia given below they describe themselves as "people whom the great Asnapper brought over and set in the cities of Samaria;" and when applying for permission to join in building the temple, they plead not their Jewish origin, but the fact that they had for a long period served the Jewish ritual. This observance had been imposed upon them by fear, as may be seen from the narrative of their settlement in 2 Ki. xxi. 10.

They serve, however, to illustrate an important evidence of the divine origin of the Scriptures. These different nations were all so amalgamated into one people, in which all distinctive characters were lost; but the Jews, according to prophecy, still remain a separate people, mixed with every nation, never combined with any.

Let us build with you: for we seek your God, as ye do; and we do sacrifice unto him since the days of Esar-haddon² king of Assur, which brought us up hither.

3 But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the LORD God of Israel, as king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

4 Then the people of the land weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and troubled them in building,³

5 And hired counsellors against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of Persia.

6 And in the reign of Ahasuerus,⁵ in the beginning of his reign,⁶ wrote they unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

11 ¶ This is the copy of the letter that they sent unto him, even unto Artaxerxes the king; Thy servants the men on this side the river, and at such a time.

12 Be it known unto the king, that the Jews which came up from thee to us are come unto Jerusalem, building the rebellious and the bad city, and have set up the walls thereof, and joined the foundations.

13 Be it known now unto the king, that if this city be builded, and the walls set up again,

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS.—God's temple can never be built but Satan and his agents will rage and do all that they can to oppose it: and none are ordinarily more bitter opposers than pretended and mongrel professors. They will turn themselves into every shape to vent their malice; and will not spare money, labour, or villany to accomplish their purpose. Pretences of friendship, bribing of counsellors, flattery of princes, and boastful threatenings and reproaches are their common methods of working. Saints had therefore need to avoid intimacy with them, and to encourage themselves in the Lord their God, and be strong in him and in the power of his might. It is common for the faithful followers of Christ to be reproached as dangerous enemies to the state: and if once professors have done an ill thing, their successors in the church are sure to be upbraided with it, although they themselves should heartily condemn it. When princes desire occasions of stumbling the agents for hell will soon supply them therewith. And things the most false or improbable, are often readily believed by most against Christ and his church. Most kings neither can nor care to know the truth with respect to their religious subjects. To their great joy the attempts of persecutors are often successful for a time; and the friends of Christ and his truths are too easily checked in their reforming attempts.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—It is highly desirable to have church and state concurring in the work of reformation: but the declaration of divine truths is always the principal mean. Faithful reprovers are profitable to obedient ears. When God then will they not pay toll, tribute, and custom, and so thou shalt endamage the revenue² of the kings.

14 Now, because we have maintenance from the king's palace, and it was not meet for us to see the king's dishonour, therefore have we sent and certified the king,

15 That search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers: so shalt thou find in the book of the records, and know that this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful unto kings and provinces, and that they have moved³ sedition within the same⁴ of old time; for which cause was this city destroyed.⁵

16 We certify the king, that if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means thou shalt have no portion on this side the river.⁶

17 ¶ Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river, Peace, and at such a time.

18 The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me.

19 And I commanded, and search hath been made, and it is found that this city of old time hath made insurrection against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

20 There have been mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which have ruled over all countries beyond the river; and toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them.

21 Give ye now commandment⁸ to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me.

22 Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 ¶ Now, when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, they went up in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews, and made them to cease by force and power.

24 Then ceased⁹ the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE ERECHTHEUM, ACROPOLIS—THE ERECHTHEUM WAS BURNED BY THE PERSIANS, LED BY DARIUS OR BY AHASUERUS, HIS SON, AND REBUILT IN THE TIME OF PERICLES. [Ezra, vi:1.]—"Then Darius the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the rolls, where the treasures were made up in Babylon." After the death of Cyrus, Cambyses was made king of Persia. He died of a small wound, and left no issue to succeed him, and his throne was usurped by Darius. Darius burnt Sardis, and thereby so enraged the Athenians that a war was kindled between

Greece and Persia. Darius was then so exasperated against the Greeks that a servant every day, by his order, repeated these words: "Remember, O King, to punish the Athenians." He was conquered at the celebrated battle of Marathon by 10,000 Athenians. We give a picture of a general view of the Erechtheum on the Acropolis to illustrate these facts of Grecian history and the connection of Darius with it. It is an interesting fact that the Persians burned down the temple of Erechtheus that stood on this very spot. It was afterwards rebuilt in the time of Pericles.

whose name was Sheshbazzar,¹ whom he had made governor;²

15 And said unto him, Take these vessels, go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be builded in his place.

16 Then came the same Sheshbazzar, and laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem: and since that time even until now hath it been in building, and yet it is not finished.³

17 Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, let there be search made in the king's treasure-house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Darius, finding the decree of Cyrus, maketh a new decree for the advancement of the building. 13 By the help of the enemies, and the directions of the prophets, the temple is finished. 16 The feast of the dedication is kept, 19 and the passover.

THEN Darius^a the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the rolls,¹ where the treasures were laid up² in Babylon.

2 And there was found at Achmetha,³ in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written:

3 In the first year of Cyrus the king, the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid; the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits;⁴

4 With three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber; and let the expenses be given out of the king's house:

5 And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and brought⁵ again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house of God.

6 Now^a therefore, Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and your companions⁶ the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence:⁷

7 Let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews and the elders of the Jews build this house of God in his place.

8 Moreover, I make a decree⁸ what ye shall do to the elders of these Jews for the building of this house of God: that of the king's goods, even of the tribute⁹ beyond the river, forthwith expenses be given unto these men, that they be not hindered.

2 The terms occurring throughout the decree of Darius imply his conviction that the God of the Jews was the true Jehovah. He did not, indeed, relinquish the worship of his idols, but he clearly believed Jehovah to be superior to them all. He seems to have acknowledged him to be the supreme. He makes provision for his daily sacrifices, the morning and evening burnt-offerings, which, according to the law, were to be made every day continually; and he desires an interest for himself, and for his sons in the prayers of Jehovah's worshippers.—J.

And even thus, in Christian times, the violence of persecutors has been overruled, to bring the nature, evidences, and excellences of Christianity before kings and judges, so that the blood of martyrs has become the very seed of the church.—C.

Christ's followers are never persecuted but when they are belied. Let their cause be but fairly stated and fairly heard and it will stand its ground against every opposition. And it is often false information and not malice that makes magistrates to issue forth persecuting edicts and sentences.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—Impartial search never hurts but helps the cause of truth: and God makes the attempts against his church the means the law of the LORD, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

11 ¶ Now this is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even a scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

12 Artaxerxes, king of kings, unto 'Ezra the priest, a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace, and at such a time.

13 I make a decree, that 'all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests and Levites, in my realm, which are minded of their own free will to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee.

14 Forasmuch as thou art sent of the 'king, and of his 'seven counsellors,⁸ to inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of 'thy God which is in thine hand;

15 And to carry 'the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel, whose habitation is in Jerusalem,

16 And⁴ all the silver and gold that thou canst find in all the province of Babylon, with the free-will-offering of the people, and of the priests, offering willingly for the house of their God which is in Jerusalem;

17 That 'thou mayest buy speedily with this money bullocks, rams, lambs, with their meat-offerings and their drink-offerings, and offer them upon the altar of the house of your God which is in Jerusalem.

18 And whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver and the gold, that do after the will of your God.

19 The 'vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, those deliver thou before the God of Jerusalem.

20 And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, bestow it out of the king's treasure-house.²

21 And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to 'all the treasurers which are of her advantage and honour. He raises up unexpected instruments to accomplish his gracious purposes. And often his spiritual work is carried on by their means who have neither part nor lot in the matter. The prayers of the godly are, or ought to be, the great support of nations and their magistrates; and if magistrates understood their own interests they would carefully secure them in their favour. But dreadful is the curse which shall at last light upon all the enemies of Christ and his church. And it is high time to be active and bold in his work, when we are bound to it by his express command, shamed into it by repeated edicts of heathen magistrates, and encouraged in it by his faithful ministers. God will have his work finished at last, notwithstanding ten thousand obstructions. What a mercy is it when Christ's church is prepared for the exact observance of all his ordinances, the most solemn not excepted! And it is a matter of great joy to all his true friends, and an honour to a church, when ministers are remarkably holy and faithful. Yea, it is highly necessary that all of us solemnly dedicate ourselves for temples to God; and offer up the solemn prayers of faith for God's blessing on the ordinances of his grace, which we have, or expect to enjoy. Yet not upon our services in his church must our hopes and joys depend, but on Jesus, as our God-honouring and sin-expiating oblation, and our passover sacrificed for us. If we live on him as our all in all, and occupy ourselves diligently in his service, the Lord will provide friends for us, even where we least expected.

CHAPTER VII. [Ver. 1. Seraiah, the son of Azariah. This Seraiah was that high-priest who was slain by Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, 2 Ki. 25. 18, 21, about 130 years before, and therefore could not be literally the father of Ezra. But by a principle of Jewish law, frequently exemplified in the Scriptures, when the intermediate parties died childless, and the family property or offices descended by heirship to a collateral branch, or in virtue of the law of adoption, as exemplified Ge. 48. 5, 6, a grandson or still more distant relative might be counted not as the son of his immediate father, but of his more remote ancestor. Among the many practical advantages of this system, was the facility which it afforded in tracing ancestry, and settling hereditary claims, by diminishing the links of proof necessary for their establishment. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God richly endows men with proper gifts and grace when he intends them for distinguished work in his church. And that character is highly exalted in which great knowledge and activity meet with great holiness of heart and life. Yea, very excellent is a knowledge of the Scriptures when it is reduced to practice and employed in the instruction of others. If God calls us to a difficult service he can make all things concur to our encouragement. If his people want magistrates of their own religion, he can make heathens to compensate the loss, doing honour to his word as the rule; showing at once generous hearts and open hands, and punishing contemptuous despisers of him and his interests. But how thankful ought we to be when he thus makes the princes of this world nursing parents to his church, terrors to evil-doers, and a praise to them that do well! Surely then it is becoming in us to depend on him alone as our strength and salvation, and to ascribe the glory of all beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily, 22 Unto an hundred talents of silver,³ and to an hundred measures⁴ of wheat, and to an hundred baths of wine, and to an hundred baths of oil, and salt without prescribing how much.

23 Whatsoever is commanded⁵ by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the house of the God of heaven: for why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons?⁶

24 Also we certify you, that touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it⁷ shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom, upon them.

25 And thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God that is in thine hand, set magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God; and teach ye them that know them not.

26 And whosoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king, let judgment be executed speedily upon him, whether it be unto death, or to banishment,⁷ or to confiscation of goods, or to imprisonment.⁸

27 ¶ Blessed⁹ be the LORD God of our fathers, which hath put such a thing as this in the king's heart, to beautify the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem;

28 And hath extended mercy unto me before the king, and his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes: and I was strengthened as¹⁰ the hand of the LORD my God was upon me; and I gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me.

LYCABETTUS AND THE PALACE OF THE KING, FROM ACROPOLIS—IN SIGHT OF PLACE WHERE AHASUERUS WAS DEFEATED IN THE BATTLE OF SALAMIS. [Ezra, viii:1.]—After the death of Darius, who was conquered by the Greeks in the battle of Marathon, Ahasuerus succeeded his father on the throne. Ahasuerus continued the warlike operations of his father, and invaded Greece, but was conquered at the battle of Salamis on the 20th of September, B. C. 480. There is a mount whose base is washed by the sea, called Kory-dallos, in sight of the Acropolis and Mt. Lycabettus which has long borne the name of the Throne of Xerxes (Ahasuerus) because it is said he sat upon the rocky brow of this hill in his silver-footed chair to watch the progress of the battle of Salamis. The Persian army was almost completely destroyed in this battle. Under the very eyes of Ahasuerus the Greeks destroyed the "bloom of all the Persian youth, in spirit the bravest, and in truth the noblest princes."

20 Also* of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

21 ¶ Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before our God, to seek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way:² because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So we fasted, and besought our God for this; and he was entreated of us.³

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

25 And weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered;

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basons of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of fine copper,⁵ precious as gold.⁶

28 And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto the LORD; the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.

29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem, unto the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy,⁷ and of such as lay in wait by the way.⁸

32 And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

d These were chiefly the Bedouin Arabs, who still continue to infest the neighbourhood of Babylon and the deserts of the adjoining countries.

True to their original character, their hand is still against every man. Single travellers or weak parties dare not pass their haunts; even strong and numerous parties, well armed,

or escorted by cavalry, cannot pass

free, for when they fear to attack a well-guarded caravan,

they are the most adroit pilferers by night, and carry off all stragglers whom they can seize by day. Their more general habit, however, is to avoid shedding blood, but to levy such contributions as amount to spoliation.

To such robber herds, Ezra and his fellow-mourners presented a most tempting object, as their recorded treasure of gold and silver alone could not be less than £300,000.—C.

e What faith was here shown by Ezra?

He well knew that the whole country between the banks of the Euphrates and Palestine swarmed with Arabs, with whom robbery was a trade. He knew also the immense value of the property the returning exiles were about to carry with them. Yet he would not ask a guard. He prayed to God. He had confidence in his power, his faithfulness, and his love to a penitent people.

He thus set forth on that perilous journey over the exposed desert, and the God of Abraham conveyed his people in safety to the land of their fathers.—P.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, offered burnt-offerings unto the God of Israel, twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he-goats for a sin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

36 ¶ And they delivered the king's commissions unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river; and they furthered the people, and the house of God.¹

CHAPTER IX.

B BRIDGE OVER THE ILISSUS—ONE OF THE FOUR MOST CELEBRATED RIVERS IN THE WORLD, THE OTHER THREE BEING THE TIBER, THE NILE AND THE JORDAN. [Ezra, ix:1.]—"Now when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying the people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians and the Amorites." About the time Ezra uttered the prayer recorded in this ninth chapter, confessing the sins of his people, the Spartans and the Boeotians were waging war against Athens. We give, as illustrating this Grecian history, contemporaneous with the facts of the ninth chapter of Ezra, a picture of a modern bridge over the Ilissus. This is a small stream that flows at the bottom of a deep ravine, through the classic city of Athens. It is dry a part of the year, and yet is one of the most famous water courses on earth, made so by the great men who have lived on and about it.

our iniquities are increased over our head,⁴ and our trespass is grown up unto the heavens.⁵

7 Since the ⁷days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day.

8 And now for a ⁸little space grace hath been showed from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant⁶ to escape, and to give us⁷ a nail⁸ in his holy place, that our God may ⁸lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage.

9 For ⁹we were bondmen; yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the ⁹sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to set up the house of our God, and to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us ⁹a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.

10 And now, O our God, ¹⁰what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments, 11 Which thou hast commanded ¹¹by thy servants the prophets, saying, The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from one end to another with their uncleanness.

12 Now therefore give not your daughters unto your sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever; ¹²that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave ¹²it for an inheritance to your children for ever.

13 And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God ¹³hast punished us less than our iniquities⁹ deserve, and hast given us ¹³such deliverance as this;

14 Should^b we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? ¹⁴wouldest not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that ¹⁴there should be no remnant nor escaping?

And the alarm becoming general, the women and children joined the assembly in the court of the temple, probably fearing lest the wrath of God should immediately be poured out upon them.—I.

¹ Shechaniah encourageth Ezra to reform the abuse of the strange marriages. ⁶ Ezra mourning assembleth the people. ⁹ The people at the exhortation of Ezra, repent, and promise amendment. ¹⁵ The care to perform it. ¹⁸ The names of those who had married strange wives.

NOW when Ezra¹ had^a prayed, and when he had confessed, weeping and casting himself down ¹before the house of God, there ¹assembled unto him out of Israel a very great congregation of men, and women, and children: for the people wept very sore.²

2 And Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, ²We have trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: yet now ²there is hope in Israel concerning this thing.

3 Now therefore let us ³make a covenant with our God, to put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my lord, and of those that ³tremble at the commandment of our God; and let it be done ³according to the law.

4 Arise;⁴ for this matter belongeth unto thee: we also ⁴will be with thee: be of good courage, and do it.³

5 Then arose Ezra, and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel, to ⁵swear that they should do according to this word. And they sware.

6 ¶ Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into ⁶the chamber of Johanan the son of ⁶Eliashib: and when he came thither, he ⁶did eat no bread, nor drink water; for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away.

7 And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem, unto all the children of the captivity, that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem;

8 And ⁸that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be ⁸forfeited,⁴ and himself ⁸separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away.

9 ¶ Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem quired to be kept pure and spotless. Hence the intense desire and strenuous effort of Ezra to reclaim the erring among them. P.]

Ver. 17. ['They made an end with all the men,' that is, they completed the investigation of all the cases, and determined what should be done in each case. Probably in most cases the wives conformed to Judaism, and separated entirely from their Gentile relatives; but wherever the wives proved ignorant or stubborn, the rulers insisted on their being divorced. It became therefore, in regard to each wife, a choice between her idolatry and her husband; and in regard to each husband between carnal appetite and religious principle. P.]

Ver. 44. [All these had taken strange wives, and

And that which seems light or lawful to carnal professors lies heavy on tender consciences. These take grief and shame to themselves for such as are hardened in their sins: and to join with such in their sorrow and zeal is both our duty and honour: for the most fearful aggravations appear attending our sins and those of our land when we consider the matter as in the sight of God. ¶ Therefore becomes us faithfully and humbly to repent of and acknowledge our sins, over our great sacrifice, our great propitiation; once offered in the evening, the end of the world; and in the believing view of God's sacrificial relation and pardoning mercy, to justify him and condemn ourselves. But often-repeated provocations weary out the patience of God. And hopeless is their case when neither corrections humble nor mercies constrain.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 11. The original cause of the law against mixed marriages evidently was the tendency of such marriages to draw the people away from the worship of the true God. All the nations among which the Israelites were placed were idolaters. Not only was their worship irrational, and sometimes inhuman, but their morals were most impure. Had the Israelites been permitted freely to intermarry with them, the natural and speedy result must have been universal degeneracy and degradation. The priest-nood especially, as being the instructors and guides of the nation, re-within three days: it was the ninth month,⁵ and the twentieth day of the month; and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling⁶ because of this matter, and for the great rain.⁶

10 And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and have taken strange wives, to increase the trespass of Israel.

11 Now therefore make confession unto the LORD, God of your fathers, and do his pleasure; and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from the strange wives.

12 Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do.

13 But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without,⁷ neither is this a work of one day or two: for we are many that have transgressed in this thing.⁸

14 Let now our rulers of all the congregation stand, and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God for this matter be turned from us.⁹

15 ¶ Only Jonathan the son of Asahel, and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah, were employed¹ about this matter: and Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

16 And the children of the captivity did so: and Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month to examine² the matter.

17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.³

18 ¶ And among the sons of the priests there were found that had taken strange wives; namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren, Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah.

19 And they gave their hands³ that they would put away their wives; and, being guilty, they offered a ram of the flock for their trespass.⁴

⁵ Answering to our December, and the coldest, and most rainy season of the year. But did not Ezra act with inhumanity in calling out the people at such an inclement season? Does the commander of an army act with inhumanity when he retreats with his troops by forced marches, and in the most inclement season, from the presence of a superior force? No—we praise his promptitude and his skill, and count a well-managed retreat sometimes superior to a victory. And shall the promptitude of Ezra be blamed, who will not wait an hour after the discovery of the national sin, but instantly calls upon the people to flee from the wrath to come?—C.

self a priest, manifests distinction of impartiality in beginning his reformation with the priesthood. tion; and reformations begun and carried on with much fasting, prayer, and solemn covenanting with God, promise good success. When we truly return to God he will return to us: he will at last pluck his people as brands out of the burning. They who have the cause of God at heart spare neither time nor pains to serve it. But how shameful is it to find priests, whose marriages were peculiarly restricted of God, ringleaders in unhallowed connections with heathen women! and yet it is highly commendable in them to prove at last patterns of repentance and reformation to others. Alas! that so few clergymen are disposed to imitate their example; but rather endeavouring by every possible shift to extenuate, excuse, or defend their own error and wickedness.

some of them had wives by whom they had children. The comparatively small number who had married idolatrous wives seems to intimate that the transgression was but of recent origin; and this view seems corroborated by the statement that 'some of them had wives by whom they had children.' This statement also evidences the strictness of the investigation and enforcement of the law. But was it not cruel thus to divorce husbands and wives? No. For God had not joined them, God had forbidden their union. It was no more cruel than to divorce a bigamist, whose marriage is rendered null and void by virtue of a previous contract. Besides, there is no reason to conclude these wives and children would be sent away portionless, the uncompromising purity of the divine law being always consistent with the dictates of mercy. Ex. xxi. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Wherever sin is seen and felt there is no ground for despair: yea, there may be good hope, through grace, where there is a burden of the most aggravated guilt. In mournful circumstances we ought to observe what makes for us as well as what makes against us. And even weaker saints may be instructors to those who are far stronger in gifts and grace. Mourning and reforming sinners ought to be encouraged; and leaders in church or state ought to be most active in promoting reformation. Men's sins, with the aggravations and danger of them, ought to be closely laid home to their consciences; for none will part with them till they perceive that they are undone if they persevere therein. Great men ought to take the good advice of their inferiors. Critical causes ought to be decided with great deliberation and cau-

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH

Was probably written by himself. It commences twelve years after the dissolution of the unhallowed marriages; and, including at least twelve years of historical account, reaches to about the hundred and fourth after the return from Babylon. It represents (1) Nehemiah's deep concern for the desolations of Jerusalem, and the commission he obtained from king Artaxerxes to rebuild the wall of it, i. ii. (2) His building of the wall and dedicating it, notwithstanding great opposition from the heathens around, iii. iv. vi. xii. 27-43. (3) His redressing the people's grievances, their debts, and mortgages, v. (4) His taking account of those who returned from Babylon, vii. (5) His care to promote the solemn reading of the law, fasting, and renovation of their covenant with God, viii.-x. (6) His care to replenish Jerusalem, and settle the priests, Levites, singers, and porters in their proper work, xi. xii. (7) His care to check unhallowed marriages, procure the Levites their provision, and restrain profanation of the Sabbath, xiii.

CHAPTER I.

1 Nehemiah, informed by Hanani concerning the afflicted state of Jerusalem, mourneth, fasteth, and prayeth. 5 His prayer.

THE words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. And it came to pass in the month Chisleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in Shushan¹ the palace,

2 That Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

3 And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven,²

5 And said, I beseech thee, O LORD God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him, and observe his commandments;

6 Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant Moses.

8 Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations.³

r A voice directly from heaven is not more decisive of a divine revelation than the voice of prophecy and its historic fulfilment. Accordingly God has been pleased to spread this evidence over the history of the four great empires, the Assyrian, the Persian, the Grecian, and Roman, but to concentrate it chiefly upon the history of the Jews, whose whole condition, past and present, has been made the continual theme of prophetic announcement; and thus their separation, their captivities, their scattering abroad, with their still unsettled condition, are all prophecies whose literal fulfilment constitutes such irresistible evidence of the divine origin of the Scriptures that contain them, that reason must acknowledge they came from God.—C.

r A voice directly from heaven is not more decisive of a divine revelation than the voice of prophecy and its historic fulfilment. Accordingly God has been pleased to spread this evidence over the history of the four great empires, the Assyrian, the Persian, the Grecian, and Roman, but to concentrate it chiefly upon the history of the Jews, whose whole condition, past and present, has been made the continual theme of prophetic announcement; and thus their separation, their captivities, their scattering abroad, with their still unsettled condition, are all prophecies whose literal fulfilment constitutes such irresistible evidence of the divine origin of the Scriptures that contain them, that reason must acknowledge they came from God.—C.

9 But if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them, though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there.

10 Now these are thy servants, and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong hand.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name; and prosper, I pray thee. thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man.⁴ For I was the king's cup-bearer.⁵

CHAPTER II.

1 Artaxerxes, understanding the cause of Nehemiah's sadness, sendeth him with letters and a commission to build the walls of Jerusalem. 9 Nehemiah, to the grief of the enemies of the Jews, cometh to Jerusalem. 12 He vieweth secretly the ruins of the walls. 17 He encourageth the Jews to build in spite of the scorn of the enemies.

AND it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king.¹ Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,²

3 And said unto the king, Let the king live for ever:³ why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

4 Then the king said unto me, For what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven.

5 And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in CHAPTER I. [Ver. 1. Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. Some have supposed that Nehemiah was descended from a priestly family, because it is said in ch. 10. 8, after a list of names, 'these were the priests.' Nehemiah is the first name on the list; but a careful examination shows that his name was placed at the head not because he was a priest, but because he was Tirshatha, or recognized leader of the nation. In the translation of 2 Mac. 1. 21 he is called 'Nehemiah the priest.' This, however, is an error, for the Greek has it, 'Nehemiah ordered the priests.' He was probably of the tribe of Judah, and perhaps of the royal house of David, as his forefathers were buried at Jerusalem. Nehemiah was a man distinguished for piety, energy, tact, and courage. With the single exception of Ezra he conferred more signal benefits upon his country than any man of that age. He found the people oppressed, the country desolate, the walls of Jerusalem in ruins. He rebuilt the walls, and thus laid the foundation of national independence. By his vigilance and prudence he overcame the opposition of powerful thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may ¹build it.

6 And the king said unto me, (the ¹queen also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it ¹pleased the king to send me; and I ¹set him a time.

7 Moreover, I said unto the king, If it please the king, let ¹letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah;⁵

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which ¹appertained to ¹the house, and for the ¹wall of the city,⁶ and for ¹the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, ¹according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. (Now the king had sent ¹captains of the army and horsemen with me.)⁷

10 When Sanballat the ¹Horonite, and Tobiah ¹the servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, it ¹grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three⁸ days.

12 ¶ And I ¹arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither ¹told I ¹any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem:⁸ neither ¹was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by night by the ¹gate of the valley, even before the dragon-well, and to the ¹dung-port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which ¹were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

14 Then I went on to the ¹gate of the fountain, and to the ¹king's pool: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by the

Its site is now marked by the extensive ruins of Sus, which cover a wide extent of plain between the rivers Eulæus and Shapur. See note on Es. 1. 2. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Sad defects still remain in the militant church. But whenever God has work to be done, he can easily find or qualify instruments for it. Lively saints may often be found where we could least expect them—courts not excepted. And no dignity or distance can make such a one careless of the honour of the church of God. The poverty or persecution which discourages others awakens his zeal and concern. In seasons of public, or private distress, fasting and tears should accompany our prayers. It is a great relief for a sorrowful spirit to pour out its complaints into the bosom of a compassionate God. While we have a God in Christ to go to, our case is never desperate. And if he pour out upon us his Spirit of grace and supplication, he will certainly hear us. Let us then, with holy and believing awe of his greatness and grace, rest on the stability of his promise. And let candid confessions of our sins and unworthiness attend our supplications for mercy. It is infinitely encouraging to us that we have to deal with a God who is our own God; a God who has done great things for us, and has pledged his promise to do more. Let us therefore put our own, and the hearts of all connected with the welfare of Zion, into his hand.

CHAPTER II. REFLECTIONS.—Strong grief can scarcely be concealed. And it becomes superior or others to observe the appearances of distress in those around them, and to sympathize with them in it. Even Jesus marks his people's groans, and puts their tear into his bottle. There is therefore no reason either for fear or for shame when sorrow for sin and for the affliction of God's people burden our heart and sadden our countenance. Nothing is more comely than meek and humble answers when given by distressed minds to great men. And pious ejaculations to God are proper to be intermingled with all our important dealings. The prayer of faith is never in vain. God will afford us friends, and help us where we scarcely ever expected it. It is easy with him to render the greatest on earth friendly and helpful to his church in a time of need. But every favour shown to the servants of God awakens the envy and rage of the wicked. They so heartily hate the cause of God that they are vexed exceedingly if any take it by the hand and zealously promote it, and are ready to attack them with every arrow of envenomed malice, derision, slander, and threatening. What strong faith in God, zeal for his glory, bold

DRAGON'S FOUNTAIN, JERUSALEM—WHERE NEHEMIAH WENT TO VIEW THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM. [Nehemiah, ii:13.]—"And I went out by night by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon well * * * and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire." In the center of the Ophel hill, in the Valley of Jehoshaphat, there is a fountain with an intermittent spring whose waters connect with the Pool of Siloam by a canal which runs through the hill. This fountain is called the Dragon's Well, because they have a tradition that a dragon swallows up the water when awake, the water rising again when he is asleep, and this waking and sleeping of the dragon causes the intermittent flow of the water. The water comes up in the bottom of a cave 25 feet deep excavated in the rock. By going down sixteen steps we reach a chamber 18 feet long by 10 feet wide and 10 feet high, its sides being built of old stones and its roof a pointed arch.

courage, and prudent discretion, are then necessary, in attempting any noted work for the Lord and his church. In this manner we bid fair to animate even cowards and sluggards to join with us in it! Many will second the labours of one that is zealous and active who had no courage to lead. Let us therefore instantly begin, as delays are dangerous: and let us carefully observe and acknowledge the kind interposals of Providence in all that we meet with.

CHAPTER IV.

1 While the enemies are wroth, and scoff, Nehemiah prayeth to God, and continueth the work. 7 Understanding the wrath and secrets of the enemy, he setteth a watch. 13 He armeth the labourers, 19 and giveth military precepts.

BUT it came to pass, that when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he ^{was} wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren, and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble^b Jews? will they fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they ^{revive} the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burnt?

3 Now Tobiah the Ammonite ^{was} by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox^d go up, he shall even break down their stone wall.

4 Hear, O our God;² for we are despised:³ and turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity:

5 And ^{cover} not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked ^{thee} to anger ^{before} the builders.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof:⁴ for the people^a had a mind to work.⁵

7 ^{But} it came to pass, ^{that} when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem were made up,⁶ and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were very^k wroth,

8 And conspired all of them together to come ^{and} to fight against Jerusalem, and to hinder it.

9 Nevertheless we ^{made} our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them.⁷

10 And Judah said, "The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and ^{there is} much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall.

11 And our adversaries said, "They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the ^{Jews} which dwelt by them came, they said unto us ten^p times, From all places whence ye shall return unto us,⁸ ^{they will be upon you.}⁹

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—It is a hopeful appearance when ministers are most forward in every good word and work; and when they undertake and go through their work with much solemn prayer and dependence on God. And it is very encouraging when multitudes of all ranks—tradesmen, ladies, nobles, and commons—unanimously concur in promoting the work of the Lord in an orderly manner. But how honourable is it if, like the men of Jericho, Gibeon, Mizpah, Zanoah, and the commons of Tekoah, we prefer the public interests to our own private concerns!

or if, like the Tekoites and Meremoth, we help our brethren after finishing our own share! When the work is the Lord's we cannot be too zealously affected; and every person, if he be but hearty, may do something in it. None are so little as to be useless; and none are so high as to be above it. And it is highly disgraceful, even for the greatest, to shift or neglect what God calls them to do in his church.

q The cry of the wives is exceedingly

2 For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many; therefore we take up corn for them, that we may eat, and live.

3 Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth.

4 There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards:

5 Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and lo, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.²

6 ¶ And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words.

7 Then I consulted³ with myself,⁴ and I rebuked⁵ the nobles and the rulers, and said unto them, Ye exact usury every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly against them.

8 And I said unto them, We, after our ability, have redeemed our brethren the Jews which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then they held their peace, and found nothing to answer.

9 Also I said, It is not good that ye do: ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God, because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies?

10 I⁶ likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, let us leave off this usury.

11 Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money,⁵ and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

⁸ Self-decision, when founded upon the promise of divine direction, is one of the most valuable qualities both in religion and worldly concerns. It does not proudly undervalue the counsel of a judicious friend; but where, as in the case of Nehemiah, that is scarcely to be had, it is thrown into no confusion, but retreats upon its own resources, stands self-collected when others are in confusion, and nobly independent of all but the grace of God.—C.

¹⁶ The general opinion of expositors is that this interest was paid monthly, and so amounted to 12 per cent. But if it was not so, of all, but of each, viz. money, wine, oil, and corn, then would it amount to 48 per cent., and in Syria and the adjoining countries money is still frequently lent at an interest of 30 per cent. The idea of a monthly payment is, however, totally unsupported by authority. Is it not therefore more likely that the word hundredth was equivalent to the phrase per centage, because 100 is the arithmetical basis upon which interest is calculated, and consequently that Nehemiah gives no intimation of the rate of interest, but 12 Then said they, We will restore them, and will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and took an oath of them,⁶ that they should do according to this promise.

13 Also I shook⁷ my lap, and said, So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and emptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the LORD. And the people did according to this promise.

14 ¶ Moreover, from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years,⁸ I and my brethren have not eaten the bread of the governor.

15 But the former governors that had been before me were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, besides forty shekels of silver;¹ yea, even their servants bare rule over the people: but so did not I, because of the fear of God.

16 Yea, also I continued in the work of this wall, neither bought we any land: and all my servants were gathered thither unto the work.

17 Moreover, there were at my table an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, besides those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.

18 Now that which was prepared for me daily was one ox, and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me; and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this required not I the bread² of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people.³

19 Think upon me, my God, for good, according to all⁴ that I have done for this people.

REFLECTIONS.—God's faithful builders are sure to have a share of the world's ridicule and contempt; and one wicked man encourages another. But though scoffers make their bands strong, God will shortly cover them with shame and confusion. Let saints then never discompose their souls on account of the most bitter or insolent contempt: God observes it, and will quickly resent it. Let them in patience possess their souls, commit their way to God, and go on more briskly with their Christian work. God's blessing will more than compensate men's revilings. And much may be done in a little time if all be hearty in lending their assistance. What a pity then is it that the people of God should scarcely ever be as harmonious and active in the Lord's work as the wicked are in their opposition to it! Nay, his more active servants have often as much trouble with the fears of their friends as with the terrors of their enemies. And false friends are more dangerous than open enemies. But be the plots of enemies ever so well laid, or ever so secret, God can discover or defeat them. Let then his infinite power and unbounded goodness encourage us to go on with our work, notwithstanding all the craft and malice of our adversaries. In all our spiritual work, all our attempts of reformation, let us put on the whole armour of God, and watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation. Let us, in our respective stations, unanimously unite, with heart and hand, against the common enemy; and count neither ease nor life dear unto us, that we may finish our course with joy. Religion bids fair to prosper when the professors thereof make earnest work of it, and endure hardship as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 2. The ground of complaint was this: The able-bodied men were kept at work on the walls. They received no pay, yet they had to provide food for themselves and families. They were obliged to buy, and to borrow the necessary money. Unscrupulous merchants and usurers took advantage of this, charged extravagant prices and exorbitant interest, so that many were obliged to mortgage their lands, and even give their children up to servitude. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Hard times and hard hearts when met together render the poor miserable indeed. And it is cruel to take advantage of our brethren's distress, and to make their yoke heavier by usurious exactions. Alas! how we bring hardship and famine on ourselves by our sins, and then complain of it. Those who have great families and little substance must learn to live by faith on God's promise and providence. And those who have small families and much substance should make their abundance a supply for their neighbours' wants; for often poor housekeepers are in much greater straits than the most wretched vagrants. But what a scandal to our holy religion is a worldly-minded and niggardly professor! And deliberate and aggravated is that theft which lies in retaining that which we have unjustly gotten. There can be no uprightness towards God without restitution to the oppressed. It is proper that rulers show themselves angry at what is sinful, that their subjects may be deterred from it and excited to duty. But reproofs ought to be given with great consideration and temper, lest otherwise they fail of their end. And warm and rough, though not furious, measures are to be taken with hardened and presumptuous transgressors. It is highly criminal to expose the people of God, and interests of religion, to the reproach of their enemies. And the strongest bonds are necessary to restrain worldlings from their covetous courses. But how scandalous is it for magistrates to enrich themselves, or indulge their servants, to the public hurt! Those, whether magistrates or others, in whose hearts the fear and love of God remarkably reign, will discover it by the exemplariness of their lives. In times of public distress they will even remit what was their unquestionable due. But infallible are the gracious

CHAPTER VI.

1 Sanballat practiseth by craft, by rumours, by hired prophecies, to terrify Nehemiah. 15 The wall is finished to the terror of the enemies. 17 Secret intelligence passeth between the enemies and the nobles of Judah.

NOW it came to pass, when "Sanballat, and Tobiah, and Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein, (though at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates.)

2 That Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages¹ in the plain of Ono:² but they thought to do me mischief.

3 And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?

4 Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner.

5 ¶ Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me, in like manner, the fifth time, with an open letter in his hand;³

6 Wherein was written, 'It is reported among the heathen, and Gashmu saith it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words.'

7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest⁴ them out of thine own heart.

9 For they all made us afraid,⁵ saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done: Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.

10 ¶ Afterward I came unto the house of Shemaiah⁶ the son of Delaiah, the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up;⁶ and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee; yea, in the night will they come to slay thee.⁷

12 And, lo, I perceived that God had not sent him;¹ but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him.²

13 Therefore was he hired, that I should be afraid, and do so, and sin, and that they might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me.

14 My God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat according to these their works, and on the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.³

15 ¶ So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty and two days.

16 And it came to pass, that when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.⁴

17 ¶ Moreover, in those days the nobles of Judah sent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them.

18 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son-in-law of Shechaniah the son of Arah; and his son Johanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam, the son of Berechiah.

19 Also they reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my words⁵ to him. And Tobiah sent letters to put me in fear.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Nehemiah committeth the charge of Jerusalem to Hanani and Hananiah. 5 A register found of the genealogy of them which came at the first out of Babylon, 9 of the people, 39 of the priests, 43 of the Levites, 46 of the Nehthims, 57 of the children of Solomon's servants, 63 and of the priests which could not show their pedigree. 66 The whole number of them, with their substance. 70 Their oblations.

NOW it came to pass, when the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and the porters, and the singers, and the Levites, were appointed,¹

2 That I gave my brother Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem: (for he was a faithful man, and feared God above many.)² rewards of sincere piety and disinterested benevolence from God, even when men overlook it. And it is pleasant to have them as a mark of our sacrificial relation to God.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—O the infernal subtlety and restlessness of Satan and his agents; and the need of heavenly wisdom and steady circumspection for resisting all their ensnaring and repeated solicitations! But business of consequence ought always to be preferred to matters of civility and compliment. It is common for the church's enemies to pretend friendship in order to ruin her; and no less so to represent her faithful ministers and members as traitors to government. But no lies, or malevolent reports, should weaken our hands from the work of God. They who have almighty power engaged for them may look up to God and be comforted. He will uphold them; and the more the enemies rage the more shall JEHOVAH's strength be perfected in our weakness. Yea, they shall see, to their grief, that he cares for his people, and that when he works none can hinder it. However great the opposition, and weak the instruments, he can speedily effect his work. And much good may be done in a short time if people are hearty in it, and have a good God and a pious man at the head of it. But a most dangerous plague are pretended and unfaithful ministers, treacherous magistrates, and villainous professors. The treachery of pretended friends is more to be feared than the malice of open enemies. And happy are those who, directed and encouraged of God, escape being ensnared in their nets. But for this we must walk circumspectly, and try the spirits: and be ready to risk every danger, rather than injure the cause of God, or even bring a reproach on our holy character or office. God marks the iniquities of his enemies, and will turn their deep-laid schemes against his people to their own confusion. Nor shall those who have ensnared themselves by sinful connections, or who assist them in their purposes, long escape the judgment which lingereth not.

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—The worship and service of God ought always to be preferred to our civil concerns, however important; and with great care ought princes and other rulers to make choice of their deputies: if possible they should fix upon such as are faithful and eminently fear God. Happy even amidst dangers are the cities and nations which have such to rule and protect them. Great caution is necessary for our own and the church's safety when we have

3 And I said unto them, ⁹Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them:³ and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

4 Now the city was ¹large and great: but the people were few therein, and the houses were ¹not builded.

5 ¶ And my God ¹put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy: and I found a register⁴ of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein,

⁸ Here is an account of the heads of the several families that first came up. Though it seems a little, use to us now, yet then it was of great use, to compare what they had been with what they now were. We may suppose they were much increased by this time; but it would do well for them to remember their small beginnings, that they might acknowledge God in multiplying their families, and building them up. By this means likewise their genealogies would be preserved, and the destination of their families kept up, till Messiah should come, and then all end be put to all their genealogies, which were preserved for his sake, but afterwards were useless.—J.

Referring to the discrepancies between the two accounts, Scott remarks, "that should any conjecture that some ancient copyist had inserted the wrong register, and that his mistake had been generally followed, the very conclusion would show that such alterations are almost always liable to detection; and no reasonable man would think it the least objection to the divine inspiration of the sacred Scriptures." The same commentator suggests this reflection on the laudable conduct of Nehemiah:—Provision is made in the gospel for the city of our God for far greater numbers than have yet been enrolled; we should therefore be devising means for replenishing it with inhabitants, as well as for building its walls.—J.

⁶ There are some families named here which are not in Ezra, as in ver. 22, and ver. 48, 49, 51, 52, which are all omitted in Ezra. For it must be considered that one of these accounts was taken by Ezra in Babylon, the other by Nehemiah in Judea. And therefore it is no wonder that a greater number are sometimes mentioned in Nehemiah than in Ezra, for in the first account that was taken of them many were ignorant of their genealogy; but before the last, the book of their genealogy was found. Lightfoot remarks, that the matter is to be apprehended thus: "That Nehemiah found that list of those that came up in the first of Cyrus, as it was taken then, and that he collected over the names of the families, as they lay in order there. He observed the order of that list in calling and listing them."—J.

9 Note. These variations, so far from proving any a priori evidence against the divine inspiration and authority of Ezra and Nehemiah, afford, on the contrary, the strongest evidence, at least of their integrity. Had they been forming a cunningly devised fable, the one would have minutely copied the other; but as truth was the object of both, each copied the register he formed or found (see ch. 7. 3), and each was correct, according to the time and place at which it was taken, varying, as the one refers to leaving Babylon, the other to arriving at Jerusalem, but agreeing when the genealogical and congregational families were summed up together, and thus amounting to 42,360.—C.

13 It is the opinion of Jacobus Capellus, that Zerubbabel is here meant by the Tirshatha. Whosoever he was, he expresses his hope that God might in time restore the Urim and Thummim (as he had done the nation), and so give answer about obscure and difficult matters, as had been done in former ages. But till then these priests were not admitted to partake of the most holy things, because it did not appear by good proof that they were of the family of the priests; and not to be, are the same thing, in law. But the Talmudists, as the same person observes, interpret these words as if it had been said: Till the dead rise, or till the Messiah come. For after the first temple was destroyed the cities of the Levites, with their suburbs, were wanting, and so were Urim and Thummim, and the kings of the house of Juah (Patriarch). The expression is by many understood as amounting to a perpetual prohibition, as if the Tirshatha had said that they should never eat of the most holy things.—I.

69 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five; six thousand seven hundred and twenty asses.

70 ¶ And some of the chief of the fathers gave unto the work. The Tirshatha gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty basons, five hundred and thirty priests' garments.

71 And some of the chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand and two hundred pound of silver.²

72 And that which the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities; and when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The religious manner of reading and hearing the law. 9 Nehemiah, Ezra, and the Levites comfort the people. 13 The forwardness of them to hear and be instructed. 16 They keep the feast of tabernacles.

AND all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water-gate; and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel.¹

2 And Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation, both of men and women, and all that could hear with understanding,² upon the first day of the seventh month.

3 And he read therein before the street that was before the water-gate³ from the morning⁴ until mid-day,⁵ before the men and the women, and those that could understand: and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit of wood,⁷ which they had made for the purpose; and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left

CHAPTER VIII. [Ver. 1. 'The book of the law of Moses' is a proper name, and was employed and understood by the Jews as definitely as we employ the name Pentateuch. It is interesting to observe, 1. That the people all knew of the existence of such a book, and that they were acquainted with its general contents. 2. That they were aware that the book was in the possession of Ezra. It is in the highest degree probable that the book referred to was the original autograph committed by Moses to the custody of the priests, and laid up beside the ark. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Not strong walls, but knowledge of and obedience to God, are the great safety of cities and nations. Nothing is more necessary for the establishment or preservation of true religion than a diligent study and thorough acquaintance with the word of God. Men, women, and children ought to vie with each other in their study and knowledge of it. And it is a great pleasure to faithful preachers to have hearers who hunger and thirst after it. Not only ought God's word to be read, but also explained and enforced on the conscience. And solemn prayers and praises should be joined with every public religious instruction. Sermons bid fair for success when the hearers are solemnly attentive. Nor will those who relish the word of God ever think the time long which is spent in hearing. Short sermons and soon-wearied hearers are sad tokens of cold and careless hearts. O what a happy presage it is when God's law cuts men's consciences to the quick, and makes them weep from the heart! Penitent mourning makes way for spiritual mirth. They who sow in tears shall reap in joy. And it is the pleasantest part of a minister's work to com-hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam.

5 And Ezra 'opened the book in the sight^s of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and when he opened it, all the people stood^m up:

6 And Ezra *blessed the LORD, the great God: and all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with *lifting up their hands; and they ^pbowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law; and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book in the law of God *distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.⁹

9 ¶ And Nehemiah, which is *the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is *holy unto the LORD your God; mournⁿ not nor weep: for all the people *wept when they heard the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat,¹ and drink the sweet, and *send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our LORD: neither be ye sorry; for *the joy of the LORD is your strength.²

11 So the Levites stilled all the people,³ saying, *Hold your peace; for the day is holy; neither *be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declaredⁿ unto them.

13 ¶ And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even *to understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law which the LORD had commanded by⁴ Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths in the feast of the seventh month.⁵

15 And that they should *publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount,⁶ and fetch olive-branches,⁶ and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

16 ¶ So the people went forth, and brought

3 This is decidedly the most extraordinary religious service upon record. On the first day of the month the people were assembled, as one man, at the feast of trumpets, ch. 8:1. On the second was an assembly for studying the law (ch. 8:13), and from that time till the last day of the meeting (ch. 8:18) the reading and exposition of the word continued for six hours every day, with other six hours for confession of sin to God and solemn religious worship, that is, of sacrifice, singing, and prayer, ch. 9:3. On the tenth was the day of atonement, on the fourteenth began the feast of tabernacles, which lasted seven days; on the twentieth, the people and rulers separated themselves from all idolatrous strangers, and concluded the service with a solemn confession of sin, and the law of the Lord.—C.

7 Europeans cannot easily form an idea of the readiness with which an Asiatic assembly can sit down in an open field, court, or street. them, and made themselves booths, every one upon the roof of his house,⁷ and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water-gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and sat under the booths: for since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so:⁸ and there was very great gladness.

18 Also day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he ^mread in the book of the law of God: and they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was a solemn assembly, according unto the manner.

CHAPTER IX.

1 A solemn general fast and humiliation. 4 The Levites make a religious confession of God's goodness, and of the national sins.

NOW in the twenty and fourth day of this month the children of Israel were assembled with ^bfasting, and with sackclothes, and ^cearth upon them.

2 And the seed of Israel ^aseparated themselves from all strangers,¹ and stood and ^cconfessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And they stood up in their place, and ^dread in the book of the law of the LORD their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and ^eworshipped the LORD their God.³

4 ¶ Then stood up upon the ^gstairs,⁴ of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and ^hcried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, Stand up⁵ and bless the LORD your God for ever and ever; and blessed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, even thou, ⁱart LORD alone: thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou ^kpreservest them all;⁶ and the host of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the LORD the God, who didst choose Abram, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and gavest him the name of Abraham;

8 And foundest his heart faithful before thee, and madest a covenant with him, to give fort with the gospel of Christ those that mourn. For the gospel explained and believed, and the consolations of Christ experienced, effectually rejoice the heart, and qualify for the performance of duty or resistance of enemies. And a sense of God's redeeming kindness powerfully instigates to charitable benevolence.

But how often the institutions of God's word are unknown to the most of professors! What a multitude of things will diligent searchers of the Scriptures find there, which they had forgotten or had never duly considered! It will convince them of many negligences and ignorances. Well spent are those hours which are occupied in earnest conversing with God by his word. And happy is the effect when such as have access to it speedily and cheerfully practise whatever they find therein commanded.

19 In this beautiful public prayer there is a summary, brief but comprehensive, of the whole history contained in the Pentateuch. The prayer contains therefore a remarkable testimony to the authenticity and divine authority of the five books of Moses.—P.

by night, to show them light, and the way wherein they should go.

20 Thou gavest also thy 'good Spirit⁶ to instruct them, and withheldst not thy manna from their mouth, and gavest them water for their thirst.

21 Yea, forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they 'lacked nothing: their clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.⁷

22 Moreover, thou 'gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst divide them into 'corners: so they possessed the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

23 Their children also 'multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and 'broughtest them into the land concerning which thou hadst 'promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess it.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land, and thou 'subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as they would.

25 And they took 'strong cities, and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, wells⁹ digged,¹ vineyards, and olive-yards, and fruit trees in abundance: so they did eat, and were filled, and became fat, and delighted themselves in thy great goodness.

26 Nevertheless they 'were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and 'cast thy law behind their backs, and 'slew thy prophets, which testified against them to turn 'them to thee, and they wrought great provocations.

27 Therefore thou 'deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed² them: and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and, according to thy manifold mercies, thou gavest them 'saviours, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

28 But after they had 'rest, they 'did evil again before thee;³ therefore leftest thou 'them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven: and 'many times didst thou deliver them according to thy mercies;

REFLECTIONS.—It is a great mercy when God's word burdens men's consciences with a sense of their sins; and when reformation from sin and fasting for it go hand in hand. Those fasts are made profitable in which men's souls are afflicted for their sins, the bands of wickedness are loosed, intimate fellowship with God enjoyed, and in which God's goodness leads to repentance. O what multitudes of mercies to us and to our fathers may a diligent observer of providence discover! What gracious calls and covenants! What deliver-commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (which "if a man do, he shall live in them;) and withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear:

30 Yet many years didst thou "forbear them, and "testifiedst against them by thy Spirit⁴ in thy prophets; yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless, for thy "great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art "a gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore, "our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God,⁵ who keepest covenant and mercy, let not "all the trouble⁶ seem little before thee that hath come upon us,⁷ on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the "time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit thou art "just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly.

34 Neither have "our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify against them.

35 For they "have not served thee in their kingdom,⁸ and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou gavest before them; neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, we are "servants this day; and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers, to eat the fruit thereof, and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it:

37 And it yieldeth much increase unto "the kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins: also they "have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure,⁹ and we are in great distress.

38 And "because of all this we make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, seal¹ unto it.²

ance, direction, provision, and establishment! What giving of the law and of the promises! What warnings against and pardons of our sins! What amazing patience and long-suffering! What well-timed and well-adjusted corrections! And it is necessary to confess our fathers' iniquities as well as our own, or we make ourselves heirs to them, and shall share in the punishment of them. We must likewise search out the aggravations of our sins, and seek not to exculpate ourselves, but to justify God. O what a root of wickedness and woe is the pride of men's heart! Often by it we revolt from the free and honourable service of God into the basest slavery. But God's infinite mercy, and his constant adherence to his new relation with Christ, and in him with us, ought to encourage us to return to him under the deepest sense of our provocations. And solemn evangelical promises to God is peculiarly proper when we have notoriously departed from him, are sharply corrected by him, and earnestly desire to return to him.

REFLECTIONS.—It is honourable to be solemnly and publicly bound in the service of God; and especially is it becoming when they who have the lead in civil or sacred offices, or in solemn fasting, are correspondingly forward in regular covenanting with God. But in all our covenants of duty a respect must be had to all God's commandments; and a peculiar guard be placed over those temptations which we have seen to be the occasion of other men's falls and to prove most dangerous to ourselves. They ought to be greatly willingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem.²

THE CORINTHIAN CANAL—CONNECTING THE COUNTRIES OF ATHENS AND SPARTA, THE CITIES WHICH SENT AN EMBASSY TO SUSA, CAPITAL OF PERSIA, ABOUT THE TIME THE EVENTS RECORDED IN THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF NEHEMIAH TOOK PLACE. [NEHEMIAH, xi: 1.]—"And the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem." The things recorded in the eleventh chapter of Nehemiah are connected, by the calculation of Archbishop Usher, with B. C. 445. This was the year when the thirty years peace between Athens and Sparta was completed, and about the time, strange to say, that after the death of Cimon, negotiations for peace were opened between Athens and Persia, and an Athenian embassy under Callias was sent to Susa, capital of Persia. Thus we have the strange historical relationship of Greece and Palestine to Persia. About this time the Persian empire extended from India to Egypt, including the wide regions between the Black Sea, the Caucasus, the Caspian Sea, the Persian Gulf, the Indian Ocean, and the Arabian desert, and parts of Europe and Africa. We give a picture here of the Corinthian canal. The Isthmus of Corinth separated the ancient nations of Athens and Sparta.

4 Iddo, Ginnetho, Abijah,

5 Miamin, Maadiah, Bilgah,

7 Sallu, Amok, Hilkiyah, Jedaiah. These were the chief of the priests, and of their brethren, in the days of Jeshua.

8 Moreover, the Levites: Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah, which was over the thanksgiving, he and his brethren.

9 Also Bakkukiah and Unni, their brethren, were over against them in the watches.

10 ¶ And Jeshua begat Joiakim, Joiakim also begat Eliashib, and Eliashib begat Joiada, 11 And Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua.¹

12 And in the days of Joiakim were priests, the chief of the fathers: of Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah;

22 ¶ The Levites, in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers; also the priests, to the reign of Darius the Persian.²

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in the book of the "Chronicles," even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, according to the commandment of David the man of God, ward over against ward.

25 Mattaniah,^b and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters, keeping the ward at the thresholds⁴ of the gates.

26 These were in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest, the scribe.

27 ¶ And at the dedication of the wall⁵ of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness, both with thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of Netophathi;⁶

29 Also from the house of Gilgal,⁷ and out of the fields of Geba and Azmaveth: for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.⁸

31 Then I brought up the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the dung-gate.⁹

37 And at the fountain-gate, which was over against them, they went up by the stairs¹ of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the water-gate eastward.

38 And the other company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond the tower of the furnaces, even unto the broad wall.²

39 And from above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish-gate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep-gate; and they stood still in the prison-gate.

40 So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

43 Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced; for God had made them rejoice with great joy: the wives also and the children rejoiced; so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

44 ¶ And at that time were some appointed over the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the first-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them, out of the fields of the cities, the portions of the law for the priests and Levites: for Judah rejoiced for the priests and for the Levites that waited.⁵

45 And both the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God,⁶ and the ward of the purification, according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son.

46 For in the days of David and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

47 And all Israel, in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the singers and the porters, every day his portion: and they sanctified⁷ holy things unto the Levites; and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.⁸

CHAPTER XIII. REFLECTIONS.—It is strange to observe how unacquainted with God's law many are who have daily access to study it! and while the common people are ready to comply with his mandates, often the principal leaders in the church are the most base and treacherous adherents to wickedness. But no dignity must plead exemption from rebuke. They who sin before all should be put to shame before all. The higher a man's station and the holier his office the more scandalous are his sins. Reformers have need therefore of great zeal, prudence, and fearlessness of man. But what vile robbery of God and wicked injury to the church is the withholding of ministers' dues from them! A scandalous maintenance makes a scandalous ministry. Few ministers are willing to serve Christ in hunger and nakedness, and amidst reproach, peril, and sword. Most are even ready to betake themselves to farming or merchandise, or like worldly cares, when they have scarcely a temptation to it: but when they first show themselves unworthy of their maintenance, no wonder the people grudge it. Sacred is God's claim to his holy Sabbath; and heinous their guilt who dare presumptuously to rob him of his property. Nobles, as well as others, ought to be

¹ Upon the reading of the law separation is made from the mixed multitude. ⁴ Nehemiah at his return causeth the chambers to be cleansed. ¹⁰ He reformeth the offices in the house of God, 15 the violation of the sabbath, 23 and the marriages with strange wives.

ON that ¹day ⁴they read in the book of Moses² in the audience³ of the people; and therein was found written, ⁶that the Ammonite and the Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever;⁴

² Because they ⁴met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but ⁴hired Balaam against them, that he should curse them: howbeit our God ⁴turned the curse into a blessing.

³ Now it came to pass, when they ⁴had heard the law, that they separated from Israel all the ⁴mixed multitude.

⁴ ¶ And before this, ⁴Eliashib the priest, having the oversight⁵ of the chamber of the house of our God, ⁴was allied unto ⁴Tobiah;⁶

⁵ And he had prepared for him ⁴a great chamber, where aforetime they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, (which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters,) and the offerings of the priests.

⁶ But in all this time ⁴was not I at Jerusalem: for ⁴in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon⁷ came I unto the king, and after certain days⁸ obtained⁹ I leave of the king.

⁷ And I came to Jerusalem,¹ and ⁴understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the ⁴courts of the house of God.

⁸ And it grieved me sore; therefore ⁴I cast forth all the household-stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

⁹ Then I commanded, and they ⁴cleansed the chambers; and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat-offering and the frankincense.

¹⁰ ¶ And I perceived that ⁴the portions of the Levites had not been given ⁴them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one ⁴to his field.²

¹¹ Then ⁴contended I with the rulers, and said, ⁴Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them³ together, and set them in their place.⁴

¹² Then ⁴brought all Judah the tithe of the corn, and the new wine, and the oil, unto the treasuries.⁵

¹³ And I made treasurers over the treasuries, Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe; and ¹⁵ ¶ In those days saw I in Judah ⁴some treading wine-presses on the sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath-day: and I testified ⁴against them in the day wherein they sold victuals.

¹⁶ There dwelt ⁴men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

¹⁷ Then I ⁴contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing ⁴is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath-day?

¹⁸ Did^e not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet ye bring more wrath³ upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.

¹⁹ And it came to pass, that, when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the sabbath, ⁴I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath: and ⁴some of my ⁴servants set I at the gates, ⁴that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath-day.

²³ ¶ In those days also saw I Jews ⁴that had married wives of Ashdod, of Ammon, and of Moab.

tion of the Lord's-day. Though their laws, or the sanctions attending them, cannot convert souls, they may oblige vice to hide itself as ashamed. And did magistrates and ministers but faithfully concur in this matter according to God's law, much good might be done. Nations and churches quickly relapse into their former corruptions; and into none more readily than unhallowed connections in marriage. And none are sufficient to restrain men. The sharpest rebukes, corrections, and brands of infamy, are necessary to check abominations which have once become fashionable. And it is a great mercy if, in critical conjunctures, a magistrate or minister is helped so to behave in his station, as that he may look up to God for a gracious reward.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

In the two preceding books we have seen God's marvellous preservation of those Jews who returned to their own country. In this we have an account of his marvellous preservation of those who continued in the eastern parts of the Persian empire. Particularly, (1) How God brought Esther to be queen, and Mordecai to be great at the Persian court, to prepare them to be instruments of the intended deliverance, ch. i. ii. vi. (2) Upon what provocation, and by what arts, Haman obtained an irrevocable order from the Persian king for the destruction of all the Jews, iii. (3) The great distress into which the publishing of this order cast the Jews, particularly Esther and Mordecai, iv. (4) The defeating of Haman's particular plot against Mordecai's life, v. vi. vii. (5) The defeating of his general plot against the Jewish nation, viii. ix. (6) The joyful commemoration and happy issue of the deliverance, ix. x. [The authorship of this book is not stated. That it was written by an eye-witness of the events which it records is evident. There is a vividness of description, a minuteness of detail, and an acquaintance with the internal arrangements of the royal palace, which prove that the writer must have lived in the court of the Persian monarch. The only man mentioned in the book itself who could have written it is Mordecai; and it is highly probable he was the author. Independent of its sacred character as a part of the canon of Scripture, Esther is highly valuable as affording a vivid picture of the plots and intrigues, the public policy and domestic economy, of the Persian court. It is singular that in the Septuagint version, and others made from it, this book appears in a different form. It has various interpolations, prefixed, interspersed, and appended; but all so woven in as to form a complete and consistent narrative. The additions to the canonical book must have been made at a comparatively early period. P.]

CHAPTER I. [Ver. 1. Three monarchs of this name are mentioned in the Bible:—1. The father of Darius the Mede, who is well known in history as Cyaxeres, the conqueror of Nineveh; and who began to reign in B.C. 634. 2. Ahasuerus, king of Persia, mentioned in Ezr. 4. 6; and who was the same as Cambyzes. He began to reign in B.C. 529. 3. The Ahasuerus here spoken of, who has been identified with the Xerxes of classic historians. The traits of character described in this book accord well with those mentioned by Greek writers. He was a rash, unscrupulous, and sensual tyrant; easily influenced by passion, and thus open to the devices of crafty counsellors. It was in the third year of his reign he gave the grand feast to his nobles mentioned in ver. 3; and it was in the same year, probably at the very same time, he assembled his chief officers to deliberate on the invasion of Greece. P.]

Ver. 5. [Shushan, called by the Greeks Susa, was the ancient capital of Elam. It was captured by the Assyrians about B.C. 650. It was subsequently occupied by Cyrus, and was by him restored to Babylon. Daniel resided in it for a time, Da. viii. Under the Persian monarchy Shushan was a royal city, the king residing there for a portion of each year. Nehemiah was in Shushan when he heard of the desolation of Jerusalem, Ne. i. The site of the ancient capital is now marked by a number of large and desolate mounds, lying between the rivers Ulai, Da. 8. 2, and Dizful. The ruins cover an area nearly four miles in circuit.

PEDESTAL OF AGRIPPA, ATHENS—SHOWING ALSO THE TEMPLE OF THESEUS, STANDING WHEN AHASUERUS FOUGHT THE GREEKS IN THE BATTLE OF SALAMIS. [Esther, i:1.]—"Now it came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus (this is Ahasuerus which reigned from India even unto Ethiopia, over a hundred and seven and twenty provinces)." Ahasuerus is the name of the Persian king the Greeks knew as Xerxes, the latter being the Greek form of the word. The characters of the two kings as described by sacred and profane history correspond. Ahasuerus in the beginning of his reign organized an expedition for the purpose of subjugating Greece. The battle of Salamis, in which the Persians under Ahasuerus fought the Greeks, was in sight of the scene represented by the above picture. The Temple of Theseus which we see between the Pedestal of Agrippa on the left, and the stone wall on the right, was in all probability standing when this battle was fought. This temple was built in the fifth century, B. C., and is to-day the most perfect of the ancient buildings in Athens.

8 And the drinking was according to the law; none did 'compel:⁹ for so the king had appointed¹ to all the officers of his house, that they should do according to every man's pleasure.

9 Also Vashti the queen made a feast for the women¹ in the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

10 ¶ On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was 'merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, 'Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven² chamberlains³ that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king,

11 To bring Vashti the queen before the king with the crown-royal, to show the people and the princes her beauty; for she was fair to look on.⁴

12 But the queen Vashti refused⁵ to come at the king's commandment by his chamberlains;⁶ therefore was the king very wroth, and his anger burned in him.

13 ¶ Then the king said to the wise men, which knew the times, (for so was the king's manner toward all that knew law and judgment:

14 And the next unto him was Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, the 'seven princes of Persia and Media, which saw the king's face,⁷ and which sat the first in the kingdom.)

15 What⁸ shall we do unto the queen Vashti according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus by the chamberlains?

16 And Memucan⁸ answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not done wrong⁹ to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise⁷ their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt⁹ and wrath.¹

The Targum gives this interpretation:—'Ever in man shall rule in his own house, and compel his wife to speak in the language of her husband and in the language of his people.' It appears that the Persians when they married foreign wives permitted them to rule the harem as they thought proper, and to use in it their own language. The decree of Ahasuerus was intended to put a stop to this practice.—P.

REFLECTIONS.—Insatiable is the nature of covetousness and ambition, which gathers to itself all people and countries, yet is nothing nearer contentment. Yea, kingdoms, when once they are overgrown, are near the brink of decay and ruin. What vast expenses do many sacrifice to the idol of pride—expenses which might have relieved many helpless families. In what awful manner shall those heathens, who would urge none to

THEATRE OF BACCHUS DIONYSUS — WHERE ÆSCHYLUS BROUGHT OUT HIS PLAY REPRESENTING THE DEFEAT OF THE PERSIANS LED BY AHASUERUS, EIGHT YEARS AFTER THE BATTLE OF SALAMIS. [ESTHER, ii:1.]—"After these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done and what had been decreed against her." The theatre of Bacchus Dionysus is called the cradle of the dramatic art of Greece. Here is where the masterpieces of Æschylus, Sophocles, Euripides and Aristophanes were first brought before the Greeks. This theatre was frequently altered during its history, but when we see the above view we may know that we are looking at the very spot where the theatre always stood. Æschylus whose plays were acted here, fought against the Persian army led by Ahasuerus in the battle of Salamis. Eight years after this battle, his play, the "Persians," was performed in the theatre of Dionysus at Athens. The foundations of two sanctuaries of Dionysus have been excavated here, one of them dating from the time of the Persian wars. To the north and rising directly above this theatre is the Acropolis, and if one could have been standing on the top of the Acropolis when the battle of Salamis was fought he would have had a view of this decisive conflict between the Greeks and the Persians.

Esther,¹) his uncle's daughter; for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was fair and beautiful:² whom Mordecai (when her father and mother were dead) took for his own daughter.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of Hegai,³ that Esther was brought also unto the king's house,⁴ to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

9 And the maiden pleased him, and she obtained⁵ kindness of him; and he speedily gave her her things for purification, with such things as belonged to her,¹ and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house: and he preferred² her and her maids unto the best place of the house of the women.

drink, rise up in judgment against those professed Christians who send round their healths, their toasts, and send round sin and death along with them! Yea, ordinarily hard drinking, however unforced, issues in the misery or shame of those who occasioned it. If persons be once intoxicated with liquor, how imprudent their conduct! they are ready to dishonour themselves or their nearest relations, and to require what cannot be decently granted. And when pride meets with pride the issue is contention and ruin. It is easier to govern a kingdom than to rule our own proud spirit. But especially unhappy are those contentions between married persons which happen before company. The bad consequences of them may never be cured. It is indeed dangerous for kingdoms to indulge disobedience in the wives of rulers; but death or divorce ought to be the last means used to prevent it. Nor ought even the general welfare of kingdoms to be founded in injustice to particulars. But O the wisdom and power of God! he makes all the follies and wickedness, as well as the counsels of mankind, to work for his own glory and the good of his church and people.

CHAPTER II. REFLECTIONS.—What is done in haste and passion issues in bitter repentance and grief. And what odd shifts crafty courtiers will take to avoid, coming under the power of a female whom they have injured. Yea, men will practise the greatest extravagance and wickedness to gratify their fleshly lusts. Surely we may here observe the need there was of the gospel, in order to reduce men to the observance even of the plainest laws of nature; and at the same time we discern the wisdom of God in carrying on his wise and holy designs by means of the most simple methods. What care he takes of orphans and fatherless! And great is the care which men ought to take of them. Yea, it is comely when near relations have a tender and fixed regard for one another. Great prudence is sometimes necessary to enable us to discern what truths may be told, and what concealed, without bordering on falsehood. And the guardians of virgins ought to take the greatest care of them, especially if they are brought into slippery and dangerous situations. How strangely God brings treasonable plots to light! And it is an advantage for courts to have faithful attendants; and very honourable to risk our own life for the sake of our sovereign, even when we have no prospect of reward.

CHAPTER III. REFLECTIONS.—The very worst of men are often exalted to the highest honours; and exalted too to render their shame and ruin in the end the more conspicuous and dreadful. Often the cringing complaisance of others lays a snare for the truly godly. And there is need therefore of strong faith and ardent zeal to make us take a singular course at the hazard of all that is dear to us in this world. But no consideration must influence us to that which is evil. Of what intolerable pride, insatiable cruelty, and deep-rooted antipathy to the people of God are some men possessed! And often courtiers mark out the worst of the subjects as the objects of their resentments. The people of God are ordinarily loaded with the vilest calumnies in order to encompass their ruin. And pride, malice, and revenge, met together, stick at nothing to obtain their own ends. Some men are very lavish of their money in the service of the devil, who would be absolute churls in the service of God. And crafty courtiers often make princes believe what is for their unspeakable hurt to be for their inexpressible advantage. But miserable is the state of nations when flattering sycophants can sway the sovereign to everything horrid at their pleasure. And it is absurd for princes or others to riot in mirth and pleasure when the church is in danger and the public perplexed. But there is no counsel nor device effectual against the Lord. Even Haman's appeal to the lot for marking out a lucky day for the destruction of the PRISON OF SOCRATES; ATHENS—WHERE SOCRATES, BORN FIVE YEARS AFTER THE BATTLE OF SALAMIS, WAS POISONED BY HIS COUNTRYMEN. [Esther, iii:1.]—Socrates was born about five years after the battle of Salamis. He is regarded as the greatest spirit of the pagan world. He was born at the time when Grecian civilization had reached its highest point of splendor. The high civilization to which the Greeks attained at the time Socrates was born is thought to have been due to the triumph which the Greeks, as representing western civilization, won over the Persians, representing the civilization of the east. The armies of the east that aroused and regenerated the Greeks were led by Ahasuerus, the king mentioned in the first verse of the third chapter of Esther. We give above a picture of the prison of Socrates, in sight of the Acropolis and the Pnyx, and of the neighborhood of the battle where the Greeks fought the Persians under Ahasuerus. The poet, Shelly, called Socrates the Jesus Christ of Greece.

CHAPTER III.

¹ Haman, advanced by the king, and despised by Mordecai, seeketh revenge upon all the Jews: 7 He casteth lots. 8 He obtaineth by calumny a decree of the king to put the Jews to death.

AFTER these things did king Ahasuerus promote^a Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, and advanced him, and set his seat above all the princes that were with him.

2 And all the king's servants, that were in the king's gate, bowed, and revered Haman; for the king had so commanded concerning him: but Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence.¹

3 Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, Why transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai's matters would stand: for he had told them that he was a Jew.²

5 And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had showed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews³ that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

7 ¶ In the first month, (that is, the month Nisan,) in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, they cast ^bPur, that is, the lot,⁴ before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.

8 ¶ And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not⁵ for the king's profit to suffer them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written that they may be destroyed;⁶ and I will pay⁷ ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasures.⁸

¹ The most probable explanation of this is, that Haman was an Amalekite, and Mordecai scorned to do homage or show respect in any way to one of that hated nation. Possibly also Mordecai saw the wily and traitorous heart of the powerful but unscrupulous adviser. The sequel shows that Haman's boasted loyalty and devotion to the king was assumed for purposes of personal aggrandizement.

² Agur was the common name of the kings of Amalek, and whom Israel was commanded to have no peace. Nothing can account for the refusal of Mordecai to do an act of ordinary courtesy to his superior, but the idea that he judged himself thereby to be transgressing a commandment of God. He recollected how Saul his kinsman had suffered for sparing the wicked Agag—he dreaded to himself suffer for howling to his equally wicked descendant.

³ Every single evil passion passes immediately into another when temptation of the flesh appears, and to have been merely proud, instantly he becomes immeasurably cruel—he was offended by the neglect of one man, whom his pride disdains to punish; but in revenge of the insignificant insult his cruelty enacts the destruction of a whole nation.

⁴ ch. 9. 24. Eze. 21. 21. He tried to fix upon a lucky day for his project.

⁵ The casting of lots to find out fortunate months and days, and even hours, is still all-prevalent in Persia. The king maintains an astrologer for this superstitious purpose. European almanacs were formerly filled with such vain but too successful impositions upon credulity, and even yet there are those who prefer one month or one day of the week to another for special undertakings. All this is a departure from God that, rightly considered, amounts to idolatry. The word and Spirit of God, and a conscience void of offence, are the only oracles a true believer dares or requires to consult.

a lure to the king's credulity, and extirpation. The offer amounts to above two millions of our money, but was not to come out of Haman's private property, as appears from 1. 11, but from the product of the plunder and confiscation arising from the execution of the decree.

^d The Persians have stones in their rings, which answer the purpose of seals. On these their names are frequently engraved, and the impression serves for their signature. It was probably for the purpose of sealing this writing that the king had previously given Haman his ring.

CHAPTER IV. REFLECTIONS.—A good man severely feels and laments the heavy strokes of Providence, whilst with humble resignation he submits to the rod: and it is peculiarly grievous to him that others should suffer for his sake. How brave is it to espouse the cause of God when it seems desperate and sinking! But unhappy are those courts where all are so abandoned to gaiety, pleasure and mirth, that nothing serious or mournful dare enter. Yea, the pride or base fear of princes has introduced the most unaccountable laws, hurtful to themselves, families, and 7 And Mordecai told him ⁴of all that had happened unto him, and of the sum of the money that Haman had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews,⁵ to destroy them.

8 Also he gave him the copy of the writing⁶ of the decree that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to show it unto Esther, and to declare it unto her, and to ⁷charge her that she should go in unto the king, to make ⁸supplication unto him, and to make request before him for her people.

9 And Hatach came and ¹told Esther the words of Mordecai.

10 ¶ Again¹ Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai;

11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into ²the inner court, who is not called, there is ³one law of his to put him to death,⁷ except such to ⁴whom the king shall hold out the golden sceptre,⁸ that he may live: but I have ⁵not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days.

12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, Think ¹not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews.

14 For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then ²shall there enlargement⁹ and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth whether ³thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?¹

15 ¶ Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer,

16 Go, gather together all the Jews *that are present*² in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens³ will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law; and if I perish, I perish.⁴

17 So Mordecai went⁵ his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

CHAPTER V.

¹ Esther, adventuring on the king's favour, obtaineth the grace of the golden sceptre, and inviteth the king and Haman to a banquet. ⁶ She, being encouraged by the king to name her suit, inviteth them to another banquet the next day. ⁹ Haman, proud of his advancement, repineth at the contempt of Mordecai. ¹⁴ By the advice of his wife and friends he prepareth for him a gallows.

NOW it came to pass on ¹the third day, that Esther ²put on her royal apparel, and stood in the ³inner court¹ of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat

2 And it was ¹so, when the king saw Esther the queen standing in the court, that she obtained favour in his sight: and the king ²held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre.

3 Then said the king unto her, ¹What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? it shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom.²

4 And Esther ¹answered, If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the ²banquet that I have prepared for him.

5 Then the king said, Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

6 ¶ And the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine, ¹What is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

7 Then ¹answered Esther, and said, My petition and my request is; subjects. But how friendly is it when all the members of Christ, however great, sympathize with one another in their distress! God sometimes permits the most discouraging circumstance to exercise the faith and brighten the crown of the redeemed. And it is necessary to consider well the ends of Providence in putting us into our stations, and to labour to let slip no opportunity of answering them. If we have faith to trust in God he will never fail us. But if through unbelief we decline the path of duty, we may expect the danger which we sinfully decline. In times of great distress, solemn fasting and supplication to God are leading means of deliverance. And such as are confined ought to join in the work as well as the attenders in public. In all our distresses there is a throne of grace open and a God who heareth prayer. When we are truly humbled under our sins, we may hope that God will deliver us from our afflictions. And while we desire the prayers of others, let us never forget to be importunate for ourselves. And having by the prayers of faith committed our way to the Lord, we may, with the greatest courage and resolution, venture on the most dangerous work to which in providence we have a

ON that night could not the king sleep;¹ and he commanded to bring the book of records of the chronicles;² and they were read before the king.³

2 And it was found written, That Mordecai had told of Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, What honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, There is nothing done for him.

4 ¶ And the king said, Who is in the court? (Now Haman was come into the outward court of the king's house, to speak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.)⁴

5 And the king's servants said unto him, Behold, Haman standeth in the court. And the king said, Let him come in.

6 So Haman came in. And the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour? (Now Haman "thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?)

2 These chronicles were written in verse, and would therefore form an embellished narrative, well suited to amuse the sleepless king. The famous Persian poem of Ferdowsy is nothing but such a chronicle of events from the creation till the tenth century. Similar poetic records may be found in all countries emerging from barbarism; and, in Persia, they continue down till the present day.—C.

3 We have here a key to Esther's position of her request. She was guided from first to last by divine wisdom. She may not herself have been fully conscious of it; yet still she was an instrument in God's hands. Matters were not yet ripe for action. The gallows had not been erected. Mordecai's loyalty and devotion had not been fully developed.—P.

4 What a blessing is a government where liberty, and life, and death stand not in the will of any man, but solely in the law, openly administered, and deciding upon public evidence, not upon private insinuation! Haman, without a proof of crime, and obtained sentence of death against a nation, and now by a single writ expects the immediate execution of Mordecai! Yet, in lands of law and liberty, let it never be forgotten, that every nation was at one period of its history despotically governed, and that to the light of Christianity is due all the real liberties that any nation has established and enjoyed.—C.

10 Then the king said to Haman, "Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: let nothing fail² of all that thou hast spoken.

14 And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and "hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—Prudence and courage must be joined to our prayers if we would succeed in any work for God. And a plentiful harvest of joy shall they reap who sow in the tears and mourning of faith. They who venture all for God shall find him able to do for them unspeakably better than their most sanguine hopes. While himself is easily accessible, casting out none that come to him, he can dispose the spirits of the haughtiest princes to whatever he pleases. But in our dealing with great men, it is best first to conciliate their affection before we ask important favours: and to watch the favourable moment is the best way to insure success. They who are careful to please God need neither fear nor care who are displeased with them for so doing. But pitiful and miserable is the condition of the proud. Easily they are puffed up with that which is intended to ruin them, and unmeasurably fretted at that which could never hurt them. Their pride and discontentment create them numberless miseries, and rob them of the enjoyment of their mercies: and the curse of God is often visible upon them in the midst of all their great possessions. But it is unhappy for proud spirits to have rash and imprudent advisers, who spur them on to the most debasing resentment. And base are those minds which promote revenge, even the lowest, with alertness and pleasure.

CHAPTER VI. REFLECTIONS.—How unsearchable are God's judgments, and his ways past finding out! By the most insignificant trifles can he promote his most important purposes. Happy are those who have the sleep of his beloved granted to them: or if their eyes be debarred from rest, can employ their minds in sweet surveys of the annals of redeeming love! The natural law of gratitude, even towards the meanest inferior, is binding upon the conscience. But how little notice earthly princes take of their mean servants and friends, when they often know not whether their important services have been rewarded or not! Nay, often the greatest merits and best services are least rewarded at courts. That modesty and self-denial which are of so great price before God, hinder men's preferment in this world; whilst forward flatterers thrust themselves into honours. The longer we have neglected to recompense favours done us we should the more abundantly reward them at last. But pride and ambition are never satisfied with the most accumulated honours. And it is dangerous for courtiers to have too high an opinion of their own merits, and of their interest with princes, or to presume on more than they really have. Kings ought always to delight in honouring the deserving, and encouraging those that do well. But how confounding is it to proud spirits to be obliged to confer that honour on the distinguished objects of their hatred and contempt, which they had carved out for themselves! Miserable comforters in a day of distress are those who flatter us in the time of our prosperity; and it is in vain to fight against those whom God protects. But none hurry faster downwards than falling favourites at courts. And sad presages of approaching ruin often seize upon sinners before destruction comes upon them to the uttermost.

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—God often strangely animates his enemies in power to encourage his people's requests for favour. And a tender regard for natural life at stake makes us very earnest in supplicating deliverance: and surely then we ought to be much more earnest for the life of our own and others' souls. The most ruinous and wicked projects are often laid to gratify men's sinful lusts. And though persecution of the people of God is not only impious, but even exceedingly detrimental to the state, where nothing can repair the loss of pious and industrious subjects, how often is it practised! Men are ready often to startle at the mention of that very wickedness to which they had given their consent! And sin generally becomes vexatious and burdensome at the last. That is often done thoughtlessly with which, on a moment's cool reflection, we cannot but be shocked. Many seem amazed at the wickedness of others, who overlook the same, or a greater, in themselves. And accomplices in guilt quickly become the bitterest enemies one to another. How dejected in adversity are those who were most proud in prosperity! The most insolent enemies of God's people may quickly be glad to bow at their feet. And every motion creates suspicion against a man whose character is once proved infamous and abandoned. All hands will eagerly help down with falling courtiers; and the ruin of the wicked comes upon them in an instant! Yea, the enemies of God's church are astonishingly taken in their own craftiness, and have their pride brought down, their persecution punished, and their mischief returned on their head.

people and province that would assault them,⁵ both little ones and women, and to ⁶take the spoil of them for a prey.

12 Upon ⁷one day, in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, namely, upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was published⁸ unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to ⁹avenge themselves on their enemies.

14 So the posts⁷ that rode upon mules and camels went out being ¹⁰hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment. And the decree was given at Shushan the palace.

15 ¶ And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in ¹¹royal apparel of blue¹² and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple; and the city of Shushan ¹³rejoiced and was glad.

16 The Jews had light, and gladness, and joy, and honour.

17 And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast and a good day. And many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.⁹

CHAPTER IX.

¹ The Jews (the rulers, for fear of Mordecai, helping them) slay their enemies, with the ten sons of Haman. 12 Ahasuerus, at the request of Esther, granteth another day of slaughter, and causeth Haman's sons to be hanged. 20 The two days of Purim are made festival.

NOW, in the ¹⁴twelfth month, (that is, the month Adar,) on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them, (though it ¹⁵was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them),

2 The Jews ¹⁶gathered themselves together in their cities, throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as sought their hurt:¹ and no man could withstand them; for ¹⁷the fear of them fell upon all people.

3 And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and officers of the king, ¹⁸helped¹ the Jews; because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them.

4 For Mordecai was great in the king's house, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai ¹⁹waxed greater and greater.
